Soviets Continue Space Feats With Eight Launchings

Cosmos Sputniks Soar Beyond Orbital Track Of Space Station

MOSCOW (UPI)—The Soviet Union hurled eight unmanned sputniks high into earth orbit on a single rocket yesterday in a record equalling shotgun launch, the Tass news agency said today.

The Cosmos sputniks soared far beyond the orbital track the Soviets have been using in the Soyuz- Salute space station project and popped into orbit about 900 miles up.

There they joined eight other sputniks, also launched aboard one rocket in April 1970, in what the Soviets describe only as "exploration of outer space."

As usual, Tass did not say exactly what mission was involved. Western intelligence theorized the Cosmos craft include everything from orbiting bombs and spy satellites to weather watchers and communications stations.

"On May 7, eight satellites of the Cosmos series were launched in the Soviet Union, all aboard one booster rocket," Tass said.

Meanwhile U.S. space agency officials set their sights on Mars and the moon today, readying a television robot for launch tonight from Cape Kenney and the moving of the Apollo 15 spaceship to its rocket flight to the moon in July.

Western scientific sources in Moscow said it appeared the 16 high-flying sputniks would be too far out in space to function efficiently as orbital bombs, which are designed to fire nuclear missiles on earth at an electronic signal.

The also said the angle of orbit to the equator was so sharp—74 degrees—that it put the sputniks on the margin of what is considered effective for spy satellites.

The sources said, however, there could be military lessons to be drawn from the strength of the rocket used to life the eight craft aloft—probably a version of the SS-9 intercontinental ballistic missile.

"If it can carry eight sputniks, it can carry eight something elses," the source said.

The sputniks launched Friday were designated Cosmos 411 to 418, Tass said. Those launched a year ago were designated Cosmos 336 to 343.

Exact dimensions of orbit for the new sputniks, as for the old, were 845 to 918 miles above earth at an angle of 74.5 degrees to the equator. One orbit took 115 minutes.

Tito Sets Purge Of His Party

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia — President Tito announced today his regime would carry out purges within the Communist party leadership in the near future. He warned enemies both at home and abroad he has a loaded "rifle" for them.

Tito, addressing the closing session of the four-day congress of Yugoslav "self-managers" said, "We must reorganize the Communist Party and all those who do not deserve being its members should go out from it.

"We shall have a party conference very soon to make order within the party leadership," Tito said. The 280-member conference — scheduled to meet at least once annually — is the highest body of the party between two congresses being held every four years.

The congress of self-managers today approved a resolution demanding that Tito, who turns 79 May 25, be elected President of Yugoslavia for life.

Tito urged some 2,300 delegates from factories, firms and institutions throughout the country to "strengthen self-management as the system on which socialist Yugoslavia is based." In June 1950, the Yugoslav Federal Parliament passed a law on self-management giving workers the decision-taking and profit-sharing rights.

"Outside Yugoslavia and here at home some people say everything will be just as before, Tito only threatens, its an empty rifle," Tito told the congress. "No, this time it will not be an empty rifle, it is loaded, this time we have a lot of ammunition. You should be convinced we shall know how to prevent those who trouble our socialism."

"There are opponents, enemies of our system, inside and outside enemies who oppose our self-managing system. There can be no democracy for them," he said to deafening ovation.

Referring to a Communist party presidium session held in the seculsion of the northern Adriatic Brioni Island April 28-30, Tito said, "We have not revealed everything we discussed at the session. "There was sharp discussion, but finally we reached agreement."

The Brioni meeting of top Communist leaders discussed the serious political and economic situation in which this multinational country finds itself.

Withdrawal Of Dollar Help Asked

BRUSSELS (UPI) — West Germany urged its five partners in the European Common Market today to stop supporting the U.S. dollar under speculative pressure and to float all their currencies along with the Deutschmark.

West German Economics Minister Karl Schiller, meeting with his Common Market counterparts in the Charlemagne Building, said the currencies should be allowed to find their own natural level against the dollar.

Economics and finance ministers of West Germany, France, Italy, the Netherlands, Belgium and Luxemburg met to decide whether to let the German mark float free, as the West Germans are reported to be urging, or to officially set new rates that would in effect devalue the dollar, as the French are demanding.

While the argument raged, American tourists who found themselves having trouble cashing their greenbacks and travelers' checks when when the storm broke last Wednesday were finding the going much easier today—though sometimes more expensive.

Some travelers in West Germany were able to trade their dollars freely for Deutschmarks—but at a more costly rate. Before last Wednesday a dollar would buy 3.66 marks; in some places today it would buy only 3.55 marks or less.

The traditionally polite Spaniards, according to reports from the Costa del Sol along the Mediterranean, were accepting dollars and travelers' checks at the old official rate— but only in limited amounts. They did not specify what the limit was.

When the dollar dropped it reflected the increasing U.S. balance of trade, now standing at more than $10 billion, as well as doubts of foreign investors about the condition of the American economy in the light of unemployment and the Vietnam war.

Viet Cong Breaks The Buddha Truce

SAIGON (UPI)—Communist troops ambushed South Vietnamese infantrymen and detonated a remote-controlled mine against American paratroopers today during a brief truce announced by both sides in the Vietnam War in honor of Buddha's birthday, the U.S. command said.

Two Americans were killed and three wounded at 1:30 p.m. Saigon time—six and a half hours after the Viet Cong said its truce would start—when a mine detonated by radio signal went off while they were on patrol in the northern Central Highlands 300 miles north of Saigon.

The South Vietnamese command reported that a company of the 25th Army of the Repûblic of South Vietnam (ARVN) was ambushed at 9:15 a.m., 75 minutes after the Communist timetable for the truce had taken effect — 30 miles northeast of Saigon. Two ARVN soldiers were killed and five wounded.

Though it was the 2,515th anniversary of the birth of Buddha, the war went on in the neighboring Buddhist countries of Laos and Cambodia. The truce, proclaimed for 48 hours by the Viet Cong and for 24 hours by the allies, followed a day of heavy aerial activity.

U.S. Air Force F4 Phantom jets swept over North Vietnam three times Friday to strafe Communist antiaircraft guns which had fired on them as they flew over Laos, bringing to 35 the number of U.S. "protective reaction" strikes into North Vietnam this year.

The 48-hour Viet Cong truce began at 7 a.m. today and the 24-hour allied truce at noon.

Three formations of B52 bombers dropped at least 270 tons of bombs onto the Communist supply trail complex within three miles south of the Demilitarized Zone and two miles

Only Mrs. Truman and a handful of friends knew who was coming. But they didn't tell the man he came to see.

There were thousands of birthday cards, letters and telegrams.

Industrialist Henry Talge, 80, of Kansas City has sponsored the Truman birthday parties each year since Truman left the White House in 1953. Truman, though, hasn't attended since 1966.

"He gets tired out in large crowds, meeting and greeting everybody," Talge said. "It would be too much of a strain on him."

Each luncheon guest today took home a registered program containing a portrait of Truman. It also pictured Truman with five other presidents—Roosevelt, Eisenhower, Kennedy, Johnson and Nixon. There was a quote too from the late Winston Churchill, who wrote Truman, "you, more

Rogers Sees 'Gap' Closing In Mideast

Concludes Meeting In Israel

ROME (UPI)—U.S. Secretary of State William P. Rogers flew here from Tel Aviv after a one-week peace-seeking mission to the Middle East which he said had helped bring "a narrowing of the gap" between Egypt and Israel.

He said Joseph C. Sisco, assistant secretary of state for Near Eastern Affairs who accompanied him on the trip, will fly to Cairo tonight for further consultations with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

Rogers left Tel Aviv with at least one reported Israeli concession: diplomatic sources said Israel has agreed to permit an Egyptian "presence" on the east bank of the Suez Canal once there is agreement for an Israeli troop pullback and a reopening of the waterway.

A western diplomatic source in Cairo said Sisco's visit "raises our hopes a great deal." He said he assumed Sisco was bringing "meaningful clarifications" on Israel's position regarding the reopening of the Suez Canal as a possible prelude to an overall peace settlement.

U.S. officials said Sisco would present no papers or documents to Sadat or Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad. Rather they said he would discuss Israel's position as outlined to Rogers during his talks in Israel.

The American officials said that among other things Rogers accomplished in Israel was to have impressed Prime Minister Golda Meir and other leaders of the urgency with which the United States views a Middle East settlement.

They said Rogers assured the Israelis of continued U.S. political support in the event of an Egyptian violation of any interim accord to reopen the Suez Canal. It was not clear whether this meant the Nixon administration would commit military power to Israel in the event of direct Soviet involvement in an accord violation.

Rogers left Tel Aviv shortly after 9 a.m. Israeli time and arrived in Rome two hours later for meetings with Pope Paul VI and President Giuseppe Saragat.

The reported key Israeli concession on permitting an Egyptian "presence" across the Suez Canal could lead to fruitful negotiations on reopening the waterway.

The term was left vague for negotiating purposes. Up to now, Egypt has maintained that it must garrison both sides of the canal before it can be reopened to world shipping. Israel has maintained that there must be no Egyptian troops on the east bank of the canal even if Israeli troops leave.

The diplomatic sources said Israel had ruled out the word "troops" but had agreed to some sort of Egyptian "military force"—a term that could include policemen or border guards.

'Patriots' Gather For Capital Rally

The demonstration for a military victory over the Communists in Vietnam was called to counter the 18 days of antiwar protests which came to an end Thursday.

Police estimated that about 1,000 persons assembled to march down Pennsylvania Avenue with McIntire at noontime, but officials said the crowd was growing gradually. A rally on the Washington Monument grounds was planned for the afternoon.

McIntire said his group hoped to outdraw an April 24 antiwar demonstration which attracted a crowd estimated at 175,000 by police. He declined to predict how many would take part in today's event, except to comment: "It's time the patriots outdid the hippies."

The weather bureau forecast scattered showers throughout the day.

McIntire, shortly before the parade, told newsmen that the rain and "fear of the hippies" prevented a larger turnout.

"This rain has definitely hurt us," he said. "A number of our people turned back because of it."

He said he plans bigger marches in the future.

"We're going to fire up the whole country," McIntire predicted. "It will be the religious emphasis on God that will save this country."

Washington police added about 300 men for duty today, most of them assigned to the parade route for traffic control.

The crowd was made up of an assortment of war veterans, the elderly, laborers, and families, many with young children. Most of the participants came by charter bus from suburban Maryland and Virginia communities.

They carried placards reading "Stop Red China," "Faith is the Victory," "Victory Now," and "Free Calley." American and confederate flags were abundantly in evidence. Some of the marchers carried "Better Dead Than Red" posters.

Strikes Turn Rome Into Paralyzed City

ROME (UPI)—An epidemic of strikes and shutdowns left Rome a city without marriages, funerals or parking tickets today and 1.3 million Romans went without water.

Much of the normal life of the eternal city, now jammed with tourists, was paralyzed or disrupted by a continuing strike by 23,350 municipal workers seeking more money and reforms in the promotion system.

Walkouts now in their fourth day by grave diggers again prevented burial of the 60 to 70 persons who die every day in Rome. Marriages, tax collections and other official business requiring documents were suspended because of a city clerks strike.

Garbage was piled higher than cars in some streets because of a sanitation strike and motorists enjoyed a ticket free day because of a strike by 450 municipal police.

But perhaps most disrupting of all was a four-day water shutdown in one-half of the city beginning at 11 a.m. Officials closed water supplies to allow for connection of a new aqueduct from the Peschiera river to the central city reservoir. It is the longest such shutdown in Rome since World War II.

Stores reported record sales of bottle mineral water and throwaway paper plates and cups and authorities sent tank trucks cruising the streets with emergency water supplies.

More strikes were scheduled to start Sunday by hotel workers in Rome and elswwhere, a particularly hard blow for tourists pouring into Rome for the summer season.

The strike, called over money and working hours, meant patrons of even such well known hotels as the Grand, Excelsior and Hilton, where U.S. Secretary of State William P. Rogers was staying, would go without room service or bellboys for the next 48 hours. The strike also involved telephone operators, doormen and desk clerks.

Also hurting the rich tourist trade was a series of strikes by ground crews at Leonardo Da Vinci airport. The dispute there led Kuwait airlines to halt its flights into the airport Friday with 60 other international carriers threatening to follow suit.

Five Sentenced On Bomb Plots

NEW YORK (UPI) — Four-year prison terms, the maximum sentences, were ordered Friday for three members of the Weathermen who admitted plotting bombings.

State Supreme Court Justice Harold Birns ordered the four-year terms for Richard Robin Palmer, 40, described as the leader of the group, Sharon Krebs, 33, and Martin Lewis, 25.

Claudia Conine and Joyce Plecha, also Weathermen members, were sentenced to three years.

McGovern's Plan To Generate Jobs

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Sen. George McGovern Friday proposed an "economic reconstruction" by first cutting military spending in half so the country can deal in life rather than the "destructiveness of war."

The South Dakota senator, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for president said his proposal would generate jobs for 5 million Americans.

"This rain has definitely hurt us," he said. "A number of our people turned back because of it."

He said he plans bigger marches in the future.

"We're going to fire up the whole country," McIntire predicted. "It will be the religious emphasis on God that will save this country."

Washington police added about 300 men for duty today, most of them assigned to the parade route for traffic control.

The crowd was made up of an assortment of war veterans, the elderly, laborers, and families, many with young children. Most of the participants came by charter bus from suburban Maryland and Virginia communities.

They carried placards reading "Stop Red China," "Faith is the Victory," "Victory Now," and "Free Calley." American and confederate flags were abundantly in evidence. Some of the marchers carried "Better Dead Than Red" posters.

Strikes Turn Rome Into Paralyzed City

ROME (UPI)—An epidemic of strikes and shutdowns left Rome a city without marriages, funerals or parking tickets today and 1.3 million Romans went without water.

Much of the normal life of the eternal city, now jammed with tourists, was paralyzed or disrupted by a continuing strike by 23,350 municipal workers seeking more money and reforms in the promotion system.

Walkouts now in their fourth day by grave diggers again prevented burial of the 60 to 70 persons who die every day in Rome. Marriages, tax collections and other official business requiring documents were suspended because of a city clerks strike.

Garbage was piled higher than cars in some streets because of a sanitation strike and motorists enjoyed a ticket free day because of a strike by 450 municipal police.

But perhaps most disrupting of all was a four-day water shutdown in one-half of the city beginning at 11 a.m. Officials closed water supplies to allow for connection of a new aqueduct from the Peschiera river to the central city reservoir. It is the longest such shutdown in Rome since World War II.

Stores reported record sales of bottle mineral water and throwaway paper plates and cups and authorities sent tank trucks cruising the streets with emergency water supplies.

More strikes were scheduled to start Sunday by hotel workers in Rome and elswwhere, a particularly hard blow for tourists pouring into Rome for the summer season.

The strike, called over money and working hours, meant patrons of even such well known hotels as the Grand, Excelsior and Hilton, where U.S. Secretary of State William P. Rogers was staying, would go without room service or bellboys for the next 48 hours. The strike also involved telephone operators, doormen and desk clerks.

Also hurting the rich tourist trade was a series of strikes by ground crews at Leonardo Da Vinci airport. The dispute there led Kuwait airlines to halt its flights into the airport Friday with 60 other international carriers threatening to follow suit.

McGovern's Plan To Generate Jobs

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Sen. George McGovern Friday proposed an "economic reconstruction" by first cutting military spending in half so the country can deal in life rather than the "destructiveness of war."

The South Dakota senator, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for president said his proposal would generate jobs for 5 million Americans.

Five Sentenced On Bomb Plots

NEW YORK (UPI) — Four-year prison terms, the maximum sentences, were ordered Friday for three members of the Weathermen who admitted plotting bombings.

State Supreme Court Justice Harold Birns ordered the four-year terms for Richard Robin Palmer, 40, described as the leader of the group, Sharon Krebs, 33, and Martin Lewis, 25.

Claudia Conine and Joyce Plecha, also Weathermen members, were sentenced to three years.

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

To Visit France

MOSCOW (UPI)—Leonid I. Brezhnev will visit France this October in his first venture outside the Soviet bloc since he assumed leadership of the Soviet Communist party in 1964, diplomatic sources said.

Satchmo Home

Mrs. Armstrong reported Friday her husband was released Thursday from Beth Israel Hospital after a sevenweek stay with a heart condition and a lung ailment. At one point, Armstrong, 70, was on the critical list.

Trial In Fall

SEATTLE (UPI)—The trial of San Francisco Mayor Joseph L. Alioto and three former Washington State officials on bribery charges will probably not get under way until next fall.

This became clear Friday when U.S. District Court Judge William Beeks announced that the pretrial conference has been postponed a week until May 21.

'Real Cost' Of Food Drops To A New Low

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The "real cost" of food to American consumers dropped to another new low early this year as income gains outpaced rises in food prices, an Agriculture Department report showed yesterday.

The "real cost" is the percentage of total consumer income spent to pay grocery and restaurant food bills.

A "food situation" summary published by department economists noted that despite sharp increases for some food products, including fish and fats and oils early this year, retail prices for all foods in the January-March quarter were up only 0.8 per cent from a year earlier.

At the same time, the report said, after-tax personal incomes rose 2.5 per cent over the fourth quarter of 1970 and were 7.5 per cent above the first quarter of last year.

Candy Beads Are Recalled

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Candy "love beads" reportedly causing illness in children who eat them have been recalled by the Federal Food and Drug Administration.

The distributor voluntarily agreed to stop sale of the produce pending analysis by Federal laboratories, said Dr. Gerald A. Heidbrder, County health officer.

The multi-colored sugar necklaces manufactured in Hong Kong apparently made four children in Los Angeles and another 10 in Springfield, Ill., sick.

Mother Of Year

NEW YORK (UPI)—Betty Anthony Zahn of Oklahoma City Friday was named American mother of the year which was not a surprise to her four children.

One son, Anthony, 31, an Oklahoma City attorney, said "It just confirmed what we always thought."

Mrs. Zahn's children had nominated their mother, but did not know she had won until it was announced at a luncheon of the American Mothers Committee at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. She was "deeply grateful and very humble."

Cheer Queen

VANCOUVER, B.C. (UPI)—Thousands of British Columbians cheered Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip Friday as they toured Vancouver, Burnaby and New Westminster setting a hectic pace in the near-80 degree weather that belied the stateliness of the visit.

While Princess Anne stayed aboard the Royal Yacht Brittania, suffering from a stomach ailment, the 45-year-old monarch on the fifth day of a 10-day tour of the province greeted newly sworn-in Canadian citizens and took a royal salute from the Ancient and Honorable Hyack Anvil Battery.

Al Capp Charged In Morals Case

EAU CLAIRE, Wis. (UPI)—Cartoonist Al Capp, creator of "L'il Abner" has been named in an arrest warrant charging he violated moral laws in an alleged incident involving an Eau Claire State University coed last month.

Eau Claire County District Attorney Lawrence Durning, a Republican, obtained the warrant from Judge Thomas H. Barland Friday. It charged Alfred Gerald Kaplin, 61, better known as Al Capp, with sodomy, attempted adultery and indecent exposure. The charges were brought by a 20-year-old married coed.

Durning's office said extradition proceedings will be started to return Capp to Wisconsin to face the charges.

The incidents allegedly occurred April 1 when Capp, who has become a popular college lecturer, appeared at Eau Claire State to speak.

Capp's attorney, Alvin Hochberg, said in Boston the cartoonist entered Peter Bent Brigham Hospital Friday morning. Hochberg issued a statement from Capp which read:

"The allegations are entirely untrue. I have been warned for some time now the revolutionary left would try to stop me by any means from speaking out on campuses. My home has been vandalized and I have been physically threatened. This is a part of their campaign to stop me. Those who have faith in me know that I will not be stopped."

Capp, who lives in Cambridge, Mass., returned Thursday from Harrison, Ark., where his son, Kim, lives. Capp was relased from Boone County Hospital in Harrison Wednesday after four days of treatment for exhaustion.

'Dump Nixon' Strategy Session Set

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A group of liberal Republican plans to meet in Washington May 16 to lay the groundwork for a national "Dump Nixon" organization, UPI learned today.

Charles Goodell, the former New York senator, and Reps. Donald W. Riegle Jr. of Michigan and Paul N. McCloskey Jr. of California are the leaders of the group. They called the meeting.

Other Republican congressmen, major GOP contributors and state party leaders dissatisfied with Nixon administration policies are expected to attend the closed-door strategy session.

PRIVATE HOME

One of the group's leaders told UPI persons from around the country will attend the afternoon meeting, to be held in a Washington home.

"A lot of prominent republicans will be attending the meeting, which will be a fairly national representation of the party," the source said. "A few party leaders will send representatives in their place."

The conference has been in the planning stages for more than a month. Goodell told a news conference in March that Republicans opposed to Nixon's domestic and Vietnam policies should begin making preparations to oppose him in next year's primaries.

SEEK SUPPORT

Since then, Goodell, McCloskey and Riegle have been seeking national support for their insurgent effort. All have been harsh critics of the Nixon Vietnam policy.

Goodell was given the cold shoulder by the President last fall when the administration tacitly endorsed Conservative James L. Buckley, who won the election in a three-way race.

McCloskey has repeatedly expressed his intentions, much the way Sen. Eugene McCarthy did before his bid against Lyndon Johnson, to challenge Nixon in the New Hampshire primary next March unless a better known Republican comes forward to oppose the President.

McCloskey has said New York Mayor John V. Lindsay would be an ideal candidate.

POLICE RESTRAIN PROTESTER

A young antiwar demonstrator is restrained by a Seattle policeman during a protest march in Seattle by some 1,200 on behalf of activist Leslie Bacon of Atherton, Calif., who is being retained as a "material witness" in the bombing of the U.S. Capitol. The protest started out peacefully yesterday but police broke up the crowd when it threatened to disrupt rush hour traffic. In related action a federal judge says he will rule early next week on a move to have Miss Bacon freed on grounds of illegal electronic surveillance by the government.

'Selling Of The Pentagon' Wins Top Emmy Award

NEW YORK (UPI) — "The Selling of the Pentagon," CBS' controversial television documentary blasted by government officials from the vice president down, won the 1971 Emmy award yesterday for outstanding achievement in news-documentary programming.

The award, television's highest honor, was one of several Emmys announced in New York and Los Angeles. Many of Friday's awards dealt with television journalism and daytime programming.

Most of the entertainment awards will be presented tomorrow on nationally televised ceremonies.

Sales Report Is Brighter Once Again

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Nixon administration hails a commerce department report that retail sales increased in March for the fourth consecutive month as a sign consumers are gaining confidence in the economy.

But the report came Friday but a few hours after the Labor Department announced unemployment edged up to 6.1 per cent of the labor force during April.

The increase of one-tenth of 1 cent was the second consecutive monthly rise, and another blow to President Nixon's hopes of ridding himself of a damaging political issue before next year's presidential election.

At Hot Springs, Va., a panel of economic consultants to the Business Council, an organization of leading corporation executives, predicted unemployment would remain higher than 5 per cent for most of the election year. Nixon's goal is to reduce the jobless rate to 4.5 per cent by mid-1972.

More To Hike Price Of Steel

PITTSBURGH (UPI)—Bethlehem Steel Corp., Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., and Granite City (Ill.) Steel Corp. have joined four other major steel producers in price increases set two days ago by U.S. Steel Corp. on big volume flat steel products.

The three firms announced their increases Friday.

The increases, ranging from $8.50 to $13 per ton, will take effect June 16 and July 1, and will raise manufacturing costs for automobiles, appliances, buildings and some industrial products.

Other firms adopting the increases were Reupublic, Jones & Laughlin, and Armco.

'Backlash' Seen In Reagan Tax Leak

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) —California Republican leaders expressed confidence today that Gov. Ronald Reagan's income tax episode won't damage him politically. One forecast a "sympathy backlash."

Republicans in the Legislature and top statewide GOP officials declared support for the governor. The state Franchis Tax Board opened an investigation to discover who leaked his confidenital tax-free status.

"I definitely think there will be a backlash of sympathy for this week's political attacks by Democrats on the governor," predicted state GOP Chairman Putnam Livermore. "It's ridiculous, all this crying over one year's tax."

Meanwhile Sen. Dennis E. Carpenter of Newport Beach, immediate past chairman of the state Republican party, sent a letter to Attorney General Evelle J. Younger urging him to investigate the case.

In the legislature, Assemblyman Robert Monagan, Assembly Republican leader, said, "once people wade through the chaff the Democrats are putting out and get to the facts they'll see that the governor acted okay."

In Fresno, a group of college students announced plans to collect canned food and rummage clothing for Reagan because he had "fallen on hard times."

The Fresno-based "Tax Rebellion Committee" offered the governor an honorary membership, calling him "a true tax rebel."

The student broadcaster who first publicly announced that Reagan paid no state income tax for 1970 refused to reveal her sources of information and rejected a state investigator's request for a personal interview.

"I will not jeopardize my credibility as a journalist in the future by disclosing the source of my information," said Rosemarie King, a Sacramento State College government journalism major.

Mrs. King broadcast over the college radio station April 30 a rumor that Reagan hadn't paid any state tax on his 1970 income. She is a part-time, unsalaried intern for the Senate Democratic caucus.

Reagan at first said he couldn't remember whether he paid a tax but later his office announced he did not because of investment losses. He reluctantly announced Thursday he had paid $91,128 in state income taxes since becoming governor and also paid a federal tax for last year. He refused to make public his investment "reverses."

Fears Growing For Row Boat Pair; No Contact

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—John Fairfax and Sylvia Cook haven't been heard from since they started rowing across the Pacific for Australia 13 days ago —and their radio contact on shore is getting worried.

Ivan Sharpe, a free lance writer, said Friday Fairfax has missed three scheduled radio transmissions since leaving San Francisco Bay April 26 on an 8,000-mile, 10-month trip to Sydney.

"I think there's only two possibilities," Sharpe said. "Either they have drowned, or their radio is out of order. I'm inclined to think it's radio trouble."

Meets The Press

PHNOM PENH (UPI)—Cambodia's ailing premier Lon Nol met the press today in a rare public appearance that dispelled persistent rumors he had suffered a relapse of his Feb. 8 stroke.

Although he walked with the aid of a cane, was unable to lift his left arm and occasionally showed a facial tic, Lon Nol spoke clearly and in a normal voice.

What are your ideas about the so-called generation gap?

THE INDEPENDENT-JOURNAL
"RAP SESSION
with
Youth & the Over-Thirties"

CONTEST ☆ $800.00 in cash prizes

For the best letters on how "you" think Youth and the Over-Thirties may reach a better understanding of one another.

This I-J contest is your opportunity to give your candid opinion about the relationship between youth and older people today . . . the conflicts, the life styles, the differences in values, the areas of agreement. And most essentially, to present your ideas on how a better rapport between youth and the over-thirties may best be reached.

Actually it is 4 contests for 4 separate age groups. Letters will be judged not for literary merit but for content . . . for ideas which offer constructive solutions. Put your creative thinking cap on, read the rules, and write a letter. Ideas are now in session.

4 SEPARATE CONTESTS FOR 4 SEPARATE AGE GROUPS
Select your age group, at right, Prizes are the same for each group. Final judging will be by an independent jury.

AGE GROUPS	1st PRIZE	2nd PRIZE
1. 14-17	$125	$75

In Fresno, a group of college students announced plans to collect canned food and rummage clothing for Reagan because he had "fallen on hard times."

The Fresno-based "Tax Rebellion Committee" offered the governor an honorary membership, calling him "a true tax rebel."

The student broadcaster who first publicly announced that Reagan paid no state income tax for 1970 refused to reveal her sources of information and rejected a state investigator's request for a personal interview.

"I will not jeopardize my credibility as a journalist in the future by disclosing the source of my information," said Rosemarie King, a Sacramento State College government journalism major.

Mrs. King broadcast over the college radio station April 30 a rumor that Reagan hadn't paid any state tax on his 1970 income. She is a part-time, unsalaried intern for the Senate Democratic caucus.

Reagan at first said he couldn't remember whether he paid a tax but later his office announced he did not because of investment losses. He reluctantly announced Thursday he had paid $91,128 in state income taxes since becoming governor and also paid a federal tax for last year. He refused to make public his investment "reverses."

What are your ideas about the so-called generation gap?

"RAP SESSION
with

CONTEST ☆$800.00 in cash prizes

For the best letters on how "you" think Youth and the Over-Thirties may reach a better understanding of one another.

This I-J contest is your opportunity to give your candid opinion about the relationship between youth and older people today . . . the conflicts, the life styles, the differences in values, the areas of agreement. And most essentially, to present your ideas on how a better rapport between youth and the over-thirties may best be reached.

Actually it is 4 contests for 4 separate age groups. Letters will be judged not for literary merit but for content . . . for ideas which offer constructive solutions. Put your creative thinking cap on, read the rules, and write a letter. Ideas are now in session.

4 SEPARATE CONTESTS FOR 4 SEPARATE AGE GROUPS
Select your age group, at right, Prizes are the same for each group. Final judging will be by an independent jury.

1. 14-17	$125	$75
2. 18-21	$125	$75
3. 22-30	$125	$75
4. OVER 30	$125	$75

ENTER NOW. FOLLOW THESE SIMPLE RULES

- Contest open to all age groups shown at right; I-J employees and members of their families not eligible
- To enter, write letter of 300 words or less stating how you think youth and the over-thirties may reach a better understanding of one another. Letters must be typed or handprinted for legibility. Judging based on content rather than literary skill.
- Important: put your name, address, at top left. Put your "age group" at top right. Select the group that applies to you: 14-17 years; 18-21, 22-30; over 30. Head your letter "Youth & the Over-Thirties" Contest. Deadline postmarked by midnight, May 22.
- Prizes, judging: 1st Prize $125 cash, 2nd Prize $75 awarded to winners of each of the 4 age groups. Judging by independent committee; all decisions final. Entries become property of Independent-Journal. Don't wait, enter early. Your letter may be published with the feature interviews prior to contest ending.

GOLDEN HINDE TO SAIL AGAIN

This replica of Sir Francis Drake's fabled ship which anchored at Drake's Bay in June 1579 on its voyage around the globe, is expected to sail into San Francisco Bay in the spring of 1973. The Golden Hinde II, designed by San Rafael architect Loring C. Norgaard, will weigh 100 tons and measure 102 feet in length. Its two decks will be lined with 18 cannons. Work on the replica is to begin immediately in England, Albert Elledge of Harbor Tours has announced.

Shoreline Trustees To Discuss Budget

Shoreline Unified School District trustees, meeting at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the district administration office, will discuss a tentative $1.196 million budget for the coming school year.

The proposed budget does not include pay hikes requested by teachers whose salaries will also come before the board for discussion and possible approval. Teachers are asking for raises from 10 to 13 per cent over current salaries.

Supt. Charles A. McCully said the tentative budget includes step increases for teachers but not the pay hikes requested. The budget also includes $15,000 to start a homemaking class at Tomales High School, Cully said.

Cully said a contract will be awarded to Barnum, Mau and Folsom of Sacramento for architectural planning of elementary school facilities. The 267 elementary students now attend classes in three permanent classrooms and eight portable classes.

The architectural firm is expected to provide alternative plans for additions to the current facilities as well as plans for a new building, Cully said.

Cully said that if plans are later approved by the board, a bond election will be held to finance construction. The architects would then receive 8 per cent of construction costs, he said. If the project is dropped, Cully said, the firm will receive up to $1,500 for its work.

McGrath To Preside At Discussion

Dr. Thomas H. McGrath, president of Sonoma State College, will preside Monday over a discussion among students, faculty and the public on development of the area surrounding the Rohnert Park campus.

The meeting will be at 11 a.m. in Room 119 of Ives Hall.

Taking part besides McGrath will be Raymond Varley, vice chancellor at the University of California at Santa Barbara; Mel Pedersen of the Sonoma County Planning Department; James W. Rogers, a real estate man and a Rohnert Park city councilman; Paul W. Selfen, Cotati City manager; Charles Rinehart of the college faculty; Steve Moore, a student at Sonoma State, and Nore Thiesfeld of the executive dean's office at the college.

Royal Prankster Tricks Airmen With Shoe Gag

A spokesman at the Royal Air Force college here, where the heir to the British throne is in training, said Thursday that on April 1, the Prince had a message read over the public address system requesting anyone with a particular make of exclusive shoes to turn them in for inspection of possible heel defects.

No manufacturer's representative ever turned up, but those who complied went without their shoes for three days.

Dagger Duel Is Fatal To Woman

CHILPANCINGO, Mexico (UPI) — Marina Marino, 38, settled a feud with sister-in-law Irene Nava, 40, by knifing her to death in a duel with daggers, Guerrero state police said yesterday.

"Frankly, I couldn't stand my sister-in-law," Mrs. Marino told police. "When I saw her washing clothes at the village well, I challenged her to a duel without seconds or witnesses."

Mrs. Marino said Mrs. Nava selected the weapons —curved daggers —and the place for Thursday's encounter, a field about 12 miles north of this state capital.

Police said Mrs. Nava was knifed eleven times. Mrs. Marino, wounded twice, was charged with homicide.

Cigarette, Highway Tax Split

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — Cigarette tax and highway users taxes portioned out to Marin County, its cities and Southern Sonoma County cities for April have been reported by State Controller Houston I. Flournoy.

Marin County's share of the cigarette tax apportionment was $4,838.37. The cities received: San Rafael, $16,560.38; Novato, $7,166.17; Corte Madera, $3,587.01; Mill Valley, $3,281.67; San Anselmo, $3,072.90; Larkspur, $2,546.87; Sausalito, $2,505.37; Fairfax, $1,526.17; Tiburon, $1,513.45; Ross, $476.48, and Belvedere, $467.82.

Petaluma received $7,239.46; Rohnert Park, $1,337.13, and Cotati, $437.86.

Marin County received $127,580.46 in the April distribution of highway user revenues. The cities received: San Rafael, $26,191; Novato, $20,916.61; San Anselmo, $9,022.59; Mill Valley, $8,963.70; Larkspur, $7,339.23; Corte Madera, $6,119.72; Fairfax, $5,469.27; Tiburon, $4,508.48; Sausalito, $4,474.74; Ross, $2,214.38, and Belvedere, $2,119.76.

Petaluma received $18,450.97; Rohnert Park, $4,523.15 and Rohnert Park, $1,319.69.

Job Description To Be Discussed

A job description for the proposed administrative position of director of research and development in the Tamalpais High School District will be considered Monday at 8 p.m. by the district board meeting in the Redwood High School faculty lounge.

The position, which consolidates the duties of three of the four administrative positions eliminated by the board on Monday, is part of a test of district reorganization.

The board refused to authorize the new position when it scrapped the others because no job description had been presented.

The board also will discuss the proposed state-wide property tax and the financial trends of the district.

Fund Set Up For Arrested Draft Foes

The governing board of the Associated Students of the College of Marin voted yesterday to contribute $200 in a defense fund being established for 37 anti-war demonstrators arrested Wednesday at the San Rafael office of the Selective Service.

Student Body President Steven C. Banks yesterday confirmed the action but declined to discuss it in detail. "The Independent-Journal doesn't write things the way we like," he said "You leave out words."

Other sources at the college said the board voted 8 to 3 in favor of contributing student funds for the demonstrators.

The protesters were arrested Wednesday afternoon for unlawful assembly after a peaceful three hour sit-in at the draft board.

All were released on their promise to appear next week in Marin Municipal Court.

Sentencing Set After Guilty Plea In Theft

Terry Lee Grinner, 19, of Marin City, has pleaded guilty in Marin Superior Court to a charge of burglarizing an Almonte residence on Dec. 1. 1969.

Following his plea, a charge of conspiracy against him was dismissed by Judge E. Warren McGuire at the request of the district attorney's office. Grinner is to be sentenced June 21.

He and three other Marin City youths were arrested after sheriff's deputies staked out a house which had been burglarized earlier in the day. They were nabbed when they came back to the house, apparently to pick up hidden loot.

The other youths were sentenced earlier for their parts in the burglary.

Teachers, Parents Support Librarian

Teachers and parents yesterday rallied to the defense of a Larkspur School District librarian who received a termination notice two months ago, just before she was to get tenure.

Judith Ann Houck, librarian at Henry C. Hall and San Clemente schools is fighting the dismissal before Paul A. Winton, a hearing officer from the State Office of Administrative Procedure.

Rae L. Anderson, Miss Houck's attorney, declared he has affidavits from the entire faculty at Henry C. Hall School and from 80 per cent of the faculty at San Clemente School, supporting Miss Houck as a competent librarian serving the schools efficiently.

Assistant County Counsel Richard V. Godino, representing the school district, yesterday called three witnesses who charged that Miss Houck was tardy with making reports, made errors in card cataloguing, and did not use enough initiative and aggressiveness to promote the library's services.

The witnesses were Supt. Milton S. Cohen; Robert Johnson, principal of San Clemente School, and Barbara Dillon, district librarian who was hired on Aug. 1, 1968, the same time that Miss Houck was hired.

Mrs. Dillon testified that Miss Houck did not devote enough time cataloguing and reviewing books, her card files were sometimes out of sequence, and she did not use initiative to "sell" library programs and services to teachers.

Under cross-examination, Mrs. Dillon acknowledged that criticism of Miss Houck came from San Clemente School, not Henry C. Hall. Principal Mervin Gootherts of Hall School wrote favorable evaluation reports on Miss Houck, said Mrs. Dillon.

"Why would she fail at San Clemente and not at Hall?" asked attorney Anderson. "I don't know," said Mrs. Dillon. "She indicated to me she couldn't get with it at San Clemente."

A parade of witnesses began refuting those charges late yesterday, but only four got on the stand before the hearing was recessed until 10 a.m. May 18 in the planning commission chambers.

The first teacher to defend Miss Houck was Gene Ng of San Clemente School. He testified that Miss Houck was a capable librarian who used initiative to present valuable programs for his sixth graders.

Three library clerks also testified that Miss Houck was competent and innovative.

Attorney Anderson said he has about six more witnesses and about 40 affidavits to present, all attesting to Miss Houck's competence.

than any other man, have saved Western civilization."

Talge says Truman is in good health, his mind alert and he still retains all the candor that gave him his nickname of "give-em hell, Harry."

Only this week Truman turned down an honor he once said he would have rather had than to have served as president —the Congressional Medal of Honor.

Congress had planned to present Truman the medal today. But the former President wrote his congressman Thursday saying, in part: "I do not consider that I have done anything which should be the reason for any award, congressional or otherwise.

Store Shop Plans Will Be Studied

A plan to turn an old furniture store in Mill Valley into a department store with 15 shops will be discussed by the Mill Valley Planning Commission when it meets at 8 p.m. Monday at city hall.

Owner W. W. Kirsch is asking the commission for a variance to install 30 parking spaces where 118 are required by the zoning ordinance.

The department store would be located in the old Brown's Furniture Store at 38 Miller Avenue, where plans for a 400-seat restaurant-bar were squelched by the city council last year.

Also on the agenda is a request by Humphrey O'Driscoll, of 35 Locke Lane, to have a carport built to the side property line where a five-foot setback is required.

O'Driscoll, who already has built the carport without city permission, either must obtain a variance or demolish the structure.

FIRE CALLS

YESTERDAY:

1:44 p.m., Tamalpais Valley — Smoke check at Princeton and California avenues; no result.

9:12 p.m., Fairfax — False alarm at 38 Taylor Drive.

Three Drunken Driving Sentences

Three persons have been sentenced in Marin Municipal Court for drunken driving.

Sentenced Wednesday were:

Teofanes Murillo Lopez, 28, of Richmond, arrested March 27 on Highway 101, who was placed on probation for six months and fined $302.

Sidney William Eloto III, 35, of 737 Francisco Boulevard, San Rafael, arrested Feb. 20, 1970, on Highway 101, who was placed on probation for three years, fined $302 and given 14 days in jail.

Nicholas Korpintinos, 35, of San Francisco, arrested April 26 on Highway 101, who was placed on probation for six months and fined $302.

Driver Hurt; Blacks Out

A Greenbrae man was injured yesterday when he blacked out while driving on the Richardson Bay Bridge, the California Highway Patrol reported.

Claude K. Powers, 61, of 51 Corte Toluca was taken to Kaiser Foundation Hospital in San Rafael, where he was treated for a cut forehead.

LAW IN ACTION

From the State Bar Of California

Beware Of Phone Sales

The government prosecuted Randy Ruggs for mail fraud. He had sold cheap carpets at high prices. Once a customer had bought a carpet, andy told him he could get it free by referring others to Randy for a "commission."

By displaying his new carpet, a customer could get his friends to buy similar carpets, or so Randy said.

The court sentenced Randy to jail. Under the law a scheme for a "geometric progression" of sales is fraudulent. It would be impossible for every customer to get a free rug by such a scheme. If he could, the company would go broke. "In a scheme like this, time alone will show that the company is not profitable — unless it does not keep its promises," said the court.

In 1968 the California legislature banned "referral" commissions on car sales. No seller can lawfully get or attempt to get someone to buy a car at a discount or commission based on some future event, like someone else buying another car. Salesmen had abused this way of getting the buyer to tip them off about new buyers.

Later, the law banned this sales method for all installment sales. It forbids all so-called rebates, discounts, commissions, and the like based on the buyer's sales, or tips leading to the seller making a sale.

Beware of sales handled by mail or telephone if the seller is to deliver the contract later, especially if the purchase calls for installments over a period of time.

California closely regulates installment contract sales. Such an agreement must set forth all the terms, and the buyer has a right to a complete copy without any blanks when he completes his purchase. The contract is invalid if it violates this act.

Out-of-state salesmen often negotiate by mail or telephone. Purchases made through out-of-state credit card companies may involve the laws of several states.

While federal laws may provide some consumer protection if money is paid out, this protection is only as good as the solvency of the seller. (Note: California lawyers offer this column so you may know about our laws.)

Other Thailand-based superfortresses bombed the Ho Chi Minh Trail in Laos and Communist positions in Cambodia in support of South Vietnamese efforts to clear Highway 7.

The allies specified that their truce period would not apply to operations in the two other nations of Indochina, Laos and Cambodia. The Communists made no reference to Laos or Cambodia in their truce announcement, but neither they nor the North Vietnamese have ever admitted having any troops there.

Allied troops in South Vietnam were under orders not to fire unless fired upon during the truce. But with aircraft freed from missions in Vietnam, the air war in Laos and Cambodia might actually stepped up, military sources said.

Today's truce was the 20th to be proclaimed in the 10 years of the Vietnam War. All previous truces have been marked by claims of numerous violations on both sides.

75 Courses On Summer School Slate

The Novato Unified School District's 1971 secondary summer school program will offer 75 courses ranging from motorcycle training to star gazing to basic courses.

The program will operate from June 21 through July 30 for students from the seventh through 12th grades, reported Edward J. Kraft, program director.

By combining the junior and senior high school students, a more extensive and flexible program has been created, Kraft said.

Kraft is scheduled to present the program at every public and private school in the district during the next two weeks.

The elementary summer school, under the direction of Richard C. Melendy, will be from June 21 through July 23, at Rancho School with the hours to be 8 a.m. to 12:15 p.m.

Session On Housing Set

The Corte Madera citizens' housing committee will meet with the Ecumenical Council Association for Housing in Marin Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at the Co-op meeting room at 71 Tamal Vista Boulevard.

Discussion will include housing opportunities in Corte Madera and the citizen's role in creating more.

Following the joint meeting, the housing committee will continue with its planning of a housing element for the town's general plan.

Plea From Commercial Fishermen

Clayton Lewis, Tomales Bay artist and commercial fisherman, asked the association to oppose a bill by Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael which would ban commercial fishing on the bay.

Lewis, according to association president Howard Waite, told the group that those with economic interests in the bay are in a better position to be effective in watching over its welfare because their livelihood relies on it.

"We were not impressed," Waite said today of the arguments for fishing in the bay. He said fishermen were "netting fish indiscriminately" and "waiting for the government to take care of pollution and stock the bay."

However, Waite said, the group still has not taken a stand for or against commercial fishing. He said the association will seek further information from the University of the Pacific Marin Laboratory at Dillon Beach.

For the first time in three years, Waite reported, the association again is looking into the feasibility of joining the North Marin Water District. Point Reyes and Inverness Park recently joined, and Waite said Inverness residents are dissatisfied with current rates and service. The town will also look into setting up its own water system, Waite said.

Boulevard Alignment On Agenda

The alignment of Tiburon Boulevard, subject of three months of committee meetings and many public hearings, will come once more before the Tiburon City Council, meeting at 7:30 p.m. Monday at city hall.

The council will decide if it supports the findings of the joint balanced transportation committee, which recommended a four-lane highway from Reed Ranch Road to Avenida Miraflores and a two-lane parkway from that point to downtown Tiburon.

Some residents have objected to the proposal, saying the road will block access to Richardson Bay.

Also on the agenda is consideration of a resolution urging a statewide ban on non-returnable bottles, a progress report on the improving the Richardson Bay pathway and yet another hearing — perhaps the last — on a controversial house at 6 Rolling Hills Road, built by developer Ralph C. Noah.

Scattered through the earth's 300 million cubic miles of seawater are an estimated 20 billion tons of uranium, says National Geographic.

BUFFALO ROMANCE

U. S. Ambassador Plays Matchmaker

NEW DELHI (UPI) —Benjy, the VIB (Very Important Buffalo), traveled 15,000 miles from South Dakota to New Delhi to join a lonely female of his species.

Benjy, 10 months old, weighs only 600 pounds now. But when fully grown, the shaggy groom will weigh about 2,000 pounds and sport a long, black beard, just as did his ancestors which once roamed America's Wild West in huge numbers.

The average life span of a buffalo in the wild is from 15 to 20 years, but the prospective newlyweds can look forward to as many as 30 years together in their protected environment at New Delhi's zoo, considered to be one of the best in the world today.

Benjy's already grown-up consort, Jessie, became a widow a few years ago when she lost her mate in the local zoo.

"I do not normally act as a go-between for prospective mates of non-human species," Keating said, "but it was disturbing to learn that Jessie was living alone so many miles away from home."

The matchmaking called into action the U.S. State Department, the National Zoo in Washington, D.C., the Great Plains Zoo in Sioux Falls, S.D., and the Indian government.

"Everyone played a magnificent role in bringing this match to consummation," Ambassador Keating said. "There were moments when we were ready to give up."

At first, Keating recalled, there was difficulty in finding a specimen worthy of the Delhi Zoo. "But the State Department was intrepid," he said. "It was one of the Department's finest hours when it cabled me that it had found young Benjy."

Then came the problem of shipment. Bison, for sensible reasons, aren't permitted to fly on commercial airlines.

But that's when someone recalled the sheep shipment. The Indian government had chartered a jet cargoliner to transport sheep from Texas to Delhi. With permission from the Indian government, Benjy found a berth in the New Delhi-bound aircraft.

The Benjy-Jessie formal wedding took place on Feb. 18, when Ambassador Keating opened the trap-door of a cage to let Benjy charge out and say howdy to Jessie.

"Both look overwhelmed, and Jessie is busy showing Benjy round," Delhi's Zoo Director C.L. Bhatia said.

OBITURIES

Lewis G. Pepper Dies At 81

Lewis G. Pepper, son of earlyday Bolinas residents who lived all his life in the small West Marin town, died yesterday in a local hospital after a long illness. He was 81.

Pepper was born in Bolinas and attended elementary school there, the only schooling he received. Like his father, he was a building contractor, operating the firm L. G. Pepper and Sons, now run by one of his sons.

Pepper and his wife, the late Marin W. Pepper, reared eight children in the family home in the Esten Terrace area.

Mrs. Pepper, an author, died seven months ago.

Pepper is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Hazel Evans of Bolinas, Mrs. Doris King of Santa Cruz and Mrs. Marin Atkinson of San Jose; four sons Frank, Charles and John Pepper, all of Bolinas, and Miles Pepper of Denver, Colo., 19 grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

Private funeral will be held tomorrow.

The family prefers contributions to the American Cancer Society.

MRS. HIATT

Katherine E. Hiatt, a former Marin County resident, died yesterday at a Leawood, Kan. hospital after a long illness. She was 67.

She lived both in Marin and San Francisco from 1927 to 1969, when she and her husband, William G. Hiatt, a retired banker, moved to Kansas.

In addition to her husband she is survived by a son, Dr. S. W. Hiatt of Leawood, and a daughter, Susan C. Thompson of South San Francisco.

Private funeral will be held Monday in Leawood.

MRS. BARTHOLOW

Funeral arrangements are pending for Emma Bartholow, 52, of San Rafael who died late Thursday at a local hospital following a long illness.

A native of Eastern Washington, Mrs. Bartholow had lived at 520 Third Street, San Rafael with her husband Jack for the past 25-years. He is employed by the Rafael Theater. She worked for many years at Hamilton Air Force Base.

Survivors include her mother and several brothers and sisters, all in the Seattle, Wash. area.

Arrangements will be made by Chapel of the Hills in San Anselmo.

MRS. ARNOW

Keith Craig, coroner's investigator, said Mrs. Arnow, 55, of San Francisco, was found about 1:30 p.m. in a sleeping position at the beach. Knitting lay in a bag nearby and there was a book beside her head, Craig reported.

Cause of death was not known, according to Craig who said further tests will be made.

Arnow, a reporter for station KPIX, spent a year with his family in Ankara, Turkey, on a Fulbright Fellowship in 1969.

Arrangements are pending at Bayview Chapels in South San Francisco.

EMANUEL WEBER

Keith C. Craig, coroner's investigator, said death apparently was due to a self-inflicted gunshot wound of the head. Weber's body was found in a basement room of the house by a neighbor who was called by his wife, Edna, when she found a note at 8:30 a.m., Craig said. He added that Weber had been despondent over ill health.

A native of Washington, Weber joined the original PayLess chain in 1931 in Spokane after graduation from the University of Washington. He was transferred to Bremerton and later to Oakland before moving to San Rafael in 1940.

He was a member of the Marin Rod and Gun Club and the Elks Lodge.

In addition to his wife, he is survived by two sons, Donald W. of Sacramento and Robert A. Weber of Grass Valley; three brothers, Edwin of Seattle, Alvin of San Bruno and William Weber of Arizona; a sister, Esther Stemm of Spokane and three grandchildren.

The funeral will be at 1 p.m. Tuesday at Keaton's Mortuary in San Rafael. Inurnment will be private at Mount Tamalpais Cemetery.

Fonda's Pills Were Vitamins, Report Claims

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Pills seized from actress Jane Fonda when she was arrested Nov. 3 at Cleveland Hopkins International Airport on drug smuggling charges have been found to be the vitamins she claimed they were, according to a Cleveland Press report.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Edward F. Marek, however, declined to confirm or deny the report Thursday.

Miss Fonda, 32, was detained by customs agents at the airport as she arrived from Toronto, Canada. A search of her luggage turned up 105 vials, each containing 40 pills.

She was charged with bringing illegal drugs into the country, and the case was referred to a federal grand jury, where it still stands. Marek said a decision on whether to continue will be made "in a month or so."

DEATH NOTICE

WEBER — In San Rafael, May 7, 1971, Emanuel Weber; husband of Edna F. Weber; father of Robert A. and Donald W. Weber; brother of Mrs. Esther Stemm, Alvin, Edwin and William Weber; grandfather of three grandchildren; a native of Washington; aged 65 years; a member of B.P.O. Elks No. 1108, San Rafael; and Marin Rod & Gun Club.

Friends are invited to attend the funeral Tuesday, May 11, 1971, at 1 p.m. at KEATON'S MORTUARY, 1022 E. St., San Rafael. Teachers, Parents Support Librarian

Teachers and parents yesterday rallied to the defense of a Larkspur School District librarian who received a termination notice two months ago, just before she was to get tenure.

Judith Ann Houck, librarian at Henry C. Hall and San Clemente schools is fighting the dismissal before Paul A. Winton, a hearing officer from the State Office of Administrative Procedure.

Rae L. Anderson, Miss Houck's attorney, declared he has affidavits from the entire faculty at Henry C. Hall School and from 80 per cent of the faculty at San Clemente School, supporting Miss Houck as a competent librarian serving the schools efficiently.

Assistant County Counsel Richard V. Godino, representing the school district, yesterday called three witnesses who charged that Miss Houck was tardy with making reports, made errors in card cataloguing, and did not use enough initiative and aggressiveness to promote the library's services.

The witnesses were Supt. Milton S. Cohen; Robert Johnson, principal of San Clemente School, and Barbara Dillon, district librarian who was hired on Aug. 1, 1968, the same time that Miss Houck was hired.

Mrs. Dillon testified that Miss Houck did not devote enough time cataloguing and reviewing books, her card files were sometimes out of sequence, and she did not use initiative to "sell" library programs and services to teachers.

Under cross-examination, Mrs. Dillon acknowledged that criticism of Miss Houck came from San Clemente School, not Henry C. Hall. Principal Mervin Gootherts of Hall School wrote favorable evaluation reports on Miss Houck, said Mrs. Dillon.

"Why would she fail at San Clemente and not at Hall?" asked attorney Anderson. "I don't know," said Mrs. Dillon. "She indicated to me she couldn't get with it at San Clemente."

A parade of witnesses began refuting those charges late yesterday, but only four got on the stand before the hearing was recessed until 10 a.m. May 18 in the planning commission chambers.

The first teacher to defend Miss Houck was Gene Ng of San Clemente School. He testified that Miss Houck was a capable librarian who used initiative to present valuable programs for his sixth graders.

Three library clerks also testified that Miss Houck was competent and innovative.

Attorney Anderson said he has about six more witnesses and about 40 affidavits to present, all attesting to Miss Houck's competence.

Store Shop Plans Will Be Studied

A plan to turn an old furniture store in Mill Valley into a department store with 15 shops will be discussed by the Mill Valley Planning Commission when it meets at 8 p.m. Monday at city hall.

Owner W. W. Kirsch is asking the commission for a variance to install 30 parking spaces where 118 are required by the zoning ordinance.

The department store would be located in the old Brown's Furniture Store at 38 Miller Avenue, where plans for a 400-seat restaurant-bar were squelched by the city council last year.

Also on the agenda is a request by Humphrey O'Driscoll, of 35 Locke Lane, to have a carport built to the side property line where a five-foot setback is required.

O'Driscoll, who already has built the carport without city permission, either must obtain a variance or demolish the structure.

Funeral arrangements are pending for Emma Bartholow, 52, of San Rafael who died late Thursday at a local hospital following a long illness.

A native of Eastern Washington, Mrs. Bartholow had lived at 520 Third Street, San Rafael with her husband Jack for the past 25-years. He is employed by the Rafael Theater. She worked for many years at Hamilton Air Force Base.

Survivors include her mother and several brothers and sisters, all in the Seattle, Wash. area.

Arrangements will be made by Chapel of the Hills in San Anselmo.

MRS. ARNOW

Keith Craig, coroner's investigator, said Mrs. Arnow, 55, of San Francisco, was found about 1:30 p.m. in a sleeping position at the beach. Knitting lay in a bag nearby and there was a book beside her head, Craig reported.

Cause of death was not known, according to Craig who said further tests will be made.

Arnow, a reporter for station KPIX, spent a year with his family in Ankara, Turkey, on a Fulbright Fellowship in 1969.

Arrangements are pending at Bayview Chapels in South San Francisco.

EMANUEL WEBER

Keith C. Craig, coroner's investigator, said death apparently was due to a self-inflicted gunshot wound of the head. Weber's body was found in a basement room of the house by a neighbor who was called by his wife, Edna, when she found a note at 8:30 a.m., Craig said. He added that Weber had been despondent over ill health.

A native of Washington, Weber joined the original PayLess chain in 1931 in Spokane after graduation from the University of Washington. He was transferred to Bremerton and later to Oakland before moving to San Rafael in 1940.

He was a member of the Marin Rod and Gun Club and the Elks Lodge.

In addition to his wife, he is survived by two sons, Donald W. of Sacramento and Robert A. Weber of Grass Valley; three brothers, Edwin of Seattle, Alvin of San Bruno and William Weber of Arizona; a sister, Esther Stemm of Spokane and three grandchildren.

The funeral will be at 1 p.m. Tuesday at Keaton's Mortuary in San Rafael. Inurnment will be private at Mount Tamalpais Cemetery.

Fonda's Pills Were Vitamins, Report Claims

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Pills seized from actress Jane Fonda when she was arrested Nov. 3 at Cleveland Hopkins International Airport on drug smuggling charges have been found to be the vitamins she claimed they were, according to a Cleveland Press report.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Edward F. Marek, however, declined to confirm or deny the report Thursday.

Miss Fonda, 32, was detained by customs agents at the airport as she arrived from Toronto, Canada. A search of her luggage turned up 105 vials, each containing 40 pills.

She was charged with bringing illegal drugs into the country, and the case was referred to a federal grand jury, where it still stands. Marek said a decision on whether to continue will be made "in a month or so."

Community Center Eyed

The old and the young are joining forces in Santa Venetia to work for a community center, possibly in the old Littleman Market building which was vacated last year.

About 40 residents met at the Presbyterian Church on Adrian Way Thursday night and formed a committee to drum up support and funding.

The meeting was sponsored jointly by the Gallinas Village Community Services District and Marin's Juvenile Delinquency Prevention Commission.

Youth Coordinator L. Charles Smith, who presided, said six adults including himself and five teen-agers volunteered to form a committee to work for the center. The committee will meet again at 8 p.m. on May 20 at the church.

The former Littleman's Market building has 18,000-square-feet of floor space, renting at five cents per square foot which means a $900 per month rental.

About a dozen teen-agers decided they would have their own meeting next week at the home of Rebecca Prebil to get youth backing for the center.

Women Drive More On a Set Of Tires

AKRON, Ohio (UPI)—Women get the last laugh when it comes to their driving habits.

Goodyear Tire and Rubber reports that a study of women behind the wheel showed they average 10,000 miles more on a set of tires than men do.

Symposium On Parks Needs Announced

That will be the theme of an all-day symposium on "parks, people, and open space" to be held at the College of Marin's Olney Hall next Saturday, from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The Marin County Parks and Recreation Commission will sponsor the symposium to get public comments on what they want and need in county parks.

County Supervisor Arnold M. Baptiste will open the free public meeting. Alfred E. Heller, president of a conservation group, California Tomorrow, will be keynote speaker. County Counsel Douglas J. Maloney will be master of ceremonies.

A highlight of the town-meeting-type symposium will be a multiscreen show of color slides illustrating Marin's unique geographic and recreational areas. The show, produced by Pacific Gas and Electric Co. as a public service, was prepared by Lewis (Skip) Stewart, San Anselmo city councilman.

Afternoon discussion sessions will consider the creation of a regional park district for Marin; the county' role in nature education; need for specialized recreational facilities, and various priorities such as active recreational areas or open spaces, which must be considered.

Moderators for panel discussions include John Hart of San Rafael, free-lance conservation writer; George Barnwell, Novato editor; George Draper, San Francisco writer; Dean N. Meyer, Golden Gate Bridge Director, and Albert J. Boro, chairman of the Marin County Parks and Recreation Commission.

Study Set On Antidrug Center

The Petaluma City Council, meeting in another of its so-called study sessions will discuss Monday night a bid by a youth group known as Third Way House to establish an antidrug center for teen-agers.

Third Way House has undertaken a fund campaign for the center and is seeking council endorsement.

The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. at city hall.

Exchange Plan To Be Explained

Student exchange programs will be explained to parents and students at 3:15 p.m. Tuesday in the little theater at Redwood High School.

Mrs. Ross Ashley, student selection chairman of Redwood International Student Exchange, said American Field Service, Experiment in International Living, Youth for Understanding and Redwood's exchange programs in Blandford, England, Preetz, Germany and Highland Park, N.J. will be discussed.

Applications for the programs may be made in September.

Mill Valley Board Will Eye Budget

The Mill Valley School District board, meeting at 8 p.m. Monday at Park School, will hear a progress report on a preliminary 1971-72 study budget of $3,450,265, a $192,810 increase over this year.

Director of Business Services Carroll D. Killingsworth said the spending program includes a $50,160 increase over this year for normal step increases for teachers but makes no provision for cost-of-living or other salary raises.

He emphasized, however, that the budget is preliminary and probably will be modified by the board before it is adopted in August.

Also on the agenda is approval of the sale of the 5.13-acre Alice Eastwood School site in Tamalpais Valley to the Tamalpais Community Services District for $66,500, conditional on acceptance by the services district board.

Chamber Supports Tax Increase

The Rohnert Park Chamber of Commerce has passed resolutions supporting the June 1 tax increase election in the Cotati School District and the Golden Gate Bridge District's bid before the legislature to continue transit planning in the Golden Gate corridor.

Chamber secretary Sue Limoli said the chamber action was taken Wednesday.

FULTZ QUADS

Sophisticated Life As Models

NEW YORK (UPI)—They were headliners nearly 25 years ago when they were born. Now they're aiming for fame anew in the career world.

They're the Fultz quadruplets—Mary Ann, Mary Alice, Mary Louise and Mary Catherine—believed by those connected with their lives to be the only living Negro girl quads in the world.

Today, they live a sophisticated life in northern Westchester County, New York, their eyes on careers in music, as models and also in medicine.

The lives of these quads, now willowy, handsome and fashionwise, began May 23, 1946, in the Annie Penn Memorial Hospital in Reidsville, N.C., when Dr. Fred Klenner, a general practitioner, delivered four babies who altogether weighed 12 pounds. They were a celebrated four-some in their early days and were written up in newspapers and magazines, photographed even with Presidents. Sponsors who wanted the quads to lend their names to products were plentiful. And a national milk firm made what Charles and Elma Saylor, who became their legal guardians and ultimately adoptive parents, considered the best offer — milk, comfortable home and other needs until the quads turned 18.

As the girls grew, those steering their future noticed their musical talents. Mrs. Saylor, a registered nurse who helped to deliver the babies, said that at the early age of three she would notice their developing talents as they recited nursery rhymes.

Ultimately the girls dropped from the national scene and went through secondary schools and on to two years at Betheune- Cookman College, Daytona Beach, Fla.

Mrs. Saylor and her husband, a graduate of Tuskegee Institute, cared for the quads almost from the beginning and adopted them when they were 10. During an interview, Mrs. Saylor said that numbers of professionals tested the four's abilities and it was just generally agreed that they need special training to develop their talents.

Accordingly, the Saylors and quads moved to Peekskill, N.Y., where as Mrs. Saylor said "the girls could be near a big city but not have to live in it." Peekskill is an integrated suburban community.

Mrs. Saylor was reluctant to talk of the quads' mother and father except to mention that the mother was handicapped, that to give the quads the "special training needed and to travel with them" would have been impossible.

The quadruplets recently were graduated from the Barbizon School of Modeling, now are registered with the school's modeling agency, and are modeling either separately or as a unit. They all are five feet seven and one-half inches tall, and wear size 8½ and 9 shoes so that their personal wardrobes always are being exchanged.

Medically, they're listed as identical. Their birthright shows in their reactions to questions. "What musical instrument do you play?" I asked.

"The organ," the four answered as one. It turns out though that among them they also play piano, violin, cello and viola and sing, both classical and rock music. They're studying at Lakeland Music Center Conservatory in Peekskill and holding nursing jobs while they wait out modeling and music engagements.

It's confusing talking with four girls all named Mary. Mrs. Saylor explained that it was to honor the Virgin—"their family doctor was a Catholic."

HAPPY MOTHERS' DAY

Louis Brunanchon offers Mothers' Day greetings and a floral arrangement to Mrs. Marie Bene, at the Marin Manor Rest Home in San Rafael. Louis attends Forest Meadows Development Center, also in San Rafael, where students made the bouquets. The exchange between the women and the children, who are mentally handicapped, was arranged because it is important for the children to go out and share with other people, according to Thelma Quintana, an aide at the center.

Two Weddings In Capital June 12

Two big weddings — not one — will be held on the same day in Washington, D.C.

The most covered of the two will be that of Tricia Nixon who will be married in the White House on June 12. Scheduled also is the wedding of Theodore Milo Stans, son of Secretary of Commerce Maurice Sans to Diane Richter of New York.

Wash Hands

Wash hands with soap and water after handling raw meat and poultry and before touching other foods.

Couple's 50 Years Together

Pauline Cummings became the bride of William Burger 50 years ago April 30 in what was described as "a quiet ceremony" in her parents' home in Fort Bragg.

Shortly after the ceremony the bride's mother told Burger, "Remember, she can always come back!" The Burgers, now residents of Woodacre, laugh about it now and Burger says, "We tied a pretty tight knot."

They lived in Fort Bragg for 17 years where he was paymaster of the Union Lumber Co., clerk of the school board, and for 10 years the city treasurer. He was also district commander of American Legion Post 96 and she was active in its auxiliary.

AFTER MOVING to San Rafael they settled in a home near Short School for 20 years. Burger was a price clerk and estimator for E. M. Hundley Hardware in San Francisco and then O'Niel and Logan Hardware in San Rafael. Mrs. Burger worked at Moore's Stationary and she has been active in Girl Scouts.

Over 150 guests honored them at a reception Sunday at the Woodacre Improvement Club including Mrs. Burger's sister Mrs. Carl Ruppert who came from Ohio.

One of their sons, John Paul Burger, lives next door to them in Woodacre and the elder Burgers enjoy daily visits from their three grandchildren Susan, 13, Bret, 11 and Linda, 10. Their other son William Burger Jr. lives in San Francisco.

BURGER IS a member of the World War I Barracks 550 in Woodacre and they are past members of the Odd Fellows and Rebekah Lodges. Mrs. Burger is a member of the Lutheran Church in San Rafael and the couple occasionally attends the Presbyterian Church in Woodacre.

The Burgers talked about some of their trips around the United States and he said "It hasn't been an idle 50 years. I'll tell you that."

Start Day Right

The day goes better when started with breakfast. You'll have more energy in the morning and less tendency to snack before lunch.

If you are tired of the ordinary-never-changing breakfast menu perhaps a toasted cheese sandwich or hamburger would perk up the breakfast routine for you.

Keep Good Company

Snacks should be selected on the basis of the company they keep. In other words, say nutritionists, choose foods that supply several important nutrients as well as food energy such as a glass of milk or fresh fruit. Avoid the "do-little-nibbles" that add calories and nothing else.

A $500 Fellowship In Member's Honor

A $500 fellowship grant in the name of Mrs. William B. Allen has been made to the American Association of University Women's Educational Fund by the Mill Valley Branch of the organization.

Mrs. Allen is the fourth member of the branch to be recognized for her contribution to AAUW by provision of a grant in her name. The others were the late Mrs. Ernest Evans, Dr. Margaret Grew and Mrs. R. S. O'Connor.

Pat Allen, who moved from Mill Valley to Sonoma in 1969, joined the branch in 1951 and soon became one of its most dedicated members. She was president in 1955-56 and has also served as vice president, membership chairman, publicity chairman, parliamentarian and head of the garden and lively arts study sections.

She wrote the scripts and lyrics for several performances of the arts study group, notably "Uncle Sugar's Follies," a satire on the United States image abroad, and "The Annual Festival of Music and Poetry of the Ladies Indoor Art Club," also a spoof.

Mrs. Allen received a degree in history from Drake University in Iowa and a master's degree in English from Radcliffe College. She was on the staff of the rare books library at Harvard University before moving with her engineer husband to California.

More than 100 graduate fellowships are provided each year by the foundation to gifted women scholars, in amounts ranging from $2,500 to $5,000. About half are awarded to Americans and half to women from other countries.

Kitchen Stove Tops Now Works Of Art

A national firm is turning tops of kitchen stoves into pieces of art and capable of temperatures up to 1,200 degrees Fahrenheit.

An Apple Fluff

Season canned apple sauce with cinnamon, honey and a little lemon juice. Chill well and serve in a dessert dish. Top with a generous fluff of whipped cream and garnish with lady fingers or sticks of pound cake. Makes a great bedtime snack, too.

Teen Snacks

Faculty Bid For Women At Harvard

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI)--A special faculty committee says Harvard —the nation's oldest university —should make more room for women on the faculty and at the graduate level.

"A male bastion for more than three centuries, growing over time from a denominational men's college to a major university, Harvard has been slow to recognize changes in ideas about sex roles," the committee said. "It has tended to overlook injustices and has continued to 'do business in the usual manner.'

"But we have now reached that point which usually precedes significant change: when the injustice is so visible and the discontent so apparent that few can doubt the need for reform."

The committee, in a report on its study of the status of women in Harvard's faculty of arts and sciences said:

—Women faculty members should be hire on the basis of guidelines based on the number of women doctoral candidates at Harvard, increasing as the number of women in graduate study grow.

—Parttime teaching and graduate study positions should be made available so that women with families could routinely teach or study.

Vows Are Said In Tiburon

The Westminster Presbyterian Church in Tiburon was the setting when Mrs. Joan Lorena Stearns of San Rafael and Lt. Col. Harold Glen Young of San Francisco were married in a 7 p.m. ceremony Thursday.

The wedding was followed by a reception at the Mill Valley home of the matron of honor and best man, Mr. and Mrs. Philip R. Placier.

Mrs. Placier is the sister of the bridegroom.

On their return from a wedding trip the couple will live in San Francisco, where Young is on active duty with the U. S. Army Inspector General at Fort Mason.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Smith of Portland, Ore. Formerly a dancer, she is a member of the executive board of the Marin Civic Ballet. She has two children by a previous marriage, Susan Louise and Steven Wilson Stearns of Woodside.

The bridegroom, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack H. Young of Modesto and brother of Jack H. Young Jr. of Modesto and Gerald R. Young of Lakeport, has two children by a previous marriage. They are Sabrina Ann and Andrew Young of Washington, D.C.

John Akers And Diane Levy Engagement Told

The engagement of Diane Barbara Levy to John Stewart Akers of San Jose has been announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Myron J. Levy of Fairfax.

Diane is the sister of Linda Levy of Fairfax and Michael Levy, who attends the University of California at Davis. Her grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Harry Zimet and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Levy, all of San Francisco.

Diane, a graduate of Sir Francis Drake High School and San Jose State College, is taking graduate studies in special education at San Francisco State College.

Mr. and Mrs. John Akers of San Jose are John's parents, and he is the brother of Mrs. Ernest LaScola, Bonnie and April Akers. He was graduated from Lincoln High School in San Jose and attends San Jose State College.

A September wedding is being planned by the couple.

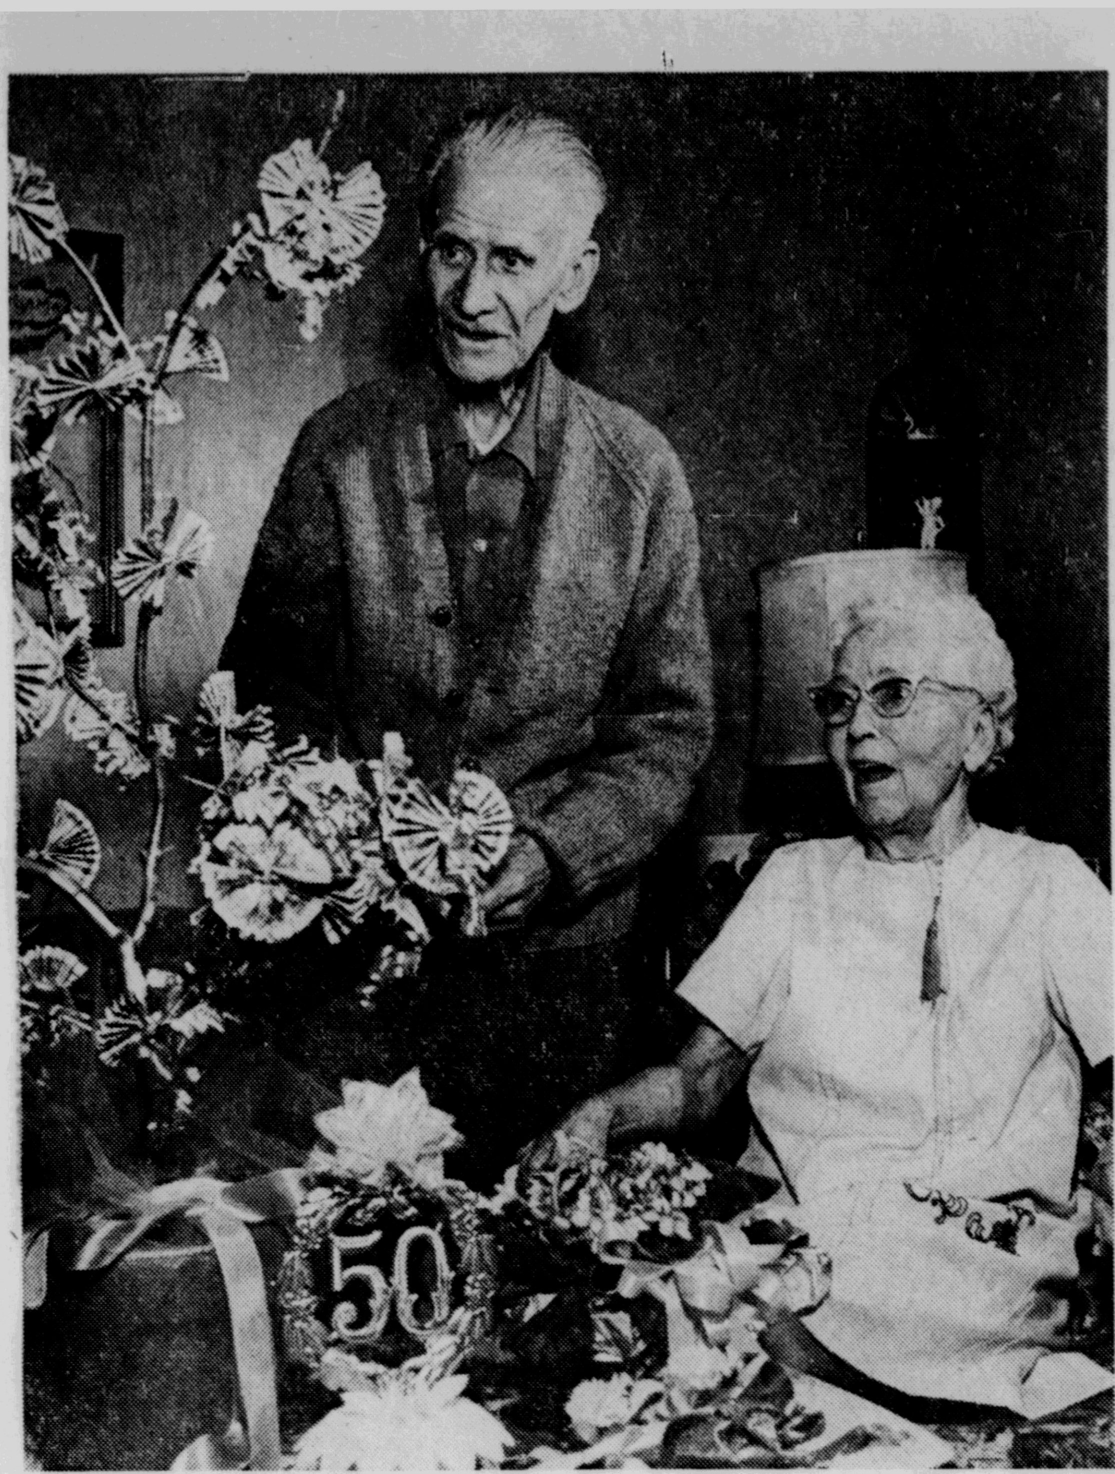
Marin Women



A MONEY tree, always a useful gift, is one of the things to be presented to the William Burgers of Woodacre at a reception tomorrow honoring their 50th wedding anniversary. They moved to Woodacre six years ago after living in San Rafael for 20 years. They were married in Ft. Bragg on April 30, 1921.

FULTZ QUADS

Sophisticated Life As Models

NEW YORK (UPI)—They were headliners nearly 25 years ago when they were born. Now they're aiming for fame anew in the career world.

They're the Fultz quadruplets—Mary Ann, Mary Alice, Mary Louise and Mary Catherine—believed by those connected with their lives to be the only living Negro girl quads in the world.

Today, they live a sophisticated life in northern Westchester County, New York, their eyes on careers in music, as models and also in medicine.

The lives of these quads, now willowy, handsome and fashionwise, began May 23, 1946, in the Annie Penn Memorial Hospital in Reidsville, N.C., when Dr. Fred Klenner, a general practitioner, delivered four babies who altogether weighed 12 pounds. They were a celebrated four-some in their early days and were written up in newspapers and magazines, photographed even with Presidents. Sponsors who wanted the quads to lend their names to products were plentiful. And a national milk firm made what Charles and Elma Saylor, who became their legal guardians and ultimately adoptive parents, considered the best offer — milk, comfortable home and other needs until the quads turned 18.

As the girls grew, those steering their future noticed their musical talents. Mrs. Saylor, a registered nurse who helped to deliver the babies, said that at the early age of three she would notice their developing talents as they recited nursery rhymes.

Ultimately the girls dropped from the national scene and went through secondary schools and on to two years at Betheune-Cookman College, Daytona Beach, Fla.

Mrs. Saylor and her husband, a graduate of Tuskegee Institute, cared for the quads almost from the beginning and adopted them when they were 10. During an interview, Mrs. Saylor said that numbers of professionals tested the four's abilities and it was just generally agreed that they need special training to develop their talents.

Accordingly, the Saylors and quads moved to Peekskill, N.Y., where as Mrs. Saylor said "the girls could be near a big city but not have to live in it." Peekskill is an integrated suburban community.

Mrs. Saylor was reluctant to talk of the quads' mother and father except to mention that the mother was handicapped, that to give the quads the "special training needed and to travel with them" would have been impossible.

The quadruplets recently were graduated from the Barbizon School of Modeling, now are registered with the school's modeling agency, and are modeling either separately or as a unit. They all are five feet seven and one-half inches tall, and wear size 8½ and 9 shoes so that their personal wardrobes always are being exchanged.

Medically, they're listed as identical. Their birthright shows in their reactions to questions. "What musical instrument do you play?" I asked.

"The organ," the four answered as one. It turns out though that among them they also play piano, violin, cello and viola and sing, both classical and rock music. They're studying at Lakeland Music Center Conservatory in Peekskill and holding nursing jobs while they wait out modeling and music engagements.

It's confusing talking with four girls all named Mary. Mrs. Saylor explained that it was to honor the Virgin—"their family doctor was a Catholic."

HAPPY MOTHERS' DAY

Louis Brunanchon offers Mothers' Day greetings and a floral arrangement to Mrs. Marie Bene, at the Marin Manor Rest Home in San Rafael. Louis attends Forest Meadows Development Center, also in San Rafael, where students made the bouquets. The exchange between the women and the children, who are mentally handicapped, was arranged because it is important for the children to go out and share with other people, according to Thelma Quintana, an aide at the center.

MRS. GORDON Walker of Marin Country Club Estates in Novato will be installed as chairman of the Oleander Chapter, Marin Foundation, Friends of Arequipa, at its meeting at the home of Mrs. Alvin Haag in Belvedere Wednesday at 10 a.m.

Mrs. Haag has invited all members to a luncheon at her home following the meeting. Mrs. S. Ross Cox Jr. will be the co-hostess.

THE SONOMA Valley Woman's Club is having a house and garden tour Wednesday beginning at 12:30 p.m. at the Blue Wing Complex in Sonoma, where wine and cheese will be served.

Reservations chairman for the tour of eight homes, many more than 100 years old, is Mrs. Louie Minelli of Sonoma. Tickets can also be purchased at the beginning fo the tour.

AN OPPORTUNITY to make an organic garden in exchange for weeding and pruning existing plants is one of the new jobs offered this week by the Volunteer Bureau of Marin.

Volunteers to fed handicapped children during the lunch hour between now and June and to teach sports to men on Tuesday mornings are also needed. Retired caseworkers or persons with master's degrees in social work are needed as volunteers.

Appointments should be made for interviews at the volunteer bureau in San Rafael.

Two Weddings In Capital June 12

Two big weddings — not one — will be held on the same day in Washington, D.C.

The most covered of the two will be that of Tricia Nixon who will be married in the White House on June 12. Scheduled also is the wedding of Theodore Milo Stans, son of Secretary of Commerce Maurice Sans to Diane Richter of New York.

Wash Hands

Wash hands with soap and water after handling raw meat and poultry and before touching other foods.

Couple's 50 Years Together

Pauline Cummings became the bride of William Burger 50 years ago April 30 in what was described as "a quiet ceremony" in her parents' home in Fort Bragg.

Shortly after the ceremony the bride's mother told Burger, "Remember, she can always come back!" The Burgers, now residents of Woodacre, laugh about it now and Burger says, "We tied a pretty tight knot."

They lived in Fort Bragg for 17 years where he was paymaster of the Union Lumber Co., clerk of the school board, and for 10 years the city treasurer. He was also district commander of American Legion Post 96 and she was active in its auxiliary.

AFTER MOVING to San Rafael they settled in a home near Short School for 20 years. Burger was a price clerk and estimator for E. M. Hundley Hardware in San Francisco and then O'Niel and Logan Hardware in San Rafael. Mrs. Burger worked at Moore's Stationary and she has been active in Girl Scouts.

Over 150 guests honored them at a reception Sunday at the Woodacre Improvement Club including Mrs. Burger's sister Mrs. Carl Ruppert who came from Ohio.

One of their sons, John Paul Burger, lives next door to them in Woodacre and the elder Burgers enjoy daily visits from their three grandchildren Susan, 13, Bret, 11 and Linda, 10. Their other son William Burger Jr. lives in San Francisco.

BURGER IS a member of the World War I Barracks 550 in Woodacre and they are past members of the Odd Fellows and Rebekah Lodges. Mrs. Burger is a member of the Lutheran Church in San Rafael and the couple occasionally attends the Presbyterian Church in Woodacre.

The Burgers talked about some of their trips around the United States and he said "It hasn't been an idle 50 years. I'll tell you that."

Start Day Right

The day goes better when started with breakfast. You'll have more energy in the morning and less tendency to snack before lunch.

If you are tired of the ordinary-never-changing breakfast menu perhaps a toasted cheese sandwich or hamburger would perk up the breakfast routine for you.

Keep Good Company

Snacks should be selected on the basis of the company they keep. In other words, say nutritionists, choose foods that supply several important nutrients as well as food energy such as a glass of milk or fresh fruit. Avoid the "do-little-nibbles" that add calories and nothing else.

A $500 Fellowship In Member's Honor

A $500 fellowship grant in the name of Mrs. William B. Allen has been made to the American Association of University Women's Educational Fund by the Mill Valley Branch of the organization.

Mrs. Allen is the fourth member of the branch to be recognized for her contribution to AAUW by provision of a grant in her name. The others were the late Mrs. Ernest Evans, Dr. Margaret Grew and Mrs. R. S. O'Connor.

Pat Allen, who moved from Mill Valley to Sonoma in 1969, joined the branch in 1951 and soon became one of its most dedicated members. She was president in 1955-56 and has also served as vice president, membership chairman, publicity chairman, parliamentarian and head of the garden and lively arts study sections.

She wrote the scripts and lyrics for several performances of the arts study group, notably "Uncle Sugar's Follies," a satire on the United States image abroad, and "The Annual Festival of Music and Poetry of the Ladies Indoor Art Club," also a spoof.

Mrs. Allen received a degree in history from Drake University in Iowa and a master's degree in English from Radcliffe College. She was on the staff of the rare books library at Harvard University before moving with her engineer husband to California.

More than 100 graduate fellowships are provided each year by the foundation to gifted women scholars, in amounts ranging from $2,500 to $5,000. About half are awarded to Americans and half to women from other countries.

Kitchen Stove Tops Now Works Of Art

A national firm is turning tops of kitchen stoves into pieces of art and capable of temperatures up to 1,200 degrees Fahrenheit.

An Apple Fluff

Season canned apple sauce with cinnamon, honey and a little lemon juice. Chill well and serve in a dessert dish. Top with a generous fluff of whipped cream and garnish with lady fingers or sticks of pound cake. Makes a great bedtime snack, too.

Teen Snacks

Faculty Bid For Women At Harvard

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI)—A special faculty committee says Harvard —the nation's oldest university —should make more room for women on the faculty and at the graduate level.

"A male bastion for more than three centuries, growing over time from a denominational men's college to a major university, Harvard has been slow to recognize changes in ideas about sex roles," the committee said. "It has tended to overlook injustices and has continued to 'do business in the usual manner.'

"But we have now reached that point which usually precedes significant change: when the injustice is so visible and the discontent so apparent that few can doubt the need for reform."

The committee, in a report on its study of the status of women in Harvard's faculty of arts and sciences said:

—Women faculty members should be hire on the basis of guidelines based on the number of women doctoral candidates at Harvard, increasing as the number of women in graduate study grow.

—Parttime teaching and graduate study positions should be made available so that women with families could routinely teach or study.

Vows Are Said In Tiburon

The Westminster Presbyterian Church in Tiburon was the setting when Mrs. Joan Lorena Stearns of San Rafael and Lt. Col. Harold Glen Young of San Francisco were married in a 7 p.m. ceremony Thursday.

The wedding was followed by a reception at the Mill Valley home of the matron of honor and best man, Mr. and Mrs. Philip R. Placier.

Mrs. Placier is the sister of the bridegroom.

On their return from a wedding trip the couple will live in San Francisco, where Young is on active duty with the U. S. Army Inspector General at Fort Mason.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Smith of Portland, Ore. Formerly a dancer, she is a member of the executive board of the Marin Civic Ballet. She has two children by a previous marriage, Susan Louise and Steven Wilson Stearns of Woodside.

The bridegroom, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack H. Young of Modesto and brother of Jack H. Young Jr. of Modesto and Gerald R. Young of Lakeport, has two children by a previous marriage. They are Sabrina Ann and Andrew Young of Washington, D.C.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

'Policeman's Kid' Urged To Open His Eyes And Ears To People

DEAR HELEN:

A while back "Policeman's Kid" said something that really made me bristle. It's great standing up for your father, and "the fuzz" need all the help they can get these days, but he ended his letter with, "Next time you're in trouble, call a hippie." (With great sarcasm).

If this kid would open his eyes and ears, he'd see things such as I have.

A woman coming out of the market with a loaded cart of groceries hits a bump and over goes her cart. Three or four men walk past, then a car that is pulling away stops and two guys with shoulder-length hair and "funny" clothes jump out to help her. And they won't accept a tip . . . she'd embarrass them by offering.

My sister-in-law, who locks her door at the mention of a hippie (doper?), was in a local shopping center parking lot, too pregnant to close her car trunk. Guess who came to the rescue? Not a "straight" man.

I read an article not too long ago about a young boy who, while walking over a frozen lake with friends, found some unfriendly ice, and fell through. It was a "doper" to the rescue.

Out in California, the hippies saved oil-drenched birds from San Francisco Bay, and earlier saved many homes from being destroyed by forest fires by their quick action and volunteer work.

I could go on and on, and I'm sure Policeman's Kid could too, but PLEASE let's set the record straight. There are good and bad; helpers and passers-by in every group of people. Let's don't set one group against the other.

SARDI

DEAR HELEN:

I've ready so many letters from kids who refer to their parents as "my old man" or "my old lady."

I don't always agree with my mother or father, but I think they deserve respect.

Doesn't anyone agree with me that "old man" and "old lady" should be shelved (the words, I mean)?

OTTO

DEAR OTTO:

For starters, I Do!

H.

DEAR HELEN:

I know you've had lots of "Big Brother" descriptions, but please would you print mine? It would have been his birthday last month.

A big brother is the one who brings home his friends and tells you not to talk to them.

He's the one who tells you Mom and Dad felt sorry for you cause you were the ugliest one at the orphanage, so they adopted you.

He also tells you the Salvation Army brought you, and he picks on you and teases you just 'cause you're younger.

He's the one who, on your birthday, joins the Navy though he's only 17. And then when he is discharged, calls long distance to wish his 16-year-old sister a Happy Birthday, though he's coming home the next day.

He's the one who one night goes out riding with friends and gets killed, and that's the day my whole world fell apart.

Out of all the pain and trouble you go through with a big brother, he's the one you love the best — and life will never be the same without him.

HIS LITTLEST SISTER

This column is dedicated to family living, so if you're having kid trouble or just plain trouble, let Helen help YOU. She will also welcome your own amusing experiences. Address Helen Bottel in care of Independent-Journal.

Some Good News About Steak Cuts

Beef research just completed indicates that only half of the fat in beef cuts is saturated, which should be good news to steak-loving Americans concerned about weight and heart conditions. Studies at three universities indicate that 95 per cent of the beef cuts now on the market meet the medical profession's saturated fat limitations.

The research was announced by the California Beef Council, which has been working on evaluations of beef's fat content with heart specialists, animal scientists and beef industry leaders around the country, through the University of California at Davis. Additionally, fat composition studies took place at the Universities of Wisconsin and Arizona.

THE STUDIES are being made available to the medical profession for further research and evaluation, as well as to nutritionists, dieticians, home economists, animal scientists and the press.

Representatives from a number of these industry groups have welcomed the new information, for beef has traditionally been well accepted by individuals on restricted diets, due to its taste and nutritional values.

Walter H. Rodman, immediate past manager of the California Beef Council and industry pioneer in the field, said that his organization decided to bring the research to light "because everyone knew the nutritional value of beef, but did not recognize that most fat-trimmed beef products met the safe dietary standards of the health profession."

The California study began following a 1968 conference at Davis of animal scientists, physicians, food technologists, nutritionists and California beef industry leaders. At the conference, physicians involved in cardiovascular disorders indicated that meats below a five per cent saturated fat content would be acceptable for inclusion in the diets of their patients.

The study analyzed 360 samples from 72 carcasses, with Dr. William Garrett of the Davis campus supervising the work through a grant from the California Beef Council.

RESULTS SHOWED that many lean cuts such as the round, rump, and tenderloin fall well below the 5 per cent fat content which is acceptable to individuals on a low-fat diet, and research at Arizona and Wisconsin pointed up that half of all intramuscle fat was saturated.

Dr. Garrett, professor of Animal Science at Davis, worked with two meat graders from the U.S. Department of Agriculture in the sample selection. Unsaturated fats, which have not been indicated as causing problems in heart patients, were included in total fat contents, which ranged from 3.8 to 4.8 per cent for the recommended cuts.

All outside fat was trimmed. This corresponds to the original cooking methods of the first beef fat analyses done by Ruth M. Leverton, although there appears to be a substantial reductions in beef's fat content in the decade since her studies.

The beef samples were selected from six Northern California meat packers in equal factors of sex, quality, marbling score and yield. Protein, fat and water content were analyzed at the Davis meat laboratory. The research process mirrored the normal distribution channels so that the beef corresponds to meat at the store level.

PRESS GUIDE IS AVAILABLE

A guide for press chairmen of organizations interested in getting news to the Marin Women's Section of the Independent-Journal is available at the San Rafael main office and the Novato, Mill Valley and Southern Sonoma I-J offices.

The booklet, "Getting News Into Your Newspaper," is issued as a service of the Independent-Journal Women's Section to assist press chairmen for women's organizations.

The booklets at the San Rafael office may be obtained from the switchboard on the main floor.

Tam P-TA Leader Is Real Native

Mrs. George Kirkland, new president of the Tamalpais Valley Parent-Teacher Association, is not only a native of Tamalpais Valley but she still lives in the house where she was born.

A member of the organization four years, she says her most important objective for the coming year will be to increase the working membership.

Katherine Kirkland is a past president of the Star of the Sea Parlor, Native Daughters of the Golden West, and is active in the Star of the Sea Church in Sausalito and the Mill Valley Council of the Portuguese Protective Union of California.

Mrs. Kirkland is a graduate of Tamalpais High School. She and her husband, who is a securities trader with the firm of McDonald, Shobar and Miller in San Francisco, have three children, Kenneth, 8; Karen, 5 and Kristie, 4.

Katherine enjoys sewing and makes all of her own and the children's clothes. She also likes crafts work.

Other officers to be installed with the new president this month are Mmes. Richard Drever Jr., first vice president; R. H. Glenn, second vice president; Douglas Noren, recording secretary; Jesse Grove, corresponding secretary, and Vaughn Phillips, treasurer.

Therapy For Wife Alone Held Failure

Sex researchers Dr. William Masters and Virginia Johnson advise the thousands of American women with sexually troubled marriages who seek professional help without their husbands that they are probably wasting their time and their money.

"Therapy for the wife alone will not only fail to solve the problem but will probably make it worse," the famous team wrote in the May issue of Redbook magazine.

"When a marriage is jeopardized by sexual conflicts, in the vast majority of cases it's the wife who seeks counseling," Masters and Johnson said. The assumption that it is always the wife who needs help is so widespread that it goes unquestioned by most women who "all too often accept — or even volunteer for —the role of scapegoat."

But "a wife cannot be treated for a malady that afflicts the marriage relationship itself, any more than she can go for lessons by herself to learn how to dance with her husband — who isn't very graceful, can't keep time and has never enjoyed dancing," they argued.

Emphasizing the "destructiveness" of individual therapy, Masters and Johnson said that its failure "further erodes her (the wife's) self-esteem (and) consequently there is less chance than ever that she and her husband can overcome their sexual disharmony."

Iodine's Source

Sea foods and plants grown on soil near seas are important sources of the nutrient, iodine. Table salt is often fortified with this mineral. Iodine helps control the rate at which the body uses energy, say nutrition consultants.

SEW SIMPLE

Side Seams For The Waist Area

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR EUNICE:

My shoulders are narrow, and I have a very small bust, but I still need a size 20½ size pattern. Please tell me how to reduce the size of the darts in the bust area?

MRS. S.A.F.

DEAR MRS. S.A.F.,

It sounds as if you are using a size that is too large for you, especially when you tell me your shoulders are very narrow. It is best to find a pattern that fits the upper part of your body, it is a simple matter to add to the side seams to enlarge the waist and hip area.

If you still fell you are using the correct size, be sure to fold a narrow dart out of the shoulder, tapering to nothing about 6 inches below the shoulder, to correct the shoulder width. To reduce the shaping caused by the large bust darts, perhaps you only need half the width of the dart. Just draw a new line for your dart. If the dart is at the underarm of your dress, this will cause the bodice to become slightly longer at the sides. Perhaps there is too much length as it is. After you have changed the size of the darts, try the dress on, tie a string tightly around the waist, allow for a slight amount of ease and mark the correct waistline length.

"The finishing touch that really makes an impression when you have made a personalized neck tie for someone special is to use your own personalized name label in back of the tie instead of just a piece of grosgrain ribbon. This is a necessary part of the tie because it keeps the under section of the tie in place. I'm sure that whether the tie is from a wife, sweetheart, girl friend or mother, your man will wear his very special tie with pride and accept it gratefully."

DEAR EUNICE,

When I press my fortrel fabrics hard enough to get the finished look I want, you can always see the seam on the right side, also the marks from facings and hems. Am I using too hot an iron or what is my problem?

MRS. S.V.

DEAR MRS. S.V.,

The seams will tend to make a permanent indentation since you probably haven't underlined the garment. The easiest way to press and be assured this won't happen, is to slide a peice of fairly heavy brown paper under the seam allowance, the hem or the facings and then press. Of course, all your pressing must be done on the wrong side of your fabric. When pressing the hem, I find it works best to baste the hem just above the finished length, slide the paper under the extension of the hem and press. After pressing, you can complete the hem with your slip stitching done by hand.

It sounds as if you are referring to knits. Whether they are polyester, fortrel or wool, the sponginess of the knits will permit them to be pressed. It is important not to overpress fabrics that will leave a sharp crease because it will make them look inexpensive. The soft, rolled look of the hem looks the most professional.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

'Policeman's Kid' Urged To Open His Eyes And Ears To People

DEAR HELEN:

A while back "Policeman's Kid" said something that really made me bristle. It's great standing up for your father, and "the fuzz" need all the help they can get these days, but he ended his letter with, "Next time you're in trouble, call a hippie." (With great sarcasm).

If this kid would open his eyes and ears, he'd see things such as I have.

A woman coming out of the market with a loaded cart of groceries hits a bump and over goes her cart. Three or four men walk past, then a car that is pulling away stops and two guys with shoulder-length hair and "funny" clothes jump out to help her. And they won't accept a tip . . . she'd embarrass them by offering.

My sister-in-law, who locks her door at the mention of a hippie (doper?), was in a local shopping center parking lot, too pregnant to close her car trunk. Guess who came to the rescue? Not a "straight" man.

I read an article not too long ago about a young boy who, while walking over a frozen lake with friends, found some unfriendly ice, and fell through. It was a "doper" to the rescue.

Out in California, the hippies saved oil-drenched birds from San Francisco Bay, and earlier saved many homes from being destroyed by forest fires by their quick action and volunteer work.

I could go on and on, and I'm sure Policeman's Kid could too, but PLEASE let's set the record straight. There are good and bad; helpers and passers-by in every group of people. Let's don't set one group against the other.

SARDI

DEAR HELEN:

I've ready so many letters from kids who refer to their parents as "my old man" or "my old lady."

I don't always agree with my mother or father, but I think they deserve respect.

Doesn't anyone agree with me that "old man" and "old lady" should be shelved (the words, I mean)?

OTTO

DEAR OTTO:

For starters, I Do!

H.

DEAR HELEN:

I know you've had lots of "Big Brother" descriptions, but please would you print mine? It would have been his birthday last month.

A big brother is the one who brings home his friends and tells you not to talk to them.

He's the one who tells you Mom and Dad felt sorry for you cause you were the ugliest one at the orphanage, so they adopted you.

He also tells you the Salvation Army brought you, and he picks on you and teases you just 'cause you're younger.

He's the one who, on your birthday, joins the Navy though he's only 17. And then when he is discharged, calls long distance to wish his 16-year-old sister a Happy Birthday, though he's coming home the next day.

He's the one who one night goes out riding with friends and gets killed, and that's the day my whole world fell apart.

Out of all the pain and trouble you go through with a big brother, he's the one you love the best — and life will never be the same without him.

Some Good News About Steak Cuts

Beef research just completed indicates that only half of the fat in beef cuts is saturated, which should be good news to steak-loving Americans concerned about weight and heart conditions. Studies at three universities indicate that 95 per cent of the beef cuts now on the market meet the medical profession's saturated fat limitations.

The research was announced by the California Beef Council, which has been working on evaluations of beef's fat content with heart specialists, animal scientists and beef industry leaders around the country, through the University of California at Davis. Additionally, fat composition studies took place at the Universities of Wisconsin and Arizona.

THE STUDIES are being made available to the medical profession for further research and evaluation, as well as to nutritionists, dieticians, home economists, animal scientists and the press.

Representatives from a number of these industry groups have welcomed the new information, for beef has traditionally been well accepted by individuals on restricted diets, due to its taste and nutritional values.

Walter H. Rodman, immediate past manager of the California Beef Council and industry pioneer in the field, said that his organization decided to bring the research to light "because everyone knew the nutritional value of beef, but did not recognize that most fat-trimmed beef products met the safe dietary standards of the health profession."

The California study began following a 1968 conference at Davis of animal scientists, physicians, food technologists, nutritionists and California beef industry leaders. At the conference, physicians involved in cardiovascular disorders indicated that meats below a five per cent saturated fat content would be acceptable for inclusion in the diets of their patients.

The study analyzed 360 samples from 72 carcasses, with Dr. William Garrett of the Davis campus supervising the work through a grant from the California Beef Council.

RESULTS SHOWED that many lean cuts such as the round, rump, and tenderloin fall well below the 5 per cent fat content which is acceptable to individuals on a low-fat diet, and research at Arizona and Wisconsin pointed up that half of all intramuscle fat was saturated.

Dr. Garrett, professor of Animal Science at Davis, worked with two meat graders from the U.S. Department of Agriculture in the sample selection. Unsaturated fats, which have not been indicated as causing problems in heart patients, were included in total fat contents, which ranged from 3.8 to 4.8 per cent for the recommended cuts.

All outside fat was trimmed. This corresponds to the original cooking methods of the first beef fat analyses done by Ruth M. Leverton, although there appears to be a substantial reductions in beef's fat content in the decade since her studies.

The beef samples were selected from six Northern California meat packers in equal factors of sex, quality, marbling score and yield. Protein, fat and water content were analyzed at the Davis meat laboratory. The research process mirrored the normal distribution channels so that the beef corresponds to meat at the store level.

PRESS GUIDE IS AVAILABLE

A guide for press chairmen of organizations interested in getting news to the Marin Women's Section of the Independent-Journal is available at the San Rafael main office and the Novato, Mill Valley and Southern Sonoma I-J offices.

The booklet, "Getting News Into Your Newspaper," is issued as a service of the Independent-Journal Women's Section to assist press chairmen for women's organizations.

The booklets at the San Rafael office may be obtained from the switchboard on the main floor.

Tam P-TA Leader Is Real Native

Mrs. George Kirkland, new president of the Tamalpais Valley Parent-Teacher Association, is not only a native of Tamalpais Valley but she still lives in the house where she was born.

A member of the organization four years, she says her most important objective for the coming year will be to increase the working membership.

Katherine Kirkland is a past president of the Star of the Sea Parlor, Native Daughters of the Golden West, and is active in the Star of the Sea Church in Sausalito and the Mill Valley Council of the Portuguese Protective Union of California.

Mrs. Kirkland is a graduate of Tamalpais High School. She and her husband, who is a securities trader with the firm of McDonald, Shobar and Miller in San Francisco, have three children, Kenneth, 8; Karen, 5 and Kristie, 4.

Katherine enjoys sewing and makes all of her own and the children's clothes. She also likes crafts work.

Other officers to be installed with the new president this month are Mmes. Richard Drever Jr., first vice president; R. H. Glenn, second vice president; Douglas Noren, recording secretary; Jesse Grove, corresponding secretary, and Vaughn Phillips, treasurer.

Therapy For Wife Alone Held Failure

Sex researchers Dr. William Masters and Virginia Johnson advise the thousands of American women with sexually troubled marriages who seek professional help without their husbands that they are probably wasting their time and their money.

"Therapy for the wife alone will not only fail to solve the problem but will probably make it worse," the famous team wrote in the May issue of Redbook magazine.

"When a marriage is jeopardized by sexual conflicts, in the vast majority of cases it's the wife who seeks counseling," Masters and Johnson said. The assumption that it is always the wife who needs help is so widespread that it goes unquestioned by most women who "all too often accept — or even volunteer for —the role of scapegoat."

But "a wife cannot be treated for a malady that afflicts the marriage relationship itself, any more than she can go for lessons by herself to learn how to dance with her husband — who isn't very graceful, can't keep time and has never enjoyed dancing," they argued.

Emphasizing the "destructiveness" of individual therapy, Masters and Johnson said that its failure "further erodes her (the wife's) self-esteem (and) consequently there is less chance than ever that she and her husband can overcome their sexual disharmony."

SEW SIMPLE

Side Seams For The Waist Area

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR EUNICE:

My shoulders are narrow, and I have a very small bust, but I still need a size 20½ size pattern. Please tell me how to reduce the size of the darts in the bust area?

MRS. S.A.F.

DEAR MRS. S.A.F.,

It sounds as if you are using a size that is too large for you, especially when you tell me your shoulders are very narrow. It is best to find a pattern that fits the upper part of your body, it is a simple matter to add to the side seams to enlarge the waist and hip area.

If you still fell you are using the correct size, be sure to fold a narrow dart out of the shoulder, tapering to nothing about 6 inches below the shoulder, to correct the shoulder width. To reduce the shaping caused by the large bust darts, perhaps you only need half the width of the dart. Just draw a new line for your dart. If the dart is at the underarm of your dress, this will cause the bodice to become slightly longer at the sides. Perhaps there is too much length as it is. After you have changed the size of the darts, try the dress on, tie a string tightly around the waist, allow for a slight amount of ease and mark the correct waistline length.

Firemen Praised For Rescue Work

Two neighbors and a fireman who risked their lives to save a Terra Linda housewife trapped in her blazing home April 30, have been sent letters of commendation by Terra Linda Fire Chief George A. Walser.

Walser said the letters were written in behalf of the Terra Linda Community Services District to Ronald Tatum of 512 Whitewood Drive; Michael Alaimo of 528 Whitewood Drive, and Marinwood volunteer fireman Mitchell Lang of 2790 Heatherstone Drive.

The fire chief said the men helped rescue and revive Cornelia Regalia when flames broke out in her home at 515 Whitewood Drive, at 11:48 p.m. April 30.

Walser, who lives half a block from the Regalia home, raced to the scene when the alarm sounded in his own home. He arrived two minutes ahead of the first fire trucks, the chief said.

Mario Regalia, who had severely cut himself taking a daughter to safety through a window, told Walser Mrs. Regalia must still be inside, though he had thought she was following him.

Walser and neighbor Tatum entered the smoke-filled house to search, though they had no masks. They took turns groping through the hallway and kitchen, then going outside for fresh air. Alaimo also joined the search.

Walser and the firemen who had arrived by then "tried to knock the fire back into the kitchen" with hoses, to aid the search.

Tatum finally found Mrs. Regalia on the master bedroom floor and dragged her to another bedroom farther from the flames, Walser said. Alaimo found Tatum nearly overcome by smoke, and helped him remove Mrs. Regalia, the chief said.

Mrs. Regalia was not breathing and had no heartbeat. Lang, a passerby, applied mouth-to-mouth resuscitation and chest massage until Terra Linda fireman James Alvarado brought the department's portable resuscitator unit into use. She was revived after about four minutes, Walser said, and rushed by ambulance to Marin General Hospital.

Mrs. Regalia's husband and two daughters, Sally and Patty were treated for cuts, Walser said. Sally, who had been staying overnight at a neighbor's home, was injured trying to get into the blazing house to help hunt for her mother.

Chief Walser said the fire may have smoldered 24 hours or longer inside the structure. It started behind a faulty fireplace lining, he said. Heaviest damage was to the living room and kitchen; Walser said the damage was estimated at $25,000 to the home and $15,000 to its contents. A car in the carpot could not be moved because of antitheft devices and also was damaged, Walser said.

Marinite To Prison In LSD Case

I-J Special Report

UKIAH — The last Marin man to be sentenced in connection with a huge LSD raid in Fort Bragg last June yesterday was sent to state prison.

Judge Kenneth M. Eyemann of Sonoma County sitting in Mendocino Superior Court sentenced Michael B. Alwyn, 23, of San Rafael, to a term of one to 10 years for possessing the illegal drug.

Alwyn had also been found guilty by a jury in March of conspiracy to make LSD and attempting to manufacture it, but the judge suspended sentences on those two counts while the case is appealed.

Also sent to prison earlier were Craig B. Champie, 21, of Fairfax, and Timothy Wayne Buler, 24, of Forest Knolls. John Rene Rodigou, 22, of San Rafael, was sent to the California Rehabilitation Center for drug addiction treatment.

The men were arrested June 16 along with three other persons in what police described as a $3 million LSD ring raid.

RAP SESSION

Not Unpleased By His Elders

By PAT ANGLE
(12th in a series of 24 raps)

Curtis Spurlin believes the young have surpassed their elders and taken over the lead in creative thought and reform movements in this country.

But the 23-year-old teacher at Bolinas School is also convinced young people owe a great deal to those who were here before them. "We have learned everything we know from older people," Spurlin said. "They have taught us how the system works, how to keep it running and how to work within it for the changes we want."

Although many of his contemporaries feel the young should simply forget about the old and wait for them to die off and get out of the way, Spurlin disagrees. He does not think people should be judged by age — or appearance — and said both age groups are guilty of making such snap judgements.

"Because I have long hair, some people won't really listen to what I have to say," he said. "In the same way, I tend to pick up hitchhikers who have long hair."

He said most persons over 30 still aspire to many American ideals, such as freedom and equality and "they are very sincere, just as we are." But young people grow up with a rosy picture of an America where all is well and good, he said, a picture encouraged by the schools. "Then young people find out what is really happening and they get turned off," he added.

Spurlin said the young should not forget than many older people have known depression and war in their lifetimes and "are tremendously pleased with what they have now, their little home in suburbia, their peaceful existence." By the same token, he feels the old should not become so angry at the young people who seek changes and view them as threats to their way of life.

The only way to bridge the chasm created by such superficial stereotyping, according to the teacher, is for the young and old to make a real effort to get better acquainted. "I would like to work with older people and show them what I can do and learn what they can do," he said. "And, by sharing, perhaps we can get together and solve some of our mutual problems."

Although Spurlin has chosen to work within the system, he is deeply distressed by many of the things he sees happening in this country.

He deplores what he termed "institutionalized racism," keeping the country's "institutions (such as schools) geared for the white middle class to the exclusion of minorities and the poor." Also disturbing to Spurlin is the lack of respect he finds many Americans have for other cultures, particularly the black culture.

This racism, he believes, creates the largest gap in America today, the gap between "people who have had all the material things and the people who don't have them and still aspire to have what the haves have."

Changing the things that are wrong with the country will be a long, hard task, the teacher believes. "Getting angry doesn't do any good because you just get stepped on and people don't listen to you when you are angry," he said. "And, if you keep asking and asking for reforms and demanding changes, people get tired of your asking and demanding and they don't listen to you either."

He added: "If you use violence you lose too, because the Establishment has more power."

Spurlin feels he can help by exposing his students, who live far removed from the ghetto and its problems, to other cultures and different kinds of people. "Through education, I see my children waking up to many facts and problems which their parents never laid on them," he said with satisfaction.

"It's not enough to go around saying 'Peace and Love, brother,'' Spurlin feels. "You have to realize your survival is at stake and really starting doing something about it."

45 S. Sonoma Seniors Awarded Scholarships

Forty-five Southern Sonoma High School students and two from Marin have been awarded Frank P. and Polly O'Meara Doyle scholarships for the 1971-72 year at Santa Rosa Junior College.

The awards, which went to a total of 320 students, range from $100 to $1,000, based on scholastic ability and financial need.

Tomales High School — Daniel Furlong and Valentina Vera Aktsinov.

A Paper Memo Used To Report Growing Files

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Deputy Defense Secretary David Packard said Thursday the Pentagon was being inundated with paper and that something had to be done about it.

So he ordered an immediate campaign to clean out overstuffed files —he cited a figure of 12 million cubic feet of records in Defense Department offices —and halted further purchases of new filing equipment until the end of 1973.

"We are accumulating more records than we get rid of by retirement or destruction," Packard told Pentagon employees. "This has created a requirement for purchasing new filing equipment each year just to satisfy the increase. We cannot afford to let this trend continue."

Burglary Count Arraignment

Ronald Berg Goodrich, 21, of Larkspur, was arraigned yesterday in Marin Municipal Court on a charge of burglary.

Goodrich was arrested Wednesday after he and another man were reported seen leaving a Corte Madera home, police said.

The other man escaped, but in Goodrich's pocket were several half dollars believed stolen from another Corte Madera residence early Wednesday, according to police.

Marin Fifth In Property Tax Rate

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — Marin County had the fifth highest average property tax rate of any California county, the 16th highest assessed valuation, and taxed its property owners the 12th highest for 1970-71, State Board of Equalization member William M. Bennett of Kentfield reported yesterday.

Marin's total property taxes during the 1970-71 fiscal year amounted to $68.3 million, or $328.52 per person. The average property tax rate in the county came to 11.31 per $100 assessed valuation, up 60 cents from fiscal 1969-70, Bennett reported. Statewide, the average county's tax rate rose 93 cents to $10.85 per $100 assessed valuation.

The per captita tax burden rose from $248 to $284 statewide.

In only seven California counties did school districts get a larger share of the property tax dollar. In Marin County, schools got 61 cents of each property tax dollar; statewide the average was 52 cents.

Marin's property tax dollar was split to give the county government 24 cents, cities 8 cents and special districts 7 cents. All of the shares except special district and schools were below statewide norms.

Of the total property tax collected in Marin, the schools got $41.7 million, the cities $5.7 million, the county $16.4 million and special districts $4.5 million, Bennett reported.

Chamber Group At Dominican Slates Concert

The Dominican College Chamber Orchestra conducted by Richard Anastasio will present the second concert of the academic year at 8 p.m. Friday in Angelico Hall on the San Rafael campus.

The program will include Mozart's Concerto No. 3, K.V. 216, with violinist Noriko Sano as guest soloist; Prokofieff's Classical Symphony, Opus, 25; Mendelssohn's Concerto In E Minor, Opus 64, with violinist Mark Jordan as soloist, and Mozart's Symphony No. 41.

Pollution Control Aide To Speak

Paul Brand, an enforcement officer with the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District, will speak at a meeting of the Sonoma County Mayors' and Councilmen's Association Thursday in Petaluma.

The southern portion of the county is to join the district July 1.

The meeting, at Sonoma Joe's restaurant, will begin with cocktails at 6:30 p.m., followed by a 7 p.m. dinner.

Dunn's Collegians Reach New Heights In A World Premiere

By JAMES E. WILLIAMS

"PSALMS OF TWO DAVIDS" — Play in two parts by Joel Schwartz; directed by James Dunn; settings and costumes by Alonso D. Gonzalez; lighting by Ronald Krempertz; music by Thomas Buckner. The cast: Part One: Samuel, Reynold Acevedo; King Saul, Gregory Norgaard; Jonathan, John Evans, Michal, Pamela Contos, and David (as a young man), Joel Blum. Part Two: Nathan, Reynold Acevedo; King David, Mark Rasmussen' Absalom, John Evans; Tamar, Pamela Contos, and Amnon, Robin Williams. Chorus: Rick Casorla, J. W. Harper, Shelly Lipkin, Howard McMaster, Denise Orr, Alice Rorvik, H. J. Susser, Roxanne Wilkinson; soldiers; John Chapot, Alan Monroe, Todd Norris, Louis Parnell, Ernie Shelton, Reg Woods; musician, Wayne Burke and property men, Alan Kernan, Bruce Swenson.

The College of Marin drama department reached a new height last night in its already illustrious career with the world premiere of Joel Schwartz's "Psalms of Two Davids."

It is without a doubt the most interesting evening of theater that I have encountered this season and chalks up another star by the side of director James Dunn's name.

Presented under the auspices of the Rockefeller Foundation's Office for Advance Drama Research, it gives the chance for a look at a highly promising young New York playwright.

Stated simply it was a first rate job. No better theater can be found in the Bay Area, even overshadowing the few excellent presentations this season by the American Conservatory Theater of San Francisco.

Those are big words, but to see is to believe.

The playwright — in what he terms his first "historical" drama — uses the Old Testament as the primary source, tracing the development of David, the young shepherd-king of Israel from his youth in King Saul's court to his maturity and his spiritual crisis.

David's plight seems familiar to modern man and Schwartz's dialogue is highly imaginative and becomes more refined as the play progresses. It's very seldom that I find myself so immersed in a production that I hate to see it end — but 'David'' does just that.

In a design to keep the pace of the play at a constant peak and not lose the impact of Schwartz's line, Dunn and his production team hit upon a brilliant idea — the use of the economical Kabuki Theater style where a principal set is used, thus giving a chance for greater development of the play's inner qualities.

As David in his reign, Mark Rasmussen had an inner quality that I have not seen in his acting before. The struggle of this Godly man, torn between love, duty and divine guidance is a tapestry of Rasmussen's talent in diction, understanding and movement.

Joel Blum, who is David as a young man in Part One of the play, is on equal footing with Rasmussen. His vocal training paid off handsomely in his songs to Saul and his graceful stage manner produced the serenity needed.

Joining the pair for another brava performance was Gregory Norgaard, as the aging and insane King Saul. His lamentations were almost perfect.

John Evans as both Jonathan, son of Saul, and as David's son Absalom was also a present surprise as well as was Pamela Contos as Saul's daughter Michal and David's ill-fated daughter Tamar. Robin Williams as Amnon was pitifully correct and Reynold Acevedo carried off the roles of the prophets Samuel and Nathan very well.

The supporting characters, who remain on the stage throughout the performance, add greatly to the innovative style of short sequences — the major key to the play's swiftness.

Again Alonso D. Gonzalez's settings and costumes are of the highest quality backed by restful lighting by Ronald Kermpetz and stylized music by Thomas Buckner. Also Edward K. Schoon's technical and stage construction assistance was clearly evident.

I stronly urge serious theater patrons to make an effort to see this engrossing play. It will be presented again today at 8 o'clock in the college's Fine Arts Building Theater and next Tuesday through Saturday at the same time.

Drug Case To Superior Court

Three men arrested in a 1969 raid on a Tamalpais Valley motel have been bound over to Marin Superior Court on dope charges.

Ordered to appear in superior court May 24 were David Stuart King, 26, of Billings, Mont.; Jeffrey David Wyard, 26, of Missoula, Mont., and George S. Garr, 23, of no known address.

They were arrested in a Dec. 16, 1969, raid on the Fountain Motel in which narcotics agents said they seized more than $24,000 worth of hashish.

King and Wyard are charged with possessing the drug for sale, and Garr is accused of possessing it.

Firemen Praised For Rescue Work

Two neighbors and a fireman who risked their lives to save a Terra Linda housewife trapped in her blazing home April 30, have been sent letters of commendation by Terra Linda Fire Chief George A. Walser.

Walser said the letters were written in behalf of the Terra Linda Community Services District to Ronald Tatum of 512 Whitewood Drive; Michael Alaimo of 528 Whitewood Drive, and Marinwood volunteer fireman Mitchell Lang of 2790 Heatherstone Drive.

The fire chief said the men helped rescue and revive Cornelia Regalia when flames broke out in her home at 515 Whitewood Drive, at 11:48 p.m. April 30.

Walser, who lives half a block from the Regalia home, raced to the scene when the alarm sounded in his own home. He arrived two minutes ahead of the first fire trucks, the chief said.

Mario Regalia, who had severely cut himself taking a daughter to safety through a window, told Walser Mrs. Regalia must still be inside, though he had thought she was following him.

Walser and neighbor Tatum entered the smoke-filled house to search, though they had no masks. They took turns groping through the hallway and kitchen, then going outside for fresh air. Alaimo also joined the search.

Walser and the firemen who had arrived by then "tried to knock the fire back into the kitchen" with hoses, to aid the search.

Tatum finally found Mrs. Regalia on the master bedroom floor and dragged her to another bedroom farther from the flames, Walser said. Alaimo found Tatum nearly overcome by smoke, and helped him remove Mrs. Regalia, the chief said.

Mrs. Regalia was not breathing and had no heartbeat. Lang, a passerby, applied mouth-to-mouth resuscitation and chest massage until Terra Linda fireman James Alvarado, brought the department's portable resuscitator unit into use. She was revived after about four minutes, Walser said, and rushed by ambulance to Marin General Hospital.

Mrs. Regalia's husband and two daughters, Sally and Patty were treated for cuts, Walser said. Sally, who had been staying overnight at a neighbor's home, was injured trying to get into the blazing house to help hunt for her mother.

Chief Walser said the fire may have smoldered 24 hours or longer inside the structure. It started behind a faulty fireplace lining, he said. Heaviest damage was to the living room and kitchen; Walser said the damage was estimated at $25,000 to the home and $15,000 to its contents. A car in the carpot could not be moved because of antitheft devices and also was damaged, Walser said.

Marinite To Prison In LSD Case

I-J Special Report

UKIAH — The last Marin man to be sentenced in connection with a huge LSD raid in Fort Bragg last June yesterday was sent to state prison.

Judge Kenneth M. Eyemann of Sonoma County sitting in Mendocino Superior Court sentenced Michael B. Alwyn, 23, of San Rafael, to a term of one to 10 years for possessing the illegal drug.

Alwyn had also been found guilty by a jury in March of conspiracy to make LSD and attempting to manufacture it, but the judge suspended sentences on those two counts while the case is appealed.

Also sent to prison earlier were Craig B. Champie, 21, of Fairfax, and Timothy Wayne Buler, 24, of Forest Knolls. John Rene Rodigou, 22, of San Rafael, was sent to the California Rehabilitation Center for drug addiction treatment.

The men were arrested June 16 along with three other persons in what police described as a $3 million LSD ring raid.

Supermarkets Stock Over 6,000 Items

NEW YORK (UPI)—The average supermarket is bulging with 6,000 to 8,000 food items.

Of the thousands of items in the grocery, 60 per cent have been introduced since World War II. More than 5,000 new items come along annually.

RAP SESSION

Not Unpleased By His Elders

By PAT ANGLE
(12th in a series of 24 raps)

Curtis Spurlin believes the young have surpassed their elders and taken over the lead in creative thought and reform movements in this country.

But the 23-year-old teacher at Bolinas School is also convinced young people owe a great deal to those who were here before them. "We have learned everything we know from older people," Spurlin said. "They have taught us how the system works, how to keep it running and how to work within it for the changes we want."

Although many of his contemporaries feel the young should simply forget about the old and wait for them to die off and get out of the way, Spurlin disagrees. He does not think people should be judged by age — or appearance — and said both age groups are guilty of making such snap judgements.

"Because I have long hair, some people won't really listen to what I have to say," he said. "In the same way, I tend to pick up hitchhikers who have long hair."

He said most persons over 30 still aspire to many American ideals, such as freedom and equality and "they are very sincere, just as we are." But young people grow up with a rosy picture of an America where all is well and good, he said, a picture encouraged by the schools. "Then young people find out what is really happening and they get turned off," he added.

Spurlin said the young should not forget than many older people have known depression and war in their lifetimes and "are tremendously pleased with what they have now, their little home in suburbia, their peaceful existence." By the same token, he feels the old should not become so angry at the young people who seek changes and view them as threats to their way of life.

The only way to bridge the chasm created by such superficial stereotyping, according to the teacher, is for the young and old to make a real effort to get better acquainted. "I would like to work with older people and show them what I can do and learn what they can do," he said. "And, by sharing, perhaps we can get together and solve some of our mutual problems."

Although Spurlin has chosen to work within the system, he is deeply distressed by many of the things he sees happening in this country.

He deplores what he termed "institutionalized racism," keeping the country's "institutions (such as schools) geared for the white middle class to the exclusion of minorities and the poor." Also disturbing to Spurlin is the lack of respect he finds many Americans have for other cultures, particularly the black culture.

This racism, he believes, creates the largest gap in America today, the gap between "people who have had all the material things and the people who don't have them and still aspire to have what the haves have."

Changing the things that are wrong with the country will be a long, hard task, the teacher believes. "Getting angry doesn't do any good because you just get stepped on and people don't listen to you when you are angry," he said. "And, if you keep asking and asking for reforms and demanding changes, people get tired of your asking and demanding and they don't listen to you either."

He added: "If you use violence you lose too, because the Establishment has more power."

Spurlin feels he can help by exposing his students, who live far removed from the ghetto and its problems, to other cultures and different kinds of people. "Through education, I see my children waking up to many facts and problems which their parents never laid on them," he said with satisfaction.

"It's not enough to go around saying 'Peace and Love, brother," Spurlin feels. "You have to realize your survival is at stake and really starting doing something about it."

45 S. Sonoma Seniors Awarded Scholarships

Forty-five Southern Sonoma High School students and two from Marin have been awarded Frank P. and Polly O'Meara Doyle scholarships for the 1971-72 year at Santa Rosa Junior College.

The awards, which went to a total of 320 students, range from $100 to $1,000, based on scholastic ability and financial need.

Southern Sonoma recipients are:

St. Vincent High School, Petaluma — Angela Leoni and Patricia Dettling.

Tomales High School — Daniel Furlong and Valentina Vera Aktsinov.

A Paper Memo Used To Report Growing Files

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Deputy Defense Secretary David Packard said Thursday the Pentagon was being inundated with paper and that something had to be done about it.

So he ordered an immediate campaign to clean out overstuffed files —he cited a figure of 12 million cubic feet of records in Defense Department offices —and halted further purchases of new filing equipment until the end of 1973.

"We are accumulating more records than we get rid of by retirement or destruction," Packard told Pentagon employees. "This has created a requirement for purchasing new filing equipment each year just to satisfy the increase. We cannot afford to let this trend continue."

Burglary Count Arraignment

Ronald Berg Goodrich, 21, of Larkspur, was arraigned yesterday in Marin Municipal Court on a charge of burglary.

Goodrich was arrested Wednesday after he and another man were reported seen leaving a Corte Madera home, police said.

The other man escaped, but in Goodrich's pocket were several half dollars believed stolen from another Corte Madera residence early Wednesday, according to police.

Marin Fifth In Property Tax Rate

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — Marin County had the fifth highest average property tax rate of any California county, the 16th highest assessed valuation, and taxed its property owners the 12th highest for 1970-71, State Board of Equalization member William M. Bennett of Kentfield reported yesterday.

Marin's total property taxes during the 1970-71 fiscal year amounted to $68.3 million, or $328.52 per person. The average property tax rate in the county came to 11.31 per $100 assessed valuation, up 60 cents from fiscal 1969-70, Bennett reported. Statewide, the average county's tax rate rose 93 cents to $10.85 per $100 assessed valuation.

The per captita tax burden rose from $248 to $284 statewide.

In only seven California counties did school districts get a larger share of the property tax dollar. In Marin County, schools got 61 cents of each property tax dollar; statewide the average was 52 cents.

Marin's property tax dollar was split to give the county government 24 cents, cities 8 cents and special districts 7 cents. All of the shares except special district and schools were below statewide norms.

Of the total property tax collected in Marin, the schools got $41.7 million, the cities $5.7 million, the county $16.4 million and special districts $4.5 million, Bennett reported.

Chamber Group At Dominican Slates Concert

The Dominican College Chamber Orchestra conducted by Richard Anastasio will present the second concert of the academic year at 8 p.m. Friday in Angelico Hall on the San Rafael campus.

The program will include Mozart's Concerto No. 3, K.V. 216, with violinist Noriko Sano as guest soloist; Prokofieff's Classical Symphony, Opus, 25; Mendelssohn's Concerto In E Minor, Opus 64, with violinist Mark Jordan as soloist, and Mozart's Symphony No. 41.

Pollution Control Aide To Speak

Paul Brand, an enforcement officer with the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District, will speak at a meeting of the Sonoma County Mayors' and Councilmen's Association Thursday in Petaluma.

The southern portion of the county is to join the district July 1.

The meeting, at Sonoma Joe's restaurant, will begin with cocktails at 6:30 p.m., followed by a 7 p.m. dinner.

REALTORS

$18,000	DOWNTOWN NOVATO - Older one bedroom livable "as is" and located on 50'x150' level commercially zoned lot. Owner has instructed, "Sell it!"
$18,950	BOLINAS - Four blocks from ocean! Two bedroom freshly painted home ready for the buyer to move in! Ideal for the retired couple or as a starter home, OR AS A SECOND HOME/COTTAGE. As an investment property, it probably will rent for $185 per month. "Move it out", said the man!
$25,000	DOWNTOWN NOVATO - Two bedroom older home in sound condition, located on 50'x150' level commercially zoned lot. Valuable street frontage area!
$25,950	NOVATO - LIVE ON SHADY LANE (Somebody should write a song about that! So they did!) Anyway, you'll find the place freshly painted, clean, featuring 3 bedrooms, 2 baths, 1960 model, located on level lot with creek bordering rear property line. It's worth the price! See it and buy it. Owner is moving.
$27,750	DOWNTOWN NOVATO - Another older home for "Mr. Fixit" to add to his collection of investment properties, located on a 50'x150' level commercially zoned lot. Possible future appreciation potential in the land alone. Grab it!
$29,950	DOWNTOWN NOVATO - Remodeled three bedroom, kitchen, bath, utility room, living room with fireplace, dining room, all on a 50'x150' level commercially zoned lot. Partial basement for storage makes this a roomy house. Two-car detached carport (formerly called a garage). Owner hates to part with it for sentimental reasons.
$33,500	SUMMER'S COMING ON IN NOVATO - And you'll enjoy living in this 3 bedroom, 1965 model, on 100' x 100' lot, featuring 2 bathrooms, large patio, partially enclosed for the in-door outdoor bar-B-Q specialist.
$35,450	BUYS YOU A REMODELED HOME IN FAIRFAX! Two story 3 bedroom 1½ bathrooms, family room, fireplace, workshop area, utility room, and large kitchen. All on 50'x150' level lot.
$35,950.	FOUR BEDROOM, NOVATO, CUL-DE-SAC STREET, featuring hardwood floors, two bathrooms, combination dining/family room, large patio for gourmet cook-outs, 10,200 sq. ft. level lot, all enclosed with fence, sprinklered rear lot, pool site, and close to all conveniences. TRY FHA AND/OR GI.
$35,950	A NOVATO EXCLUSIVE OFFERING of this fine 3 bedroom home, built by one of Northern California's top quality builders, featuring professional landscaping, convenient location, hardwood floors, dining room, family room, carpeting, breakfast bar, patio, level lot. SELLER WILL CONSIDER FHA OR GI POINTS.
$37,950	NOVATO FIVE BEDROOM HOME, built in 1956, with heated and filtered pool plus roll-down sides, 2 bathrooms, family room, dining room, breakfast area, drapes and carpets go with the deal.
$37,950	MOVES YOU ONTO THIS FIVE ACRE RANCH in Marin County, yet 18 miles westerly from Petaluma. Need a map? The home was built in 1969, featuring 2 bedrooms, family room, formal separate dining room, breakfast area, sunken living room, shag carpeting, electric kitchen including double oven and disposal, storage building, small barn, all only minutes from the coastal resort area.
$40,500	IN NOVATO'S BETTER SOUTHWEST AREA, hill views, four bedroom, nicely landscaped lawn, deck and patio areas, manicured lawn, and inside you find the all electric kitchen, living room, family room, dining room, and two bathrooms, plus plush wall to wall carpeting. IT'S MOTHER'S DAY EVERY DAY HERE!
$42,950	ANOTHER SAN MARIN HOME AT HICKS & ASSOCIATES FEATURES 4 bedrooms, family room, dining room, breakfast area, 2 bathrooms, 2 showers, wall to wall carpeting, large deck, fenced, minimum care required for lawn, tile counter tops in kitchen. This is a charmer!
$44,950	NOVATO HILLS DISTRICT OFFERS VIEWS plus conveniences of quiet neighborhood, quality construction, and clean air in this four bedroom, 2½ bath, two fireplaces, large family room, large living room, laundry room, deck, dining room, electric kitchen, carpeting, expansive window outlook, and many other desirable reasons for ownership. Will consider trade of equity or try FHA or GI.
$65,000	HORSE COUNTRY ON TEN ACRES with this older ranch home. It offers solitude and appreciation potential.
$67,500	MOVES YOU UP to the prime residential community of NOVATO. You'll enjoy approximately 2,700 sq. ft. of living area, including 4 bedrooms, 3 full bathrooms, electric kitchen equipped with red birch cabinets, fireplace in dining room, views from the living room, deck off master bedroom, patio for BAR-B-QUES on lower level, breakfast bar, spacious family room, two car garage plus boat or trailer storage space and big lot. THIS IS LIVING COUNTRY! FOR COUNTRY LIVING! WITH CITY CONVENIENCES!
$67,500	VIEWTIFUL VIEWS AND VUNDERFUL ENVIRONMENT AWAITS THE FAMILY having the ambition and foresight to make this investment! We think it is elegant. You'll not want to leave it after you have seen its approximately 3,700 sq. ft. of living and storage area featuring 3 bedrooms, 3 baths, approx. 1,100 sq. ft. of decks, dining room, living room with fireplace, family room with fireplace, deck over the two-car garage and garage door opens by electronic device, last house at the top of the street, built to customized design by present owner. Not only is it worthy of its new buyer - Pardner, it's so solid it's seaworthy too!!!!

"WHAT THIS COUNTRY NEEDS IS MORE HOMEOWNERS"

AND

WE RECOMMEND HENRY L. HICKS AND ASSOCIATES REALTORS

$18,000 DOWNTOWN NOVATO - Older one bedroom livable "as is" and located on 50'x150' level commercially zoned lot. Owner has instructed, "Sell it!"

$18,950 BOLINAS - Four blocks from ocean! Two bedroom freshly painted home ready for the buyer to move in! Ideal for the retired couple or as a starter home, OR AS A SECOND HOME/COTTAGE. As an investment property, it probably will rent for $185 per month. "Move it out", said the man!

$25,000 DOWNTOWN NOVATO - Two bedroom older home in sound condition, located on 50'x150' level commercially zoned lot. Valuable street frontage area!

$25,950 NOVATO - LIVE ON SHADY LANE (Somebody should write a song about that! So they did!) Anyway, you'll find the place freshly painted, clean, featuring 3 bedrooms, 2 baths, 1960 model, located on level lot with creek bordering rear property line. It's worth the price! See it and buy it. Owner is moving.

$27,750 DOWNTOWN NOVATO - Another older home for "Mr. Fixit" to add to his collection of investment properties, located on a 50'x150' level commercially zoned lot. Possible future appreciation potential in the land alone. Grab it!

$29,950 DOWNTOWN NOVATO - Remodeled three bedroom, kitchen, bath, utility room, living room with fireplace, dining room, all on a 50'x150' level commercially zoned lot. Partial basement for storage makes this a roomy house. Two-car detached carport (formerly called a garage). Owner hates to part with it for sentimental reasons.

$35,450 BUYS YOU A REMODELED HOME IN FAIRFAX! Two story 3 bedroom 1½ bathrooms, family room, fireplace, workshop area, utility room, and large kitchen. All on 50'x150' level lot.

$35,950. FOUR BEDROOM, NOVATO, CUL-DE-SAC STREET, featuring hardwood floors, two bathrooms, combination dining/family room, large patio for gourmet cook-outs, 10,200 sq. ft. level lot, all enclosed with fence, sprinklered rear lot, pool site, and close to all conveniences. TRY FHA AND/OR GI.

$35,950 A NOVATO EXCLUSIVE OFFERING of this fine 3 bedroom home, built by one of Northern California's top quality builders, featuring professional landscaping, convenient location, hardwood floors, dining room, family room, carpeting, breakfast bar, patio, level lot. SELLER WILL CONSIDER FHA OR GI POINTS.

$37,950 NOVATO FIVE BEDROOM HOME, built in 1956, with heated and filtered pool plus roll-down sides, 2 bathrooms, family room, dining room, breakfast area, drapes and carpets go with the deal.

$37,950 MOVES YOU ONTO THIS FIVE ACRE RANCH in Marin County, yet 18 miles westerly from Petaluma. Need a map? The home was built in 1969, featuring 2 bedrooms, family room, formal separate dining room, breakfast area, sunken living room, shag carpeting, electric kitchen including double oven and disposal, storage building, small barn, all only minutes from the coastal resort area.

$42,950 ANOTHER SAN MARIN HOME AT HICKS & ASSOCIATES FEATURES 4 bedrooms, family room, dining room, breakfast area, 2 bathrooms, 2 showers, wall to wall carpeting, large deck, fenced, minimum care required for lawn, tile counter tops in kitchen. This is a charmer!

$44,950 NOVATO HILLS DISTRICT OFFERS VIEWS plus conveniences of quiet neighborhood, quality construction, and clean air in this four bedroom, 2½ bath, two fireplaces, large family room, large living room, laundry room, deck, dining room, electric kitchen, carpeting, expansive window outlook, and many other desirable reasons for ownership. Will consider trade of equity or try FHA or GI.

$65,000 HORSE COUNTRY ON TEN ACRES with this older ranch home. It offers solitude and appreciation potential.

$67,500 MOVES YOU UP to the prime residential community of NOVATO. You'll enjoy approximately 2,700 sq. ft. of living area, including 4 bedrooms, 3 full bathrooms, electric kitchen equipped with red birch cabinets, fireplace in dining room, views from the living room, deck off master bedroom, patio for BAR-B-QUES on lower level, breakfast bar, spacious family room, two car garage plus boat or trailer storage space and big lot. THIS IS LIVING COUNTRY! FOR COUNTRY LIVING! WITH CITY CONVENIENCES!

$67,500 VIEWTIFUL VIEWS AND VUNDERFUL ENVIRONMENT AWAITS THE FAMILY having the ambition and foresight to make this investment! We think it is elegant. You'll not want to leave it after you have seen its approximately 3,700 sq. ft. of living and storage area featuring 3 bedrooms, 3 baths, approx. 1,100 sq. ft. of decks, dining room, living room with fireplace, family room with fireplace, deck over the two-car garage and garage door opens by electronic device, last house at the top of the street, built to customized design by present owner. Not only is it worthy of its new buyer - Pardner, it's so solid it's seaworthy too!!!!

AT PRICES AND VALUES ADVERTISED ABOVE, WE BELIEVE YOU WILL BE ABLE TO FULFILL ALL OF YOUR REAL ESTATE NEEDS AT THE OFFICES OF HICKS AND ASSOCIATES - WHERE INTEGRITY COUNTS FIRST, LAST, AND FOREMOST. Inverness-Point Reyes—1943

Spectacular, large, 3 bedroom, 2 bath home with fully equipped kitchen, dishwasher, garbage disposal, etc. Located on one acre which runs from Portola Road, Inverness, through to Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, overlooking thousands of acres of pasture on the valley floor and to Black Mountain. The house has a unique setting among a large grove of beautiful mature trees. The basement could be developed into many more rooms very easily. An outstanding buy for only $36,500.

Inverness Ridge retreat, one acre plus, among the pines with a full panoramic view over Limantour Spit, Drakes Bay, Point Reyes headlands, Farallon Islands and the whole Pacific, and that's just one view from the southwest side of the house. Looking the other way, you're looking right down on the National Seashore headquarters, Bear Valley Road and the old town of Olema with a glimpse on clear days of San Francisco. You can enjoy all this while living in a well-built, 2 bedroom, 1 bath home, all rooms generous in size with living room, dining room extra large. Large, attached double garage. Lots of fruit trees and pine trees with most of the acre almost level. There are very few locations along the Inverness Ridge that command the vista of this home. Well-priced for only $42,500.

Inverness mesa 3-story chalet set high among the Bishop pines with beautiful wood paneling throughout, open-beam ceilings, generous decks. This older home nearly completely remodeled recently, taking full advantage of all the charm of the unique older Inverness cabins. First floor, 1 bedroom; second floor, large living room plus 2 bedrooms, bath and kitchen with beautiful sundecks; third floor, private outside entrance, quite lovely attic loft sleeping room. Gets lots of sun all day. $31,500. Shown by appointment only.

We are looking for someone who appreciates and loves Shell Beach and whose children will use this unique semi-private beach that was originally set up for the enjoyment and use of Inverness residents. Also, this person or persons will have to have always wanted a beautiful building lot that is quite close to Shell Beach and has a giant oak that needs climbing and a good place for a tree house. Also, this lot should have other woods, but not too many, a nice meadow area for the house that will have a beautiful view down over Chicken Ranch Beach of Tomales Bay. Naturally, all this must have sun all day long till late into the afternoon. If all of this fits any of your fantasies, give us a call, because we have a beautiful lot that meets all of the above requirements. For only $12,500.

Perfect home or weekend retreat on Inverness ridge, 2 bedrooms, large living room-dining room, nice fireplace, lots of glass, full decks, all set on an acre plus overlooking Mt. Wittenburg, Bear Valley, Drakes Bay, Farallon Islands and Point Reyes. There is an additional area downstairs over half the size of the whole house partially finished with all the rough plumbing in, windows and floors finished; it would take very little effort to finish off two more bedrooms with an additional bathroom and laundry room. Priced well under its true value. For only $32,000.

Spectacular, large, 3 bedroom, 2 bath home with fully equipped kitchen, dishwasher, garbage disposal, etc. Located on one acre which runs from Portola Road, Inverness, through to Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, overlooking thousands of acres of pasture on the valley floor and to Black Mountain. The house has a unique setting among a large grove of beautiful mature trees. The basement could be developed into many more rooms very easily. An outstanding buy for only $36,500.

Inverness Ridge retreat, one acre plus, among the pines with a full panoramic view over Limantour Spit, Drakes Bay, Point Reyes headlands, Farallon Islands and the whole Pacific, and that's just one view from the southwest side of the house. Looking the other way, you're looking right down on the National Seashore headquarters, Bear Valley Road and the old town of Olema with a glimpse on clear days of San Francisco. You can enjoy all this while living in a well-built, 2 bedroom, 1 bath home, all rooms generous in size with living room, dining room extra large. Large, attached double garage. Lots of fruit trees and pine trees with most of the acre almost level. There are very few locations along the Inverness Ridge that command the vista of this home. Well-priced for only $42,500.

Inverness mesa 3-story chalet set high among the Bishop pines with beautiful wood paneling throughout, open-beam ceilings, generous decks. This older home nearly completely remodeled recently, taking full advantage of all the charm of the unique older Inverness cabins. First floor, 1 bedroom; second floor, large living room plus 2 bedrooms, bath and kitchen with beautiful sundecks; third floor, private outside entrance, quite lovely attic loft sleeping room. Gets lots of sun all day. $31,500. Shown by appointment only.

We are looking for someone who appreciates and loves Shell Beach and whose children will use this unique semi-private beach that was originally set up for the enjoyment and use of Inverness residents. Also, this person or persons will have to have always wanted a beautiful building lot that is quite close to Shell Beach and has a giant oak that needs climbing and a good place for a tree house. Also, this lot should have other woods, but not too many, a nice meadow area for the house that will have a beautiful view down over Chicken Ranch Beach of Tomales Bay. Naturally, all this must have sun all day long till late into the afternoon. If all of this fits any of your fantasies, give us a call, because we have a beautiful lot that meets all of the above requirements. For only $12,500.

Perfect home or weekend retreat on Inverness ridge, 2 bedrooms, large living room-dining room, nice fireplace, lots of glass, full decks, all set on an acre plus overlooking Mt. Wittenburg, Bear Valley, Drakes Bay, Farallon Islands and Point Reyes. There is an additional area downstairs over half the size of the whole house partially finished with all the rough plumbing in, windows and floors finished; it would take very little effort to finish off two more bedrooms with an additional bathroom and laundry room. Priced well under its true value. For only $32,000.

Round On Agriculture Lot Sizes

Should the minimum lot size on county land now zoned agricultural be increased to half acre, to two acres, or somewhere in between?

That question will be discussed by the Marin County Planning Commissioners Monday morning at their regular meeting at the Civic Center.

At present, agricultural land can be divided into lots of 7,500 square feet. County Planning Director Werner Von Gundell recommended that the minimum be raised to two acres, but commissioners rejected that by a 4 to 3 vote on April 26. They decided to discuss the question again tomorrow to see if they can agree on a size somewhere between a half acre and two acres.

Other items on the commission agenda include:

NICASIO SUBDIVISION — A request by Cirilo Gonzales to rezone his ranch on the south side of Lucas Valley Road, east of Nicasio. He wants 164 acres zoned for minimum five-acre lots, and agreed to a minimum lot size of 20 acres on 220 acres of his property.

APARTMENTS — Transcalifornia Financial Corporation wants to build 66 units of apartments in Los Ranchitos, on the east side of Los Ranchitos Road at Glenside Way. Residents have filed protest.

WATER TANK — Allan-Marin Co., developer of Marinview subdivision in Tennessee Valley, wants to build a 20-foot high water tank with a capacity of 150,000 gallons on Countyview Drive in Marinview unit 3-A.

RANCHITOS ESTATES — San Rafael developer Paul H. Debes will submit a tentative subdivision map for six lots on 6.3 acres at the corner of Ranch Road and Ranchitos Road in Los Ranchitos.

RESURFACING OF VARIOUS ROADS-PROJECT NO. 074

MARIN COUNTY DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WORKS SAN RAFAEL, CALIFORNIA NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS INVITING SEALED PROPOSALS OR BIDS

Sealed Proposals shall be filed with George H. Gnoss, Clerk of the Board of Supervisors, Room 315, Marin County Civic Center, San Rafael, California, until 11:00 A.M., May 24, 1971, for:

Roadway improvement and resurfacing of various roads or portions of roads in Marin County, involving earth excavation and embankment, drainage facilities, asphalt concrete base and surface, adjusting manholes and inlets to grade, installing guard railings and marker posts, and other related items of work.

The work shall be done in accordance with official plans and specifications prepared in reference thereto which may be inspected at the office of the Department of Public Works, County of Marin, Room 304, Civic Center, San Rafael, California, and may be purchased for $3.00 per set (non-refundable). Mailed requests shall be addressed to the Department of Public Works, County of Marin, P.O. Box 4186, Civic Center, San Rafael, California, 94903. Checks should be made payable to the County of Marin.

Proposals will be opened and read at 11:00 A.M., in Room No. 332, Marin County Civic Center, on the day specified above.

The award of the contract, if it be awarded, will be to the lowest responsible bidder whose proposal complies with the requirements prescribed. The award, if made, will be made within thirty (30) days after the opening of the proposals.

The Board of Supervisors has made a determination of the prevailing rate of hourly wages applicable to the work to be performed. Copies of this determination are on file in the office of the County Clerk, Civic Center, Room 315, San Rafael, California, and are available to any interested party upon request. Copies may be obtained from the Department of Public Works, Room, 304, Civic Center.

The Board of Supervisors of the County of Marin reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

Magic Show Opens Tonight

Medieval magic will fill Vallecito School during the next two weekends as students and staff create a 600-year-old setting, including a musical fairy tale, "Once Upon a Mattress."

The show will be at 8 p.m. today, May 14 and 15 and at 7 p.m. May 16 at the school on 50 Nova Albion Way in San Rafael. Preceding the show for an hour is an old-time "faire" with strolling musicians, story tellers, arts, crafts, games, booths and a dancing bear.

Large Window At Shop Is Broken

A large window at Kabbalah, a shop located at 918 B Street in San Rafael, was broken yesterday, police reported.

They said the window was broken at 1 a.m. by William W. Fearn, 21, of 23 Vallejo Way, who was taken to Marin General Hospital with a badly cut hand. Fearn, according to police, said he was a former mental patient. He was not held and told police he could not explain why he broke the window.

Deadline Near On GI Bill Education Cards

Marin veterans attending school under the GI bill must return their certification of attendance cards to the veterans administration by the end of this month.

James V. Burdick, director of Marin's Veterans Services, said the certification of attendance cards will be sent to veterans along with the check for the month of May. That card must be filled out and returned to the V.A.

Failure to comply will stop payments on future monthly benefits, said Burdick. If neglected, the administration cannot prepare a final check for the current semester, and the student cannot automatically be enrolled under the program for the upcoming summer or fall semesters.

Tam High Students Have Art Exhibit

The art can be seen from 3 to 5 and 7 to 9 p.m. weekdays and from 2 to 5 p.m. Saturday.

Round On Agriculture Lot Sizes

Should the minimum lot size on county land now zoned agricultural be increased to half acre, to two acres, or somewhere in between?

That question will be discussed by the Marin County Planning Commissioners Monday morning at their regular meeting at the Civic Center.

At present, agricultural land can be divided into lots of 7,500 square feet. County Planning Director Werner Von Gundell recommended that the minimum be raised to two acres, but commissioners rejected that by a 4 to 3 vote on April 26. They decided to discuss the question again tomorrow to see if they can agree on a size somewhere between a half acre and two acres.

Other items on the commission agenda include:

NICASIO SUBDIVISION — A request by Cirilo Gonzales to rezone his ranch on the south side of Lucas Valley Road, east of Nicasio. He wants 164 acres zoned for minimum five-acre lots, and agreed to a minimum lot size of 20 acres on 220 acres of his property.

APARTMENTS — Transcalifornia Financial Corporation wants to build 66 units of apartments in Los Ranchitos, on the east side of Los Ranchitos Road at Glenside Way. Residents have filed protest.

WATER TANK — Allan-Marin Co., developer of Marinview subdivision in Tennessee Valley, wants to build a 20-foot high water tank with a capacity of 150,000 gallons on Countyview Drive in Marinview unit 3-A.

RANCHITOS ESTATES — San Rafael developer Paul H. Debes will submit a tentative subdivision map for six lots on 6.3 acres at the corner of Ranch Road and Ranchitos Road in Los Ranchitos.

OLIVE AVE. IMPROVEMENT-PROJECT NO. 083
SIR FRANCIS DRAKE BLVD. (LAGUNITAS) PROJECT NO. 070
RESURFACING OF VARIOUS ROADS-PROJECT NO. 074

MARIN COUNTY DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WORKS
SAN RAFAEL, CALIFORNIA
NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS INVITING SEALED PROPOSALS OR BIDS

Sealed Proposals shall be filed with George H. Gnoss, Clerk of the Board of Supervisors, Room 315, Marin County Civic Center, San Rafael, California, until 11:00 A.M., May 24, 1971, for:

Roadway improvement and resurfacing of various roads or portions of roads in Marin County, involving earth excavation and embankment, drainage facilities, asphalt concrete base and surface, adjusting manholes and inlets to grade, installing guard railings and marker posts, and other related items of work.

The work shall be done in accordance with official plans and specifications prepared in reference thereto which may be inspected at the office of the Department of Public Works, County of Marin, Room 304, Civic Center, San Rafael, California, and may be purchased for $3.00 per set (non-refundable). Mailed requests shall be addressed to the Department of Public Works, County of Marin, P.O. Box 4186, Civic Center, San Rafael, California, 94903. Checks should be made payable to the County of Marin.

Proposals will be opened and read at 11:00 A.M., in Room No. 332, Marin County Civic Center, on the day specified above.

The award of the contract, if it be awarded, will be to the lowest responsible bidder whose proposal complies with the requirements prescribed. The award, if made, will be made within thirty (30) days after the opening of the proposals.

The Board of Supervisors has made a determination of the prevailing rate of hourly wages applicable to the work to be performed. Copies of this determination are on file in the office of the County Clerk, Civic Center, Room 315, San Rafael, California, and are available to any interested party upon request. Copies may be obtained from the Department of Public Works, Room, 304, Civic Center.

The Board of Supervisors of the County of Marin reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

Magic Show Opens Tonight

Medieval magic will fill Vallecito School during the next two weekends as students and staff create a 600-year-old setting, including a musical fairy tale, "Once Upon a Mattress."

The show will be at 8 p.m. today, May 14 and 15 and at 7 p.m. May 16 at the school on 50 Nova Albion Way in San Rafael. Preceding the show for an hour is an old-time "faire" with strolling musicians, story tellers, arts, crafts, games, booths and a dancing bear.

Large Window At Shop Is Broken

A large window at Kabbalah, a shop located at 918 B Street in San Rafael, was broken yesterday, police reported.

They said the window was broken at 1 a.m. by William W. Fearn, 21, of 23 Vallejo Way, who was taken to Marin General Hospital with a badly cut hand. Fearn, according to police, said he was a former mental patient. He was not held and told police he could not explain why he broke the window.

Deadline Near On GI Bill Education Cards

Marin veterans attending school under the GI bill must return their certification of attendance cards to the veterans administration by the end of this month.

James V. Burdick, director of Marin's Veterans Services, said the certification of attendance cards will be sent to veterans along with the check for the month of May. That card must be filled out and returned to the V.A.

Failure to comply will stop payments on future monthly benefits, said Burdick. If neglected, the administration cannot prepare a final check for the current semester, and the student cannot automatically be enrolled under the program for the upcoming summer or fall semesters.

Tam High Students Have Art Exhibit

The art can be seen from 3 to 5 and 7 to 9 p.m. weekdays and from 2 to 5 p.m. Saturday.

WENDY PORTRAYS HER FAMILY

An artist known only as "Wendy" is among the pupils from West End School whose pictures are on display this week at the San Rafael Library. Wendy has apparently not included herself in her drawing of "My Family," in which the ages of her mother, father, little brother and sister are carefully lettered above each one's head.

Turns Down Subsidizing Attendance

The Fairfax City Council in a 15-minute meeting last night voted 3-to-2 against subsidizing any council attendance at next week's League of California Cities legislative seminar in Sacramento.

Mayor Cornelis Van Vliet reported today that the councilmen with very little discussion defeated two motions: one which would have appropriated $240 to send three councilmen to Sacramento; one which would have appropriated $84 to pay the $28-per-person seminar fee.

Councilmen Robert R. Sousa and Lee Nelder, who had been designated to attend the seminar, joined Francis J. O'Connell to defeat the subsidy. Frank J. Egger was the third councilman designated to go.

No other matter was discussed at the brief special meeting, according to Mayor Van Vliet.

Agnew Aide Sees Protests Led By Trotskyite Reds

CINCINNATI (UPI)—An assistant to Vice President Spiro T. Agnew said Thursday the antiwar demonstrations in Washington were "Communist organized and led."

David Keene, 26, an assistant to the vice president on political affairs, told a Women's republican club the leaders of the demonstrations "are not pacifists, but are consciously doing Hanoi's work and are dedicated to the destruction of this country."

The National Peace Action Council, one of the organizing groups, "is almost completely dominated by Trotskyite-Communists dedicated to violent revolution at home," Keene said.

Flood Zone Budget Set At $318,300

A $318,300 budget for 1971-72, cut by $10,000 with the elimination of funds for study of a creek, has been approved by the Mill Valley Flood Control Zone Advisory board.

The budget, which will require about the same tax rate as this year's 23 cents per $100 assessed valuation, will be forwarded to the Marin County Board of Supervisors for final approval.

Lewis E. Fredrickson, County Flood Control engineer, said the advisory board Thursday agreed on the spending program recommended by the staff, minus $10,000 to study Ryan Creek drainage problems.

Fredrickson said sufficient studies of the creek have been made and further ones are no longer necessary.

Major items in the budget include: Coyote Creek dredging, $100,000; Scott Valley flood control bypass, $60,000; Patricia Lane box culvert, $50,000, and Camino Alto bridge $30,000.

Of the budget total, $173,200 will come from carryover funds from the current fiscal year, Fredrickson said, leaving $145,100 to be raised by property taxes.

The board set another meeting for 8 p.m. May 27 at Mill Valley City Hall to discuss a number of matters including the Sutton Manor drainage plan, a policy resolution on which creeks should be maintained with zone funds and the Alto bypass.

Four East Bay Men In Robbery

Four East Bay men were booked at the Marin County jail yesterday in connection with a $7,000 armed robbery Monday in San Rafael.

Booked on suspicion of armed robbery, possession of stolen property and car theft were:

Bail was set at $12,500 each and they were scheduled to appear in Marin Municipal Court Monday.

Judy Sherman, 23, of Martinez, was arrested along with the four men, but wasn't booked at the Marin County jail.

The four men were arrested yesterday in Martinez in connection with the robbery at the home apartment of James Emery Olah of 16 Ross Street.

San Rafael police said Olah was held at gunpoint and then bound and a pillowcase put over his head while two men wearing ski masks over their faces ransacked his apartment for four hours.

Stereo equipment valued at $4,000 and Olah's car, valued at $3,000 were taken, police reported. The arrests were made after Martinez police received a tip that the stolen car was in the garage at the Martinez home.

The car and about $1,500 worth of stereo equipment was recovered, police said.

Five Are Inducted In April

Five men were inducted into the armed forces in April by the Marin Selective Service Board, executive secretary Joy M. Kinzer reported yesterday.

She said 60 men had been ordered to report during the month, but 22 failed to report, five refused induction and five were rejected.

Orders for three of the inductees were canceled; six were classified 1-SC (student deferment); six transferred to other boards; two given new orders to report in May and three postponed indefinitely, and three were awaiting completion of their physical examinations, Mrs. Kinzer said.

Two others enlisted in the military services.

The names of the five who refused induction and the 22 who failed to report were withheld pending possible judicial action.

The five inducted were Barry H. Witman of Santa Rosa, Brian S. Telford and James B. Hill of Novato, Michael C. Beaver of Mill Valley and Coleman M. Shew of Larkspur.

Orders have gone to 37 Marin men to report this month, Mrs. Kinzer said. She said she did not yet know the draft lottery number for June.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Today The Headache Is Too Vague Because Of Many Manifestations

Headache made aspirin a household word 100 years ago. Nowadays headache is toovague a diagnosis because there are many causes for the manifestation. Unless the origin of the pain is known, even the best drugs are worthless. Books have been written on all types of headache. The pain may originate within the brain or from outside the skull, such as from scalp muscles or sinuses. Though most headaches are of vascular origin, they may be caused by a brain tumor or infection, dental disorder, or neuralgia, such as tic douloreux. Distress may last moments or hours. In some conditions, pain is persistent.

RELIEF OBVIOUSLY depends upon eliminating the cause. Common tension headaches, for example, usually are traced to job tensions stemming from repressed hostilities. Learning how to 'roll with the punches' or relax is most helpful. Tic douloureux frequently responds to anticonvulsants, among which are carbamazepine, diphenylhydantoin and chlorphenesin.

MIGRAINE IS a periodic disorder that usually develops on one side of the head. Irritability, nausea and photophobia may also ensue. The bout may be preceded by visual defects, flushing of the face, or weakness of an arm or leg. The pain is throbbing in nature and caused by an intense stretching of the cerebral vessels. Ergotamine, alone or in combination with caffeine, is the best remedy.

SEVERAL YEARS ago a relationship was established between migraine and the hormone, serotonin. This led to the development of methysergide, a product with antiserotonin properties. It and related drugs are used to prevent attacks of migraine. The chemical is not effective once the distress begins. Side effects include muscle pains and cramps, coldness of the limbs, nausea, and abdominal discomfort. Pregnant women and those with liver, kidney and heart trouble should not use methysergide.

FOODS AND BONES

S. L. writes: Are there any special foods that will help healing of a broken bone?

REPLY

None, assuming you are eating a variety of foods including those containing calcium. Delay in the healing of a fractured bone is more common in older persons with poor circulation. Other deterrents to the healing process include a poor job of setting the fracture, or of immobilizing the broken ends, and when tissues or other materials get caught between the bone ends.

QUIT NAGGING

N. W. J. writes: Please write something about people who eat too fast. My wife takes a bite of meat, chews once or twice, and swallows. I have told her that the habit is giving her headaches. Please advise.

REPLY

I doubt if this is causing your wife's headaches, unless of course, they stem from the agitation brought on by your constant nagging.

DIABETES

R. T. writes: My diabetes is controlled by diet but whenever I have even a slight indisposition, the sugar level goes up and I have to take insulin. Why does this happen?

REPLY

History Of Communes Is Traced

Ordinances defining a family as blood-related persons are seen as westernized "Jim Crow" laws by Albert Solnit, chief of advance planning in the Marin County Planning Department, in an article in the April 26 issue of the Nation.

Solnit is author of "Wear and Tear in the Communes" in the nationally circulated weekly. It traces the history of the "commune" type of living, quotes from U.S. Judge Albert C. Wollenberg's decision in a Palo Alto case upholding a zoning law definition of family and recites the difficulties encountered by one unmarried couple in a Mill Valley "commune." It concludes:

"Thoughtful people began to wonder if the Old South's Jim Crow had been resurrected as the totem of law and order in the West. As the polarization and social alienation between long-haired youth and the straight community grows, should the long hairs be relegated to a ghetto of their own? Will they then burn their way toward equal rights as the blacks did in Watts, or does someone in power have a better idea?"

Absentee Voters Can Get Ballots Starting Monday

Absentee ballots for the June 8 Petaluma municipal election will be available beginning Monday from the Santa Rosa office of Eugene D. Williams, county clerk and registrar of voters.

June 1 is the last day absentee ballot applications will be taken, Williams said. Voters may apply by mail or at Williams's office in the county Hall of Justice.

Mail applications must contain a voter's registered address, the address to which the ballot should be mailed and must be signed and dated, officials said.

Undercover Agent Enters Pot Plea

Michael G. Edmond, a San Francisco undercover narcotics agent, pleaded innocent yesterday in Marin Municipal Court to charges of possessing and cultivating marijuana and possessing narcotics paraphernalia.

Edmond, 23, of Sausalito, is to return to court Monday for setting of a date for hearing of defense motions and for a preliminary hearing.

Two roommates of Edmond were arraigned on the same charges Wednesday. They were set to plead May 26, but that date will probably be changed because Edmond yesterday refused to waive his right to a speedy trial.

Edmond's roommates were arrested Sunday when Sausalito police went to their apartment after complaint by neighbors of loud music.

The suspected pot and equipment were found in the apartment, police said.

Edmond was not at home Sunday but turned himself into authorities on a warrant Tuesday.

Contrary to an earlier story in the Independent-Journal, Edmond has not been suspended from his duties, a spokesman for San Francisco Police Chief Alfred J. Nelder said yesterday.

The officer is still working, the spokesman said.

Man Believed Bridge Jumper

A Belmont man apparently jumped to his death from the Golden Gate Bridge early today, the California Highway Patrol reported.

Patrolmen said two witnesses reported seeing a northbound car whose driver was later identified as Kevin Vincent McCarthy, 22, stop on the bridge shortly after midnight. The witnesses said the man ran from the car to the east rail. Their description of the man was later confirmed by his mother, patrolmen said.

Pleads Innocent To Two Counts

Alexnader A. Ziburtovicz, 23, of San Anselmo, pleaded innocent yesterday in Marin Municipal Court to misdemeanor charges of indecent exposure and soliciting lewd conduct.

He is to return to court next Friday for setting of a trial date.

WENDY PORTRAYS HER FAMILY

An artist known only as "Wendy" is among the pupils from West End School whose pictures are on display this week at the San Rafael Library. Wendy has apparently not included herself in her drawing of "My Family," in which the ages of her mother, father, little brother and sister are carefully lettered above each one's head.

Turns Down Subsidizing Attendance

The Fairfax City Council in a 15-minute meeting last night voted 3-to-2 against subsidizing any council attendance at next week's League of California Cities legislative seminar in Sacramento.

Mayor Cornelis Van Vliet reported today that the councilmen with very little discussion defeated two motions: one which would have appropriated $240 to send three councilmen to Sacramento; one which would have appropriated $84 to pay the $28-per-person seminar fee.

Councilmen Robert R. Sousa and Lee Nelder, who had been designated to attend the seminar, joined Francis J. O'Connell to defeat the subsidy. Frank J. Egger was the third councilman designated to go.

No other matter was discussed at the brief special meeting, according to Mayor Van Vliet.

Agnew Aide Sees Protests Led By Trotskyite Reds

CINCINNATI (UPI)—An assistant to Vice President Spiro T. Agnew said Thursday the antiwar demonstrations in Washington were "Communist organized and led."

David Keene, 26, an assistant to the vice president on political affairs, told a Women's republican club the leaders of the demonstrations "are not pacifists, but are consciously doing Hanoi's work and are dedicated to the destruction of this country."

The National Peace Action Council, one of the organizing groups, "is almost completely dominated by Trotskyite-Communists dedicated to violent revolution at home," Keene said.

Flood Zone Budget Set At $318,300

A $318,300 budget for 1971-72, cut by $10,000 with the elimination of funds for study of a creek, has been approved by the Mill Valley Flood Control Zone Advisory board.

The budget, which will require about the same tax rate as this year's 23 cents per $100 assessed valuation, will be forwarded to the Marin County Board of Supervisors for final approval.

Lewis E. Fredrickson, County Flood Control engineer, said the advisory board Thursday agreed on the spending program recommended by the staff, minus $10,000 to study Ryan Creek drainage problems.

Fredrickson said sufficient studies of the creek have been made and further ones are no longer necessary.

Major items in the budget include: Coyote Creek dredging, $100,000; Scott Valley flood control bypass, $60,000; Patricia Lane box culvert, $50,000, and Camino Alto bridge $30,000.

Of the budget total, $173,200 will come from carryover funds from the current fiscal year, Fredrickson said, leaving $145,100 to be raised by property taxes.

The board set another meeting for 8 p.m. May 27 at Mill Valley City Hall to discuss a number of matters including the Sutton Manor drainage plan, a policy resolution on which creeks should be maintained with zone funds and the Alto bypass.

Four East Bay Men In Robbery

Four East Bay men were booked at the Marin County jail yesterday in connection with a $7,000 armed robbery Monday in San Rafael.

Booked on suspicion of armed robbery, possession of stolen property and car theft were:

Bail was set at $12,500 each and they were scheduled to appear in Marin Municipal Court Monday.

Judy Sherman, 23, of Martinez, was arrested along with the four men, but wasn't booked at the Marin County jail.

The four men were arrested yesterday in Martinez in connection with the robbery at the home apartment of James Emery Olah of 16 Ross Street.

San Rafael police said Olah was held at gunpoint and then bound and a pillowcase put over his head while two men wearing ski masks over their faces ransacked his apartment for four hours.

Stereo equipment valued at $4,000 and Olah's car, valued at $3,000 were taken, police reported. The arrests were made after Martinez police received a tip that the stolen car was in the garage at the Martinez home.

The car and about $1,500 worth of stereo equipment was recovered, police said.

Five Are Inducted In April

Five men were inducted into the armed forces in April by the Marin Selective Service Board, executive secretary Joy M. Kinzer reported yesterday.

She said 60 men had been ordered to report during the month, but 22 failed to report, five refused induction and five were rejected.

Orders for three of the inductees were canceled; six were classified 1-SC (student deferment); six transferred to other boards; two given new orders to report in May and three postponed indefinitely, and three were awaiting completion of their physical examinations, Mrs. Kinzer said.

Two others enlisted in the military services.

The names of the five who refused induction and the 22 who failed to report were withheld pending possible judicial action.

The five inducted were Barry H. Witman of Santa Rosa, Brian S. Telford and James B. Hill of Novato, Michael C. Beaver of Mill Valley and Coleman M. Shew of Larkspur.

Orders have gone to 37 Marin men to report this month, Mrs. Kinzer said. She said she did not yet know the draft lottery number for June.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Today The Headache Is Too Vague Because Of Many Manifestations

Headache made aspirin a household word 100 years ago. Nowadays headache is tovague a diagnosis because there are many causes for the manifestation. Unless the origin of the pain is known, even the best drugs are worthless. Books have been written on all types of headache. The pain may originate within the brain or from outside the skull, such as from scalp muscles or sinuses. Though most headaches are of vascular origin, they may be caused by a brain tumor or infection, dental disorder, or neuralgia, such as tic douloreux. Distress may last moments or hours. In some conditions, pain is persistent.

RELIEF OBVIOUSLY depends upon eliminating the cause. Common tension headaches, for example, usually are traced to job tensions stemming from repressed hostilities. Learning how to 'roll with the punches' or relax is most helpful. Tic douloureux frequently responds to anticonvulsants, among which are carbamazepine, diphenylhydantoin and chlorphenesin.

MIGRAINE IS a periodic disorder that usually develops on one side of the head. Irritability, nausea and photophobia may also ensue. The bout may be preceded by visual defects, flushing of the face, or weakness of an arm or leg. The pain is throbbing in nature and caused by an intense stretching of the cerebral vessels. Ergotamine, alone or in combination with caffeine, is the best remedy.

SEVERAL YEARS ago a relationship was established between migraine and the hormone, serotonin. This led to the development of methysergide, a product with antiserotonin properties. It and related drugs are used to prevent attacks of migraine. The chemical is not effective once the distress begins. Side effects include muscle pains and cramps, coldness of the limbs, nausea, and abdominal discomfort. Pregnant women and those with liver, kidney and heart trouble should not use methysergide.

FOODS AND BONES

S. L. writes: Are there any special foods that will help healing of a broken bone?

REPLY

None, assuming you are eating a variety of foods including those containing calcium. Delay in the healing of a fractured bone is more common in older persons with poor circulation. Other deterrents to the healing process include a poor job of setting the fracture, or of immobilizing the broken ends, and when tissues or other materials get caught between the bone ends.

QUIT NAGGING

N. W. J. writes: Please write something about people who eat too fast. My wife takes a bite of meat, chews once or twice, and swallows. I have told her that the habit is giving her headaches. Please advise.

REPLY

I doubt if this is causing your wife's headaches, unless of course, they stem from the agitation brought on by your constant nagging.

DIABETES

R. T. writes: My diabetes is controlled by diet but whenever I have even a slight indisposition, the sugar level goes up and I have to take insulin. Why does this happen?

REPLY

History Of Communes Is Traced

Ordinances defining a family as blood-related persons are seen as westernized "Jim Crow" laws by Albert Solnit, chief of advance planning in the Marin County Planning Department, in an article in the April 26 issue of the Nation.

Solnit is author of "Wear and Tear in the Communes" in the nationally circulated weekly. It traces the history of the "commune" type of living, quotes from U.S. Judge Albert C. Wollenberg's decision in a Palo Alto case upholding a zoning law definition of family and recites the difficulties encountered by one unmarried couple in a Mill Valley "commune." It concludes:

"Thoughtful people began to wonder if the Old South's Jim Crow had been resurrected as the totem of law and order in the West. As the polarization and social alienation between long-haired youth and the straight community grows, should the long hairs be relegated to a ghetto of their own? Will they then burn their way toward equal rights as the blacks did in Watts, or does someone in power have a better idea?"

Absentee Voters Can Get Ballots Starting Monday

Absentee ballots for the June 8 Petaluma municipal election will be available beginning Monday from the Santa Rosa office of Eugene D. Williams, county clerk and registrar of voters.

June 1 is the last day absentee ballot applications will be taken, Williams said. Voters may apply by mail or at Williams's office in the county Hall of Justice.

Mail applications must contain a voter's registered address, the address to which the ballot should be mailed and must be signed and dated, officials said.

Undercover Agent Enters Pot Plea

Michael G. Edmond, a San Francisco undercover narcotics agent, pleaded innocent yesterday in Marin Municipal Court to charges of possessing and cultivating marijuana and possessing narcotics paraphernalia.

Edmond, 23, of Sausalito, is to return to court Monday for setting of a date for hearing of defense motions and for a preliminary hearing.

Two roommates of Edmond were arraigned on the same charges Wednesday. They were set to plead May 26, but that date will probably be changed because Edmond yesterday refused to waive his right to a speedy trial.

Edmond's roommates were arrested Sunday when Sausalito police went to their apartment after complaint by neighbors of loud music.

The suspected pot and equipment were found in the apartment, police said.

Edmond was not at home Sunday but turned himself into authorities on a warrant Tuesday.

Contrary to an earlier story in the Independent-Journal, Edmond has not been suspended from his duties, a spokesman for San Francisco Police Chief Alfred J. Nelder said yesterday.

The officer is still working, the spokesman said.

Man Believed Bridge Jumper

A Belmont man apparently jumped to his death from the Golden Gate Bridge early today, the California Highway Patrol reported.

Patrolmen said two witnesses reported seeing a northbound car whose driver was later identified as Kevin Vincent McCarthy, 22, stop on the bridge shortly after midnight. The witnesses said the man ran from the car to the east rail. Their description of the man was later confirmed by his mother, patrolmen said.

Pleads Innocent To Two Counts

Alexander A. Ziburtovicz, 23, of San Anselmo, pleaded innocent yesterday in Marin Municipal Court to misdemeanor charges of indecent exposure and soliciting lewd conduct.

He is to return to court next Friday for setting of a trial date.

ANNA JARVIS' BIRTHPLACE
Anna Jarvis was born here 5-1-1864. Through her efforts President Wilson designated in 1914 the second Sunday in May as Mother's Day. She died 11-24-1948 and was buried in West Laurel Hill Cemetery. Bala-Cynwyd, Pennsylvania.

MOTHER'S DAY CHURCH

Shrine Is Being Planned

GRAFTON, W. Va. (UPI)—Services are held only once a year in the 98-year-old Andrews Methodist Church —on Mother's Day.

Andrews' former congregation outgrew the old building and moved to new quarters, but the church never will outlive its contribution to history as the "Mother Church of Mother's Day."

A nonprofit organization has been formed to raise funds to turn the church where Mother's Day which will be observed tomorrow, began into an international shrine that will pay homage not only to the mothers of the world but also to Anna Jarvis, the spinster "mother" of the national Mother's Day observance.

Miss Jarvis grew up in Grafton, and the family moved to Philadelphia in 1902 after her father died. Miss Jarvis' mother died in 1905. It was shortly after Mrs. Jarvis' death that her daughter began her crusade to have one day a year set aside for honoring the mothers of the world. She was aided by the support of wealthy Philadelphia merchant John Wanamaker.

The first observance of Mother's Day was held in Andrews Methodist Church in Grafton on May 12, 1907, the Sunday closest to the anniversary of Mrs. Jarvis' death.

The tradition of wearing carnations on the day also began with Miss Jarvis, who sent some 500 white carnations to her home church on that first observance.

Through letters and personal appeals and unflagging perseverance, Miss Jarvis eventually persuaded President Woodrow Wilson in 1914 to declare the second Sunday in May as Mother's Day. Wilson ordered the flag to be displayed on all U.S. government buildings on that day and an Alabama congressman commented:

It was in a 1952 session of the General Conference of the Methodist Church that Andrews was formally recognized as the "Mother Church of Mother's Day," with the recommendation it become a shrine. Ten years later a nonprofit corporation was chartered by the State of West Virginia to acquire ownership and control of the "Mother Church of Mother's Day Shrine."

To date two city blocks have been acquired and cleared, restoration of the church is under way and plans include landscaping the grounds and planting floral gardens. Members of the West Virginia Florists Association are contemplating assuming responsibility for planting and maintaining the two block area that surrounds the church.

Since the corporation was formed between $2,000 and $3,000 a year has been raised to restore and maintain the church, but local residents are disappointed there has not been more widespread interest in the project.

The church is open to the public daily, which would have pleased Miss Jarvis. She died in 1948, and in the last years of her life vigorously opposed commercial exploitation of Mother's Day.

Couple To Be Feted At Dinner

The Marin Jewish Community will honor Mr. and Mrs. William Rubin of Greenbrae at a dinner next Sunday at 7 p.m. at Congregation Rodef Sholom, 170 North San Pedro Road, San Rafael.

The couple, longtime residents of Marin County, have been active in building Congregation Rodef Sholom and the Jewish Community Center.

Rubin has served as chairman many years for Jewish Welfare Federation campaign in Marin.

Mrs. Rubin has been a leader in Hadassah as well as a member of the women's board of governors of the Israel Bond Drive.

Special Rites

Congregation Rodef Sholom will hold Lag B'Omer services next Sunday at 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. at its temple, 170 North San Pedro Road in San Rafael.

Silver Jubilee Of Fatima On Thursday

The silver jubilee of the crowning of Our Lady Queen of the World at Fatima by Pope XII will be observed at St. Raphael's Catholic Church on Thursday with services beginning at 9 a.m.

Opening rites will include a procession, crowning of the Pilgrim Virgin, rosary, homily and an act of consecration. The rosary will be recited throughout the day until 5 p.m.

Admission Day For New Novato Church

The newly organized Orthodox Presbyterian Church of Novato will hold admission day services at 8 p.m. Thursday in the Adventist Church building on San Marin Drive.

Organization of the church comes a year after Rev. Robert H. Graham began conducting services at the request of two couples. Graham has been voted permanent pastor and will be installed during the services.

Principal speakers will be Rev. Richard L. Lewis, pastor of the Covenant Church in Berkeley, which has been sponsor of the new church, and Rev. Robert K. Churchill of the Orthodox Presbyterian Church in Sonora. A reception will follow the services.

According to Graham, the church is committed to the historic standards of Presbyterian, namely the Bible as God's infallible word and the Westminister Confession of Faith and Catechisms.

Lutheran Layman To Unit In Jerusalem

NEW YORK (LC) — Wayne C. Frickson, a Lutheran layman from Portola Valley, Calif., has been named to the Jerusalem staff of the Department of World Service of the Lutheran World Federation.

Scheduled to assume his new duties this month, the 44-year-old investment specialist will serve as administrator of the village health program operated by the LWF on the West Bank of Jordan.

NO CONTROVERSY

Ex-Chicago Pastor To Join Seminary Staff As Lecturer

A clergyman, charged before a Senate subcommittee with allowing Black Chicago street gangs to use his church as an arsenal, will lecture during the coming school year at the San Francisco Theological Seminary at San Anselmo.

"I don't expect any controversy," seminary President Arnold B. Come said yesterday in announcing the approval of Rev. John R. Fry as a one-year lecturer.

Come said Fry is expected to arrive at the seminary at the end of June and will begin teaching a social ethics course in October.

He said Fry will spend about half his time teaching and the other half studying and writing. He currently teaches part time at the McCormick Theological Seminary in Chicago.

Fry, a 46-year-old white minister, resigned April 5 from his position as pastor of Chicago's First Presbyterian Church, one day before 23 members of a black street gang he worked with were indicted on federal charges of misappropriating funds intended for a training program for ghetto youths.

He was charged before a 1968 Senate subcommittee as having allowed the Blackstone Rangers — now known as the P. Stone Nation — to store arms in his church. Witnesses also testified that he condoned drug parties and encouraged gang members to get into the extortion racket.

All charges were labeled unfounded by the governing bodies of his church and the Presbytery of Chicago.

Come said the seminary received a grant for Fry to teach there from the Board of National Missions of the Presbyterian Church, U.S.A.

"As far as the church is concerned," Come said yesterday, "the charges were unfounded."

He said controversy surrounding Fry was "the fiction of the Senate committee and the newspapers," and had been "blown up out of nothing."

"He's coming here to teach," Come added.

Mill Valley Church Sets Special Rites

The Methodist Church of Mill Valley will observe Mother's Day with the rite of baptism and special music at its 11 a.m. service tomorrow.

Three choirs will perform according to J. Stephen Taylor, director of music. A member of Mill Valley's Church of Our Saviour, Episcopal, Taylor will feature works by Dr. S. Drummond Wolff, director of that church's choir.

Helping Taylor with the special music will be Michael T. Brown of San Anselmo, organist, who along with Taylor formed the church's musical team six months ago.

Besides selections by Taylor's chancel choir, special music will be presented by the handbell choir guided by Robert Burgan of Corte Madera and the new guitar, percussion and voice choir directed by Richard Christensen, a student at San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo.

Pre-School Bible Sessions Announced

A Bible school for pre-school children — 3 to 5 — will be held at Grace Lutheran Church in Novato, beginning Monday with three weekly meetings through May 28.

The sessions will be held Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m.

Theme of the programs will be "The Christian Family" with stories, worship, games, handcrafts, singing and refreshments.

Teachers for the school will be Mrs. Carol Cooper, Gretchen Beyer, Jackie Johnson, Joleen Ordt and Delores Sickles.

A slight fee will be charged and registration can be made at the opening session.

The church is located at 1787 Grant Avenue.

A Slight Dip In Benevolence Giving

MINNEAPOLIS UPI — A slight dip is reported in general benevolence receipts of the American Lutheran Church for the fiscal year ended Jan. 31. Offerings totaled $20,964,459. 54, a decline of $115,744.87 — less than 1 per cent — from the previous year's total of $21,080,194.41.

Dr. George S. Schultz, executive secretary of the denomination's Board of Trustees said the decrease was more than compensated for in the total giving by the church's 2.5 million members of $582,485.57 for "Project Neighbor," a fund drive started in 1970 to finance special causes.

Apostolic Study

ST. PAUL, Minn. (LC) — Apostolic succession, a traditionally thorny issue between Lutherans and Episcopalians, was explored here in mid-April by churchmen from the two communions.

10,000 To Join In Mission Program

SPRINGFIELD, MO. UPI — More than 10,000 Assemblies of God young people, ages 16-24, will take part in the denomination's sixth annual Ambassadors in Mission (AIM) program, a gospel witnessing effort, this year.

Admission Day For New Novato Church

The newly organized Orthodox Presbyterian Church of Novato will hold admission day services at 8 p.m. Thursday in the Adventist Church building on San Marin Drive.

Organization of the church comes a year after Rev. Robert H. Graham began conducting services at the request of two couples. Graham has been voted permanent pastor and will be installed during the services.

Principal speakers will be Rev. Richard L. Lewis, pastor of the Covenant Church in Berkeley, which has been sponsor of the new church, and Rev. Robert K. Churchill of the Orthodox Presbyterian Church in Sonora. A reception will follow the services.

According to Graham, the church is committed to the historic standards of Presbyterian, namely the Bible as God's infallible word and the Westminister Confession of Faith and Catechisms.

Lutheran Layman To Unit In Jerusalem

NEW YORK (LC) — Wayne C. Frickson, a Lutheran layman from Portola Valley, Calif., has been named to the Jerusalem staff of the Department of World Service of the Lutheran World Federation.

Scheduled to assume his new duties this month, the 44-year-old investment specialist will serve as administrator of the village health program operated by the LWF on the West Bank of Jordan.

Silver Jubilee Of Fatima On Thursday

The silver jubilee of the crowning of Our Lady Queen of the World at Fatima by Pope XII will be observed at St. Raphael's Catholic Church on Thursday with services beginning at 9 a.m.

Opening rites will include a procession, crowning of the Pilgrim Virgin, rosary, homily and an act of consecration. The rosary will be recited throughout the day until 5 p.m.

NO CONTROVERSY

Ex-Chicago Pastor To Join Seminary Staff As Lecturer

A clergyman, charged before a Senate subcommittee with allowing Black Chicago street gangs to use his church as an arsenal, will lecture during the coming school year at the San Francisco Theological Seminary at San Anselmo.

"I don't expect any controversy," seminary President Arnold B. Come said yesterday in announcing the approval of Rev. John R. Fry as a one-year lecturer.

Come said Fry is expected to arrive at the seminary at the end of June and will begin teaching a social ethics course in October.

He said Fry will spend about half his time teaching and the other half studying and writing. He currently teaches part time at the McCormick Theological Seminary in Chicago.

Fry, a 46-year-old white minister, resigned April 5 from his position as pastor of Chicago's First Presbyterian Church, one day before 23 members of a black street gang he worked with were indicted on federal charges of misappropriating funds intended for a training program for ghetto youths.

He was charged before a 1968 Senate subcommittee as having allowed the Blackstone Rangers — now known as the P. Stone Nation — to store arms in his church. Witnesses also testified that he condoned drug parties and encouraged gang members to get into the extortion racket.

All charges were labeled unfounded by the governing bodies of his church and the Presbytery of Chicago.

Come said the seminary received a grant for Fry to teach there from the Board of National Missions of the Presbyterian Church, U.S.A.

"As far as the church is concerned," Come said yesterday, "the charges were unfounded."

He said controversy surrounding Fry was "the fiction of the Senate committee and the newspapers," and had been "blown up out of nothing."

"He's coming here to teach," Come added.

Mill Valley Church Sets Special Rites

The Methodist Church of Mill Valley will observe Mother's Day with the rite of baptism and special music at its 11 a.m. service tomorrow.

Three choirs will perform according to J. Stephen Taylor, director of music. A member of Mill Valley's Church of Our Saviour, Episcopal, Taylor will feature works by Dr. S. Drummond Wolff, director of that church's choir.

Helping Taylor with the special music will be Michael T. Brown of San Anselmo, organist, who along with Taylor formed the church's musical team six months ago.

Besides selections by Taylor's chancel choir, special music will be presented by the handbell choir guided by Robert Burgan of Corte Madera and the new guitar, percussion and voice choir directed by Richard Christensen, a student at San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo.

Pre-School Bible Sessions Announced

A Bible school for pre-school children — 3 to 5 — will be held at Grace Lutheran Church in Novato, beginning Monday with three weekly meetings through May 28.

The sessions will be held Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m.

Theme of the programs will be "The Christian Family" with stories, worship, games, handcrafts, singing and refreshments.

Teachers for the school will be Mrs. Carol Cooper, Gretchen Beyer, Jackie Johnson, Joleen Ordt and Delores Sickles.

A slight fee will be charged and registration can be made at the opening session.

The church is located at 1787 Grant Avenue.

A Slight Dip In Benevolence Giving

MINNEAPOLIS UPI — A slight dip is reported in general benevolence receipts of the American Lutheran Church for the fiscal year ended Jan. 31. Offerings totaled $20,964,459. 54, a decline of $115,744.87 — less than 1 per cent — from the previous year's total of $21,080,194.41.

Dr. George S. Schultz, executive secretary of the denomination's Board of Trustees said the decrease was more than compensated for in the total giving by the church's 2.5 million members of $582,485.57 for "Project Neighbor," a fund drive started in 1970 to finance special causes.

10,000 To Join In Mission Program

SPRINGFIELD, MO. UPI — More than 10,000 Assemblies of God young people, ages 16-24, will take part in the denomination's sixth annual Ambassadors in Mission (AIM) program, a gospel witnessing effort, this year.

Pro Cage Leagues Ask Congress To Approve Merger

Sports

NEW YORK (UPI)—The National and American Basketball Associations Friday authorized their merger committees to engage counsel to represent both circuits in Washington and institute immediate action to bring a consolidation of the NBA and ABA before Congress.

The two leagues also agreed to allow their teams to meet each other in pre-season games if they so desire.

The alignments of both leagues would remain the same, the present 17 team set-up in the NBA and the 11 clubs in the ABA.

The indemnity each ABA club will play for the privilege of joining the NBA will be $1.2 million, except for the case of the Virginia Squires which vacated the Washington area territory to prevent a conflict with the Baltimore franchise.

A necessary 13 votes was obtained from the NBA Board of Governors to resume joint action with the ABA in seeking Congressional approval for creation of a single basketball league.

In June 1970, when both leagues had first agreed in principle to a merger, the amalgamation hinged on the ABA dismissing an anti-trust suit against the NBA.

"When, in November 1970, the suit had not been dismissed," said NBA commissioner Walter Kennedy, "the NBA announced it was discontinuing joint efforts for a merger with the ABA."

Kennedy said that the merger committees of both leagues had been meeting for the past month in an attempt to resolve all issues. The principal items were the dismissal of the law suit, which the ABA agreed to do, and a resolution of the problem of multiple signings.

"No total resolution was obtained for NBA players who have signed ABA contracts," Kennedy explained, "and they remain at a status quo where litigation prevails."

There are six players involved in "jumpings" from the NBA to the ABA, with only three players actually making the switch—Rick Barry from the San Francisco Warriors to the New York Nets, Zelmo Beaty from San Francisco to the Utah Stars, and Joe Caldwell from the Atlanta Hawks to the Carolina Cougars.

Billy Cunningham of the Philadelphia 76ers had signed a contract with Carolina but canceled the agreement when he said the Cougars reneged on paying him a proper amount. Cunningham subsequently signed a new contract with Philadelphia for approximately a half-million dollars.

Dave Bing of the Detroit Pistons had planned to move to the Virginia Squires, but also renegotiated a contract with Detroit and will remain in the NBA. The sixth player, Otto Moore, was traded from Detroit to Phoenix, but also had a pact with Virginia team of the ABA.

One remaining problem to be negotiated is the NBA Players Associations threatened law suit against the leagues, claiming a merger would be in violation of the anti-trust laws because it would eliminate competitive bidding for the players' services.

ABA Commissioner Jack Dolph said he was pleased the merger situation was "back on the track. We've been this far forward before, but I'm confident we can go all the way now.

"This agreement is far more reaching than we've had previously and we're all looking forward to working with our new partners."

MARIN LEAGUE BASEBALL

Redwood Sophs Sparkle In Extra-Inning Battle

By PAUL CANE

Two sophomore sensations combined to give the Redwood High School Giants a hard-fought 1-0 extra-inning win over the San Marin Mustangs in Larkspur yesterday, in one of the best played baseball games seen in the Marin County Athletic League this year.

Second year men Mike Connor and Gene Frey were the heroes for the Giants, who won their sixth MCAL game against three losses and a tie to remain in second place in the county.

In other MCAL games yesterday, Terra Linda bombed Drake, 10-3, Novato clubbed Tamalpais 6-0, and Marin Catholic took San Rafael 7-2.

With two out and two on in top of the seventh with a scoreless tie in Larkspur, Len Hoffman of San Marin blasted a long fly to deep right-center field, which looked as if it would bring in the two go-ahead runs. But not so. Center fielder Connor raced back and dragged the ball down to put down a possible game winning rally.

Mustang hurler Ken Siler got the loss, despite giving up only two hits.

Terra Linda broke open a 2-2 tie with five runs in the bottom of the fourth against Drake to give pitcher Mike Sabel his third victory in as many decisions. A run scoring double by Bill Sherbert and a two run single by Jeff Allen highlighted the big rally, which did away with Pirate starter Lex Rzepelia.

Sabel went the distance, allowing six hits and single runs in the second, fourth and fifth innings. The Pirates got on the scoreboard first, but Jerry Seefeldt put the Trojans ahead with a two run home run to left in the bottom of the second.

Allen and Sherbert led Terra Linda with two hits apiece, while catcher Mike Bauman and rightfielder Tom Odetto did likewise for Drake.

Novato High increased its streak of defensive scoreless innings to 20 in the shutout over Tam. The Hornets' mound corps appears to be unstoppable, as Dave Judnick picked up his third victory without a defeat. Judnick is joined by Mike Lamb in comprising the league's leading pitching duo.

The Hornets put the game on ice in the beginning, with four runs in the very first frame. Judnick helped himself with a two-run double. The Novato hurler later added a second base hit to pace Hornet hitters, too.

In contrast to the remarkable perfection of the Redwood-San Marin game, there was Marin Catholic's win over San Rafael under the lights at Albert Park last night. Where the Giants and Mustangs did not commit an error in the eight inning contest, the Bulldogs and Wildcats made six errors, walked 11, had four passed balls, two batters hit by pitchers, and a wild pitch to boot.

Behind all this shabbiness, two Marin Catholic pitchers combined for a no-hit game. Mickey Simmons and Jim Petray did not allow a safety in between all the erros, with Petray coming off with the win.

Catcher Paul Riccardi took the hitting honors for the day, with two singles and a double for the Wildcats. He was joined by Petray, who smacked a long left field home run in fourth to climax Wildcat scoring.

FIVE-MAN TRADE

A's Get Ex-Cal Slugger Epstein

BALTIMORE (UPI) —Left-handed pitcher Darold Knowles and hart-hitting first baseman Mike Epstein now play for the Oakland A's following several telephone conversations between Charles O. Finley and Bob Short on a rainy day.

The trade between the A's and Washington Senators was finalized late Friday night after the Oakland-Baltimore game was rained out.

Oakland gave up first baseman Don Mincher, catcher Frank Fernandez and lefthanded reliever Paul Lindblad. Knowles and Epstein are expected to join the A's today in Baltimore.

Epstein became a minor league home run terror after leaving the University of California at Berkeley. But he was unable to crack Baltimore's lineup and was traded to Washington in 1968 after much ballyhoo.

He hit 50 home runs in the last two seasons for the Senators but was unhappy at being platooned by manager Ted Williams. Epstein is hitting .250 with one home run this season.

"This makes it easier for us to get Frank Howard on first base," said Williams after the rade. Short, owner of the Senators, said he had discussed trading Epstein with Detroit, New York, Kansas City and Milwaukee but was unable to reach agreement.

However things began to develop when Finley, owner of the A's, got Short on the telephone.

Mincher, a much-traveled veteran, was batting .239 for the A's and off to a slow start with two homers and eight runs batted in. He hit 27 homers, his best production mark in the majors, and drove in 74 runs for Oakland last year.

But the real key, at least in the estimation of A's manager Dick Williams, was the acquisition of Knowles, a hardthrowing relief pitcher who Williams hopes will plug a big hole in the bullpen.

Knowles, one of the top relievers in the American League two seasons ago, slumped from 9-2 to 2-14 last season.

But Dick Williams notes that Knowles had 27 saves and a 2.04 earned-run average for the last-place Senators in 1970.

Williams also was unhappy with the performance of his three lefthanded relief pitchers —Lindblad, Rob Gardner and Jim Roland. Lindblad was 8-2 with the Athletics last season but had no decision this season.

Fernandez, who has seen little action behind Dave Duncan this season, was purchased by the A's from the New York Yankees two years ago. He hit 15 home runs and drove in 44 runs as a parttime performer for Oakland last year.

Novato Star Leads Arizona Golf Play

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — Former Novato High School superstar Ray Leach fired a two-under-par 70 yesterday to lead Brigham Young University in hot pursuit of Arizona State in the Arizona Invitational Golf Tournament.

Leach, a junior and second team All-American in 1970, went into today's final round six strokes ahead of his nearest competitors in the race for medalist honors. His score for the opening round was 68, giving him a two-day total of 138.

Leach and his teammates from Brigham Young piled up 585 strokes to trail ASU by three and led third place New Mexico by four after yesterday's round. Paul Simpson of New Mexico shot a five-under 67 to take second round honors.

Simpson's hot round moved him into a tie for second place in individual scoring with ASU's Howard Twitty. Both had 144s.

In fourth place in the team standings was ASU's No. 2 team with 594 strokes. Next in order came host Arizona at 597, Miami of Florida 603, Arizona's No. 2 team 611 and the Air Force Academy 621.

FALLEN BRAVE — Felix Millan of the Atlanta Braves suffered a badly sprained ankle while sliding into second with a stolen base in the sixth inning last night at Candlestick Park. Braves' trainer Dave Pursley checked the injury while coach Jim Busby looked on. Millan was carried from the field, and San Francisco won, 4-3.

Warriors Obtain Russell; Trade Lucas To New York

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The San Francisco Warriors today traded veteran forward Jerry Lucas to the New York Knickerbockers for Cazzie Russell in a straight player swap.

The 6-8 Lucas, 31, has eight seasons in the National Basketball Association. He came to the Warriors from the Cincinnati Royals in 1969.

Russell, who will be 27 next month, stands 6-5 1-2 and has averaged 13.3 points a game during fve NBA seasons. He was the Knicks' No. 1 draft choice in 1966 after a brilliant collegiate career at the University of Michigan.

Cazzie was the sixth man for the Knicks during their championship season of 1969-70. He broke a wrist midway through last season and was used only sparingly after he returned.

This upset the health foods faddist who loves to lift weights. He mentioned it a few times to Knicks coach Red Holzman without avail.

Both Holzman and Warriors coach Al Attles were pleased by the trade. Holzman said he would use Lucas, former All America from Ohio State, at forward and to spell center Willis Reed.

"We hated to give up anyone with the ability of Cazzie Russell," said Holzman. "But in order to get a player of Lucas' stature, you have to be ready to give up someone of equal ability.

Cazzie is one of the finest shooters in the league and was instrumental in our club winning the championship last year and in our rise to a contender."

Attles figures the acquisition of Russell and Jim Barnett from the Portland Trail Blazers on April 1 will give the Warriors more speed.

"Cazzie is one of the most spectacular shooters in basketball," said Attles. "He is not the rebounder Lucas is, but Russell if younger and faster.

"The addition of Russell and Barnett gives us much more speed than we had last season."

Russell's best game in the NBA was against Detroit in 1968 when he scored 42 points.

Lucas has been one of the premier rebounders in the NBA, topping the 10,000 mark in career caroms last season. He came to the Warriors for Jim King and Billy Turner after six seasons with Cincinnati when newly appointed Royals coach Bob Cousy said Lucas wouldn't fit into the team's fast-break offense.

Lucas was the Royals' No. 1 draft choice while he was still in high school at Middletown, Ohio.

Ron Cerrudo Chases Masters King Coody

DALLAS (UPI) — Showing his best form since being sidelined by a back injury a year ago, Ron Cerrudo of Napa carded a one-under-par 69 yesterday and gained a tie for the sixth lowest score at the halfway point of the Byron Nelson Golf Classic.

Tall Texan Charles Coody, the hottest thing going in professional golf since he won the Masters tournament last month, took a two shot lead by ripping off a 66 to go with his first round score of 69. Five players including Chi Chi Rodriguez were tied for second place at 137, and Lee Trevino was alone at 138.

Cerrudo, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Cerrudo of San Rafael had a 72 on Thursday giving him a two-day total of 141. He was tied with seven other golfers, including such notables as Arnold Palmer, Bruce Crampton, Bobby Nichols and Ray Floyd. Palmer shot a 71 yesterday, as did Jack Nicklaus, who stood with seven others at 140.

Coody, whose blazing putter has brought him $43,000 since the Masters in Augusta, made seven putts of a dozen feet or better yesterday as he tamed the 7,031 Preston Trail Golf Club layout. First prize in the tourney is $25,000.

Marin Ace Lee Hurls Red Sox To 5-4 Victory

Bill Lee, former ace lefthander at Terra Linda High School, pitched masterfully for two and a third innings in relief yesterday and was rewarded with the win as the Boston Red Sox took their fifth straight victory, a 5-4 decision over the Brewers in Milwaukee.

Lee, a graduate of University of Southern California now in his second big league season, ran his 1971 record to 3-1 as he allowed only one hit and struck out three during his stint, which began in the seventh. He needed ninth inning help from Sparky Lyle, but was the pitcher of record when Billy Conigliaro scored the winning run after doubling in the eighth.

Chip Oliver Arrested On Dope Charge

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Chip Oliver, who quit as linebacker of the Oakland Raiders in 1970 to join a Mill Valley commune, is being held by St. Louis police on a charge ofillegal possession of narcotics paraphernalia.

Police said they found a pipe believed to contain marijuana residue in one of his pockets when they stopped his station wagon for improper passing Thursday.

Magistrate Milton A. Saitz issued a warrant on the charge and Oliver was being held in lieu of $3,500 bond, returnable next Wednesday.

Stargell Named Player Of Month

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Willie Stargell of Pittsburgh has been named National League player of the month by sportswriters and broadcasters for clubbing a record 11 home runs during April.

He received 58 of the 60 votes by the panel in the monthly poll conducted by the office of National League president Charles Feeney.

Atlanta's Ralph Garr, who hit .411 in April, and New York Mets pitcher Tom Seaver, 4-0 with a 1.38 ERA last month, received one vote apiece.

Giants And Mays Are Having A Ball

Willie, who celebrated his 40th birthday Thursday, suffers, as might be expected of a man his age, from aches and pains and needs a rubdown almost every time he plays.

This time, though, he wore a wide grin on his face. Not a smug one at all. Just a warm smile befitting a man who had just helped the San Francisco Giants score a 4-3 10th inning victory Friday night over the Atlanta Braves.

It was Mays' third hit of the game, a long drive which glanced off the base of the right field fence with two on and none out, and it won the game for the giants and increased their lead in the National League West to seven full games.

During his birthday party Thursday night Mays said playing baseball has become fun again for him after a couple of seasons when he felt it was just this side of drudgery.

"When you are winning it's always fun to be playing," he said.

It sure is, for Mays and all the Giants this year.

The three hits increased Mays' batting average to .383 second best in the N L behind Ralph Garr's .402. Garr went two for five for Atlanta Friday, scoring a run and driving in one to keep the Braves close.

It all went for naught, though, as Atlanta slipped 7-1-2 games behind the Giants, who now have won 21 games and lost only seven. The Los Angeles Dodgers and Houston Astros, both at .500, are closest to the Giants.

Gaylord Perry, winless since April 17, was one out away from his fourth victory when he served up Rookie Earl Williams' fifth homer to send the game into extra frames.

George Stone, the Atlanta starter and loser (0-1), and Sonny Jackson hit back-to-back singles after one out in the top of the 10th and Giants manager Charlie Fox replaced Perry with Jerry Johnson.

Johnson retired Garr and Hank Aaron on rollers to short to get out of the inning and then received credit for his fourth victory without a loss on Mays' winning blow in the bottom of the 10th.

Bobby bonds started the rally with a double into the left field corner and went to third on a sacrifice by Chris Speier. Speier wound up with a base hit when Stone was late fielding his bunt down ths third base line and then didn't have a play.

Cecil Upshaw, Atlanta's ace reliever, replaced Stone. He went to a full count before Mays lined a high outside fastball for the game winning hit. It was Willie's sixth game winning blow of the year and boosted his RBI total to 20.

Ken Henderson also figured prominently in the victory. It was his sixth inning bases-loaded single that drove in a pair and pushed the Giants into a 3-2 lead.

Pro Cage Leagues Ask Congress To Approve Merger

NEW YORK (UPI)—The National and American Basketball Associations Friday authorized their merger committees to engage counsel to represent both circuits in Washington and institute immediate action to bring a consolidation of the NBA and ABA before Congress.

The two leagues also agreed to allow their teams to meet each other in pre-season games if they so desire.

The alignments of both leagues would remain the same, the present 17 team setup in the NBA and the 11 clubs in the ABA.

The indemnity each ABA club will play for the privilege of joining the NBA will be $1.2 million, except for the case of the Virginia Squires which vacated the Washington area territory to prevent a conflict with the Baltimore franchise.

A necessary 13 votes was obtained from the NBA Board of Governors to resume joint action with the ABA in seeking Congressional approval for creation of a single basketball league.

In June 1970, when both leagues had first agreed in principle to a merger, the amalgamation hinged on the ABA dismissing an anti-trust suit against the NBA.

"When, in November 1970, the suit had not been dismissed," said NBA commissioner Walter Kennedy, "the NBA announced it was discontinuing joint efforts for a merger with the ABA."

Kennedy said that the merger committees of both leagues had been meeting for the past month in an attempt to resolve all issues. The principal items were the dismissal of the law suit, which the ABA agreed to do, and a resolution of the problem of multiple signings.

"No total resolution was obtained for NBA players who have signed ABA contracts," Kennedy explained, "and they remain at a status quo where litigation prevails."

There are six players involved in "jumpings" from the NBA to the ABA, with only three players actually making the switch—Rick Barry from the San Francisco Warriors to the New York Nets, Zelmo Beaty from San Francisco to the Utah Stars, and Joe Caldwell from the Atlanta Hawks to the Carolina Cougars.

Billy Cunningham of the Philadelphia 76ers had signed a contract with Carolina but canceled the agreement when he said the Cougars reneged on paying him a proper amount. Cunningham subsequently signed a new contract with Philadelphia for approximately a half-million dollars.

Dave Bing of the Detroit Pistons had planned to move to the Virginia Squires, but also renegotiated a contract with Detroit and will remain in the NBA. The sixth player, Otto Moore, was traded from Detroit to Phoenix, but also had a pact with Virginia team of the ABA.

One remaining problem to be negotiated is the NBA Players Associations threatened law suit against the leagues, claiming a merger would be in violation of the anti-trust laws because it would eliminate competitive bidding for the players' services.

ABA Commissioner Jack Dolph said he was pleased the merger situation was "back on the track. We've been this far forward before, but I'm confident we can go all the way now.

"This agreement is far more reaching than we've had previously and we're all looking forward to working with our new partners."

MARIN LEAGUE BASEBALL

Redwood Sophs Sparkle In Extra-Inning Battle

By PAUL CANE

Two sophomore sensations combined to give the Redwood High School Giants a hard-fought 1-0 extra-inning win over the San Marin Mustangs in Larkspur yesterday, in one of the best played baseball games seen in the Marin County Athletic League this year.

Second year men Mike Connor and Gene Frey were the heroes for the Giants, who won their sixth MCAL game against three losses and a tie to remain in second place in the county.

In other MCAL games yesterday, Terra Linda bombed Drake, 10-3, Novato clubbed Tamalpais 6-0, and Marin Catholic took San Rafael 7-2.

With two out and two on in top of the seventh with a scoreless tie in Larkspur, Len Hoffman of San Marin blasted a long fly to deep right-center field, which looked as if it would bring in the two go-ahead runs. But not so. Center fielder Connor raced back and dragged the ball down to put down a possible game winning rally.

Mustang hurler Ken Siler got the loss, despite giving up only two hits.

Terra Linda broke open a 2-2 tie with five runs in the bottom of the fourth against Drake to give pitcher Mike Sabel his third victory in as many decisions. A run scoring double by Bill Sherbert and a two run single by Jeff Allen highlighted the big rally, which did away with Pirate starter Lex Rzepelia.

Sabel went the distance, allowing six hits and single runs in the second, fourth and fifth innings. The Pirates got on the scoreboard first, but Jerry Seefeldt put the Trojans ahead with a two run home run to left in the bottom of the second.

Allen and Sherbert led Terra Linda with two hits apiece, while catcher Mike Bauman and rightfielder Tom Odetto did likewise for Drake.

Novato High increased its streak of defensive scoreless innings to 20 in the shutout over Tam. The Hornets' mound corps appears to be unstoppable, as Dave Judnick picked up his third victory without a defeat. Judnick is joined by Mike Lamb in comprising the league's leading pitching duo.

The Hornets put the game on ice in the beginning, with four runs in the very first frame. Judnick helped himself with a two-run double. The Novato hurler later added a second base hit to pace Hornet hitters, too.

In contrast to the remarkable perfection of the Redwood-San Marin game, there was Marin Catholic's win over San Rafael under the lights at Albert Park last night. Where the Giants and Mustangs did not commit an error in the eight inning contest, the Bulldogs and Wildcats made six errors, walked 11, had four passed balls, two batters hit by pitchers, and a wild pitch to boot.

Behind all this shabbiness, two Marin Catholic pitchers combined for a no-hit game. Mickey Simmons and Jim Petray did not allow a safety in between all the erros, with Petray coming off with the win.

Catcher Paul Riccardi took the hitting honors for the day, with two singles and a double for the Wildcats. He was joined by Petray, who smacked a long left field home run in fourth to climax Wildcat scoring.

FIVE-MAN TRADE

A's Get Ex-Cal Slugger Epstein

BALTIMORE (UPI) —Left-handed pitcher Darold Knowles and hart-hitting first baseman Mike Epstein now play for the Oakland A's following several telephone conversations between Charles O. Finley and Bob Short on a rainy day.

The trade between the A's and Washington Senators was finalized late Friday night after the Oakland-Baltimore game was rained out.

Oakland gave up first baseman Don Mincher, catcher Frank Fernandez and lefthanded reliever Paul Lindblad. Knowles and Epstein are expected to join the A's today in Baltimore.

Epstein became a minor league home run terror after leaving the University of California at Berkeley. But he was unable to crack Baltimore's lineup and was traded to Washington in 1968 after much ballyhoo.

He hit 50 home runs in the last two seasons for the Senators but was unhappy at being platooned by manager Ted Williams. Epstein is hitting .250 with one home run this season.

"This makes it easier for us to get Frank Howard on first base," said Williams after the rade. Short, owner of the Senators, said he had discussed trading Epstein with Detroit, New York, Kansas City and Milwaukee but was unable to reach agreement.

However things began to develop when Finley, owner of the A's, got Short on the telephone.

Mincher, a much-traveled veteran, was batting .239 for the A's and off to a slow start with two homers and eight runs batted in. He hit 27 homers, his best production mark in the majors, and drove in 74 runs for Oakland last year.

But the real key, at least in the estimation of A's manager Dick Williams, was the acquisition of Knowles, a hardthrowing relief pitcher who Williams hopes will plug a big hole in the bullpen.

Knowles, one of the top relievers in the American League two seasons ago, slumped from 9-2 to 2-14 last season.

But Dick Williams notes that Knowles had 27 saves and a 2.04 earned-run average for the last-place Senators in 1970.

Williams also was unhappy with the performance of his three lefthanded relief pitchers —Lindblad, Rob Gardner and Jim Roland. Lindblad was 8-2 with the Athletics last season but had no decision this season.

Fernandez, who has seen little action behind Dave Duncan this season, was purchased by the A's from the New York Yankees two years ago. He hit 15 home runs and drove in 44 runs as a parttime performer for Oakland last year.

Novato Star Leads Arizona Golf Play

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — Former Novato High School superstar Ray Leach fired a two-under-par 70 yesterday to lead Brigham Young University in hot pursuit of Arizona State in the Arizona Invitational Golf Tournament.

Leach, a junior and second team All-American in 1970, went into today's final round six strokes ahead of his nearest competitors in the race for medalist honors. His score for the opening round was 68, giving him a two-day total of 138.

Leach and his teammates from Brigham Young piled up 585 strokes to trail ASU by three and led third place New Mexico by four after yesterday's round. Paul Simpson of New Mexico shot a five-under 67 to take second round honors.

Simpson's hot round moved him into a tie for second place in individual scoring with ASU's Howard Twitty. Both had 144s.

In fourth place in the team standings was ASU's No. 2 team with 594 strokes. Next in order came host Arizona at 597, Miami of Florida 603, Arizona's No. 2 team 611 and the Air Force Academy 621.

FALLEN BRAVE — Felix Millan of the Atlanta Braves suffered a badly sprained ankle while sliding into second with a stolen base in the sixth inning last night at Candlestick Park. Braves' trainer Dave Pursley checked the injury while coach Jim Busby looked on. Millan was carried from the field, and San Francisco won, 4-3.

Warriors Obtain Russell; Trade Lucas To New York

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The San Francisco Warriors today traded veteran forward Jerry Lucas to the New York Knickerbockers for Cazzie Russell in a straight player swap.

The 6-8 Lucas, 31, has eight seasons in the National Basketball Association. He came to the Warriors from the Cincinnati Royals in 1969.

Russell, who will be 27 next month, stands 6-5 1-2 and has averaged 13.3 points a game during fve NBA seasons. He was the Knicks' No. 1 draft choice in 1966 after a brilliant collegiate career at the University of Michigan.

Cazzie was the sixth man for the Knicks during their championship season of 1969-70. He broke a wrist midway through last season and was used only sparingly after he returned.

This upset the health foods faddist who loves to lift weights. He mentioned it a few times to Knicks coach Red Holzman without avail.

Both Holzman and Warriors coach Al Attles were pleased by the trade. Holzman said he would use Lucas, former All America from Ohio State, at forward and to spell center Willis Reed.

"We hated to give up anyone with the ability of Cazzie Russell," said Holzman. "But in order to get a player of Lucas' stature, you have to be ready to give up someone of equal ability.

Cazzie is one of the finest shooters in the league and was instrumental in our club winning the championship last year and in our rise to a contender."

Attles figures the acquisition of Russell and Jim Barnett from the Portland Trail Blazers on April 1 will give the Warriors more speed.

"Cazzie is one of the most spectacular shooters in basketball," said Attles. "He is not the rebounder Lucas is, but Russell if younger and faster.

"The addition of Russell and Barnett gives us much more speed than we had last season."

Russell's best game in the NBA was against Detroit in 1968 when he scored 42 points.

Lucas has been one of the premier rebounders in the NBA, topping the 10,000 mark in career caroms last season. He came to the Warriors for Jim King and Billy Turner after six seasons with Cincinnati when newly appointed Royals coach Bob Cousy said Lucas wouldn't fit into the team's fast-break offense.

Lucas was the Royals' No. 1 draft choice while he was still in high school at Middletown, Ohio.

Ron Cerrudo Chases Masters King Coody

DALLAS (UPI) — Showing his best form since being sidelined by a back injury a year ago, Ron Cerrudo of Napa carded a one-under-par 69 yesterday and gained a tie for the sixth lowest score at the halfway point of the Byron Nelson Golf Classic.

Tall Texan Charles Coody, the hottest thing going in professional golf since he won the Masters tournament last month, took a two shot lead by ripping off a 66 to go with his first round score of 69. Five players including Chi Chi Rodriguez were tied for second place at 137, and Lee Trevino was alone at 138.

Cerrudo, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Cerrudo of San Rafael had a 72 on Thursday giving him a two-day total of 141. He was tied with seven other golfers, including such notables as Arnold Palmer, Bruce Crampton, Bobby Nichols and Ray Floyd. Palmer shot a 71 yesterday, as did Jack Nicklaus, who stood with seven others at 140.

Coody, whose blazing putter has brought him $43,000 since the Masters in Augusta, made seven putts of a dozen feet or better yesterday as he tamed the 7,031 Preston Trail Golf Club layout. First prize in the tourney is $25,000.

Marin Ace Lee Hurls Red Sox To 5-4 Victory

Bill Lee, former ace lefthander at Terra Linda High School, pitched masterfully for two and a third innings in relief yesterday and was rewarded with the win as the Boston Red Sox took their fifth straight victory, a 5-4 decision over the Brewers in Milwaukee.

Lee, a graduate of University of Southern California now in his second big league season, ran his 1971 record to 3-1 as he allowed only one hit and struck out three during his stint, which began in the seventh. He needed ninth inning help from Sparky Lyle, but was the pitcher of record when Billy Conigliaro scored the winning run after doubling in the eighth.

Chip Oliver Arrested On Dope Charge

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Chip Oliver, who quit as linebacker of the Oakland Raiders in 1970 to join a Mill Valley commune, is being held by St. Louis police on a charge ofillegal possession of narcotics paraphernalia.

Police said they found a pipe believed to contain marijuana residue in one of his pockets when they stopped his station wagon for improper passing Thursday.

Magistrate Milton A. Saitz issued a warrant on the charge and Oliver was being held in lieu of $3,500 bond, returnable next Wednesday.

Stargell Named Player Of Month

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Willie Stargell of Pittsburgh has been named National League player of the month by sportswriters and broadcasters for clubbing a record 11 home runs during April.

He received 58 of the 60 votes by the panel in the monthly poll conducted by the office of National League president Charles Feeney.

Atlanta's Ralph Garr, who hit .411 in April, and New York Mets pitcher Tom Seaver, 4-0 with a 1.38 ERA last month, received one vote apiece.

Giants And Mays Are Having A Ball

Willie, who celebrated his 40th birthday Thursday, suffers, as might be expected of a man his age, from aches and pains and needs a rubdown almost every time he plays.

This time, though, he wore a wide grin on his face. Not a smug one at all. Just a warm smile befitting a man who had just helped the San Francisco Giants score a 4-3 10th inning victory Friday night over the Atlanta Braves.

It was Mays' third hit of the game, a long drive which glanced off the base of the right field fence with two on and none out, and it won the game for the giants and increased their lead in the National League West to seven full games.

During his birthday party Thursday night Mays said playing baseball has become fun again for him after a couple of seasons when he felt it was just this side of drudgery.

"When you are winning it's always fun to be playing," he said.

It sure is, for Mays and all the Giants this year.

The three hits increased Mays' batting average to .383 second best in the N L behind Ralph Garr's .402. Garr went two for five for Atlanta Friday, scoring a run and driving in one to keep the Braves close.

It all went for naught, though, as Atlanta slipped 7-1-2 games behind the Giants, who now have won 21 games and lost only seven. The Los Angeles Dodgers and Houston Astros, both at .500, are closest to the Giants.

Gaylord Perry, winless since April 17, was one out away from his fourth victory when he served up Rookie Earl Williams' fifth homer to send the game into extra frames.

George Stone, the Atlanta starter and loser (0-1), and Sonny Jackson hit back-to-back singles after one out in the top of the 10th and Giants manager Charlie Fox replaced Perry with Jerry Johnson.

Johnson retired Garr and Hank Aaron on rollers to short to get out of the inning and then received credit for his fourth victory without a loss on Mays' winning blow in the bottom of the 10th.

Bobby bonds started the rally with a double into the left field corner and went to third on a sacrifice by Chris Speier. Speier wound up with a base hit when Stone was late fielding his bunt down ths third base line and then didn't have a play.

Cecil Upshaw, Atlanta's ace reliever, replaced Stone. He went to a full count before Mays lined a high outside fastball for the game winning hit. It was Willie's sixth game winning blow of the year and boosted his RBI total to 20.

Ken Henderson also figured prominently in the victory. It was his sixth inning bases-loaded single that drove in a pair and pushed the Giants into a 3-2 lead.

A Tough Question For Official Scorer

Three strikes and a batter is out. Right? Maybe. Baseball rules are provocative. Three strikes and the batter is out if the third strike is caught by the catcher. Three strikes are out even if the third one is not caught by the catcher when there is a runner on first and before two are out.

However, even if first base is occupied and a batter strikes out on a wild pitch or passed ball when there are two out, the batter may run safely to first base while the catcher is retrieving the ball. It happens frequently.

JOHNNY BENCH is an All-Star catcher. In fact, he was the National League's Most Valuable Player in 1970. He knows the rules. Yet, Bench momentarily forgot them last Sunday during a 13-inning game between the Giants and Refs.

It was the eighth inning and the score was tied 2-2. Bobby Bonds drew a one-out walk. Gary Nolan then struck out Chris Speier, rookie shortstop of the Giants who is a hustling ball player, the kind who runs to first base on walks.

THE STRIKEOUT pitch to Speier was a wild one in the dirt that skipped past Bench. Bonds was running with the pitch and properly was credited with a stolen base. Speier also ran to first when he saw the pitch get by Bench. The rookie may or may not have realized he automatically was out, that he didn't have the option of running for first since the bag had been occupied with only one out.

In any event, the rookie's run to first decoyed Bench into a throw to the Red first baseman. Bonds advanced to third on it, scoring a few moments later with a 3-2 go-ahead run when Willie Mays lined a single into center.

THE OFFICIAL scorer was confronted with a problem. There was no question about the stolen base for Bonds. Baseball rules are quite clear about stolen bases even on pitches that are wild ones. If the runner takes off for second with the pitch, he is credited with a stolen base even though the pitch winds up in the dirt behind the catcher.

But what about Bonds' advance to third? It's not unusual for a runner to steal second and continue to third on a wild pitch. In this case, however, it wasn't the pitch in the dirt that permitted Bonds to take an extra base. It was Bench's throw to first to make sure Speier was out, an entirely unnecessary precaution. Speier already was out.

SO HOW DID the scorer resolve the problem? He accounted for Bonds' advance to third on a fielder's choice throw by Bench to the Red first baseman. It was a logical solution except for the fact that the definition of a fielder's choice didn't fit Bench's act.

A fielder's choice is the act of a fielder who handles a fair grounder and, instead of throwing to first base to put out the batter-runner, throws to another base in an attempt to put out a preceding runer.

Baseball rules cover just about everything there is to cover in a game — except momentary mental skulls.

Disaster Again Hits The West Coast Relays

FRESNO (UPI) —More than 2,000 athletes kept one eye in the heavens and the other on the track today during the West Coast Relays at damp Ratcliffe Stadium.

Rain forced a postponement of the first day of competition Friday for the first time in the event's 45-year history. And fears were the entire event may be cancelled if more rain fell today on the clay track.

Meet director Cornelius (Dutch) Warmerdam said the year that disaster struck the relays which annually attract many of the nation's best track stars along with top-flight foreign competition.

One of the features of the relays was to have been a shot at the world record of 9:33.0 in the distance medley by Villanova University and the University of Houston.

Six milers who have run under four minutes, including Chuck LaBenz, John Mason and John Lawson, were to meet in an invitational mile run. In the two-mile, George Young (8:22.0) and Frank Shorter (8:33.4) were to battle Australia's Kerry Pearce (8:33.2).

Tolan In Cincy With Bad Ankle

CINCINNATI (UPI) —Dr. George Ballou, Cincinnati Reds' team physician, said Friday no immediate decision had been reached on the extent of the injury to outfielder Bobby Tolan after X-rays were taken and orthopedists had examined him.

"We are reserving any decision on what to do until Saturday in order to better determine the seriousness of the injury," Dr. Ballou said.

Tolan reinjured his right ankle Thursday night after working out of Los Angeles. He was walking to the dugout when he felt a sharp blow, as though he had been hit by a baseball. Tolan flew here Friday morning for medical examination.

Tolan underwent ankle surgery in January and has been on the disabled list since then.

Weatherman Holds Key At Indy

Mark Donohue of Media, Pa., already has eclipsed, unofficially, the existing speed records at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway and apparently is ready to shoot for the pole on the opening day of qualification next Saturday.

Six other drivers have hit 170 miles per hour or better in practice this month, but nobody has come close to Donohue's 177.901 m.p.h. recorded Thursday.

Thus, time and the weatherman become important factors with just one week left before the opening of qualifications next Saturday. Most drivers and crews still have a lot of work getting up to qualifying speeds, let alone speeds to challenge Donohue's performances, and rain is curtailing activities.

Rain limited practice Friday to 61 minutes, and chief steward Harlan Fengler shut down the track at 3 p.m., three hours before the regular quitting time. Rain Thursday kept the 2 1-2-mile oval closed five hours.

Rain today could limit the amount of practice time. Clearing conditions were forecast for later today, Sunday and Monday, but the extended forecast said more rain may show up by Monday night and Tuesday.

The pole position — inside front row—traditionally has gone to the fastest car on the first of the four days of qualifications. Although a new rule this year gives all cars a crack at trying for the pole, possibly even on the second day of trails, that spot in all likelihood still will go to the fastest first-day qualifier.

So far, only 32 cars have been on the track—one less than will start the May 29 classic. Through Friday, 58 cars had arrived at the speedway and 38 have passed technical inspection.

Three cars made it onto the track before the rains came Friday.

Denis Hulme of New Zealand has the best speedway times this year behind Donohue. Hulme has turned the course as fast as 172.944 m.p.h., which is quicker than the official one and four-lap records set in 1968 by Joe Leonard, San Jose, Calif., of 171.953 and 171.559 m.p.h.

Treadway Is Week's Top Bowler

Dick Treadway, secretary of the Marin County Men's Bowling Association, was the kingpin of the past week's league bowling in Marin County.

Treadway ripped off a 693 three-game series for high score at Greenbrae Lanes and a 671 for high three-game score at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael. Orlando Conti rolled high four-game score, a 910 that included a pair of 242 lines.

Rich Epidendio shook up the bowlers in the Marin Travel League when he converted the "big four," the 4-6-7-10 split, at Country Club Bowl.

The week's honor roll:

Kentucky's Hurt Star Whips Utah

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI)—Darel Carrier suffered a six-stich gash in his right eyebrow Friday night, but never lost his shooting eye as he led the Kentucky Colonels to a 116-110 victory over the Utah Stars in the American Basketball Association Finals playoff.

The win trimmed Utah's lead to 2-1 and the Colonels sought the equalizer in a nationally-televised game today. The fifth game of the best-of-seven series will be played in Salt Lake City Wednesday night.

"It never bothered me," he said. "It's one of those things that happen in a game and you have to shake it off."

The veteran guard wound up with 25 points and scored the basket that put the Colonels ahead for good just before the end of the third quarter.

The Stars expected a big scoring splurge from Carrier, who averaged just over 30 points against them in the first two games at Salt Lake City.

But Utah had checked Carrier's backcourt, running mate, Louie Dampier, who made only three points in the first game and 12 in the second.

Dampier broke out of his slump Friday night with 23 points, though his shooting was still not up to par with only eight of 25 field goal attempts.

Rookie Center Dan Issel, a consistent Colonels' performer in the semifinal and final playoff rounds, outshone Utah's classy veteran, Zelmo Beaty, in their pivot duel. Issel had 24 points and 17 rebounds to 13 points and 11 rebounds for Beaty, who fouled out with more than six minutes left.

Errors Beats Twins

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Tony Oliva can't do anything wrong with his bat these days but he was having problems with his glove Friday night.

The Minnesota Twins' rightfielder had his usual day at the plate, collecting two hits and driving in a run to boost his league-leading average to .367.

But with two out in the ninth inning and the score tied 5-5, he dropped a routine pop-fly in short right that gave the Washingon Senators a 6-5 victory over the Twins.

"The ball hit right in the middle of the glove and I don't know how it popped out," Oliva said after the game. "I just can't understand it."

The Twins were ahead 5-2 with two out and none on when the Senators started a rally on Tom McCraw's triple off Oliva's glove against the right field screen.

"I was certain I was going to catch McCraw's drive (which would have ended the game) but the back of my glove hit the fence and jarred the ball loose," Oliva explained.

Bernie Allen followed by singling in McCraw and Paul Casanova then hit a two-run homer that tied the game 5-5. Ray Corbin replaced Bert Blyleven and Toby Harrah greeted him with an infield single and moved to second on a wild pitch.

Dick Billings then lifted the fly to Oliva in short right field and the inning again seemed over. But Oliva dropped it as Harrah raced home with the deciding run.

In the other games, Boston downed Milwaukee 5-4, Detroit nipped Kansas City 3-1, California outlasted Cleveland 4-2 in 11 innings and New York beat Chicago 4-3. The Oakland at Baltimore game was rained out.

Boston continued its hold on the American League East lead by downing Milwaukee. Billy Conigliaro hit a three-run homer in the first inning and scored the deciding run in the eighth on Duane Josephson's sacrifice fly. Sparky Lyle got his fifth save by getting Floyd Wicker to hit into a double play with the bases-loaded and one out in the ninth.

Mickey Lolich laid down a sacrifice bunt with none out and Ed Brinkman on second in the seventh with Kansas City leading Detroit 1-0. Mike Hedlund picked up the bunt and threw to third in an attempt to force Brinkman. But he fired the ball into leftfield and both Brinkman and Lolich scored to give Detroit the victory. The next batter, Dick McAuliffe, homered off the shocked Hedlund for an insurance run.

Syd O'Brien, a fifth inning replacement for shortstop Jim Fregosi, hit a two-run homer off reliever Chuck Machemehl with one out in the 11th to hand California the victory over Cleveland. Machemehl was sent to the minors after the game. Fregosi also homered for the Angels.

NATIONAL LEAGUE ROUNDUP

Mets' Seaver Again Tops St. Louis Ace Gibson, 3-1

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The duel between Bob Gibson and Tom Seaver, a pair of Cy Young Award winners, doesn't exist. At least, according to Bob Gibson.

"You guys make too much of it," snarled the St. Louis ace Friday night after Seaver had recorded his second victory against him in little more than a week as the New York Mets beat the Cardinals 3-1.

"He's a swell pitcher but he can't take away from me anything I've done," said Gibson. "I pitched against the Mets tonight, not Tom Seaver. I pitch against a lot of good pitchers in this league —Juan Marichal, Ferguson Jenkins —I go through this every time I come to New York.

"I'd be afraid of him if he was batting .700. I didn't see him getting any hits tonight."

Gibson, who lost to Seaver and the Mets 12-2 April 26, led 1-0 in the seventh inning Friday night when Bud Harrelson tripled and scored on a wild pitch. An inning later, Ed Kranepool doubled and scored the tie-breaking run on Jerry Grote's double. Grote scored when second baseman Ted Sizemore let Seaver's ground ball skip by for an error.

"I crossed up the catcher," said Gibson in explaining the pitch that allowed the Mets to tie the score. "He signalled for a curve and I threw him a high fast ball. The hit that really hurt, though, was Grote's handle hit in the eighth. I jammed him inside with plenty on it but just nudged it into centerfield."

Elsewhere in the National League, San Francisco edged Atlanta 4-3 in 10 innings, Pittsburgh nipped Los Angeles 3-2, Houston routed Philadelphia 8-1 and Montreal downed Chicago 3-1. The Cincinnati-San Diego game was rained out.

Willie Stargell's 13th homer of the season was the margin of victory as the Pirates edged Los Angeles. Stargell smashed a 435-foot homer off Don Sutton in the sixth inning to give the Pirates a 3-0 lead.

Joe Morgan collected four hits, stole two bases, scored three times and drove in a pair of runs in leading Houston past the Phillies.

Ron Fairly led off the seventh inning with a single and Coco Laboy added a run-scoring single as Montreal downed the Cubs. After Fairly's homer, his first of the season, Ron Swoboda doubled, took third on a sacrifice and scored on Laboy's single.

Donohue Drives Javelin To Trans-Am Pole Spot

LIME ROCK, Conn. (UPI) — Mark Donohue of Media, Pa., driving a factory-backed Javelin, will drive off from the pole position today in the 200-mile Schaefer Trans-American Championship Auto Race. Donohue set a mark of 93.28 miles per hour in Friday qualifying run.

Baseball

CLEVELAND (UPI) —Righthander Archie Reynolds of Salt Lake City, the strikeout leader in the Pacific Coast League with 53, has been recalled by the parent California Angels.

Reynolds, who will join the Angels in Cleveland today, is coming off a four-hit 1-0 shutout of Spokane last Tuesday. The 62, 205-pound hurler was purchased from the Chicago Cubs last October.

CHICAGO (UPI) — Outfielder Mike Hershberger was expected to join the Chicago White Sox today after his contract was purchased from Tucson of the Pacific Coast League, where he was batting .319 in 13 games.

CHICAGO (UPI) —Outfielder Mike Hershberger was expected to join the Chicago White Sox today after his contract was purchased from Tucson of the Pacific Coast League.

In 13 games with the Toros, Hershberger, a former fly chaser for the Oakland Athletics, was batting .319.

Basketball

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UPI) — Notre Dame signed Frank McLaughlin and Dick Dibiaso as assistants to head basketball coach Dick Phelps Friday. McLaughlin was Phelps' aide at Fordham last season and Dibiaso was an assistant coach at Virginia.

Football

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Linebacker Jack Ham, the Pittsburgh Steelers' second draft choice, was signed Friday for the 1971 national football league season.

Ham starred at Penn State, where he played in only three losing games during his varsity career.

Boxing

SAN JOSE (UPI) —Kim Booker, 1967 AAU welterweight champion and unbeaten in eight pro bouts, is scheduled to fight Henry Walker of Los Angeles in a 10-rounder May 14.

In a companion 10, Ray Echavarria of San Jose goes against Mexican featherweight Joe Valdez.

Tennis

RENO (UPI) —Two South African stars on the University of Nevada tennis team are trying to play tennis for 72 straight hours.

Glenn Grisillo and Mel Baleson began their marathon Thursday and have been playing since, taking a 10-minute breather every four hours. Friday they played a 103-101 set that lasted six hours.

Both players agree that only tired limbs can stop them. But Grisillo says his arms might give out and Baleson says it would be his legs.

Willie Big Hit At Party

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—It's a good thing Willie Mays' 40th birthday party the other night lasted as long as it did.

And for two pretty good reasons.

The first, it gave Mays, a shy man when it comes to public gatherings other than a baseball game, a chance to compose himself after showing distinct signs of emotional distress over a steady stream of plaudits being showered on him by speaker after speaker.

Willie, who preferred to sit a couple of steps behind the others at the head table so that he wouldn't have to look at the big crowd, and maybe so that they might not see him wipe away a tear or two, acknowledged the "party" was something he would never forget.

The second reason why it was a good thing the party dragged on until near midnight after starting with off-dining room libations around 6:30 p.m., was that it gave Mays time to think about all the things he wanted to say when it finally became his turn go stand before the crowd and the microphone.

What Mays had to say wasn't exactly earth-shattering news but the aging superstar who seems to have found the secret to life after 30, revealed a couple of interesting items.

"I know a lot of people wonder what my thoughts are these days about hitting home runs and how long I expect to keep on playing," Mays started off.

"Hank Aaron and I, people say, have some sort of rivalry while we chase after the record (Babe Ruth's 714-homer mark). I guess you could call it a rivalry but Hank and I are good friends. When he does well I'm happy and I know that when I do well he is happy for me.

"No one can tell how many homers we might hit or how long we can play. For myself, all I've ever wanted out of baseball is appreciation. If the fans enjoy my playing then I enjoy myself. When they stop enjoying me then maybe that will be the time to go on and do something else."

Mays also told the big crowd what it feels like to be a baseball star and have people always interested in what he is doing.

"It's like living in a bowl," he said. "I have to be one person on the ball field and someone else away from the field. That's hard to do and maybe that's why it would be tough for me to get married. Hardly any woman would appreciate a guy like that, but that's the way I am and I can't change."

Mays then interrupted himself to do what many people thought was strange for him. He introduced his best girl friend, who was sitting in the audience.

Columnists have been saying ever since the end of the 1970 season that Mays would marry again, and soon. One keyhole type even wrote Mays already was secretly married.

"I can't account for what people want to write," Mays said later. But he did acknowledge that over the years writers, sports writers that is, had been very fair with him.

Before he sat down Mays was anxious to get one more thing off his chest. Since the opportunity to speak before a big crowd was his first (by his choosing) and probably his last, Willie wanted to set the record straight so there might be no doubt where he stood.

This last thing he wanted to talk about had to do with the problems of the black man. In the past he has been accused of being an Uncle Tom and of not caring by some among the more militant in the black movement.

"If anyone really cares to find out they can, and they'll see that I have done my share," Mays said.

A Tough Question For Official Scorer

Three strikes and a batter is out. Right? Maybe. Baseball rules are provocative. Three strikes and the batter is out if the third strike is caught by the catcher. Three strikes are out even if the third one is not caught by the catcher when there is a runner on first and before two are out.

However, even if first base is occupied and a batter strikes out on a wild pitch or passed ball when there are two out, the batter may run safely to first base while the catcher is retrieving the ball. It happens frequently.

JOHNNY BENCH is an All-Star catcher. In fact, he was the National League's Most Valuable Player in 1970. He knows the rules. Yet, Bench momentarily forgot them last Sunday during a 13-inning game between the Giants and Refs.

It was the eighth inning and the score was tied 2-2. Bobby Bonds drew a one-out walk. Gary Nolan then struck out Chris Speier, rookie shortstop of the Giants who is a hustling ball player, the kind who runs to first base on walks.

THE STRIKEOUT pitch to Speier was a wild one in the dirt that skipped past Bench. Bonds was running with the pitch and properly was credited with a stolen base. Speier also ran to first when he saw the pitch get by Bench. The rookie may or may not have realized he automatically was out, that he didn't have the option of running for first since the bag had been occupied with only one out.

In any event, the rookie's run to first decoyed Bench into a throw to the Red first baseman. Bonds advanced to third on it, scoring a few moments later with a 3-2 go-ahead run when Willie Mays lined a single into center.

THE OFFICIAL scorer was confronted with a problem. There was no question about the stolen base for Bonds. Baseball rules are quite clear about stolen bases even on pitches that are wild ones. If the runner takes off for second with the pitch, he is credited with a stolen base even though the pitch winds up in the dirt behind the catcher.

But what about Bonds' advance to third? It's not unusual for a runner to steal second and continue to third on a wild pitch. In this case, however, it wasn't the pitch in the dirt that permitted Bonds to take an extra base. It was Bench's throw to first to make sure Speier was out, an entirely unnecessary precaution. Speier already was out.

SO HOW DID the scorer resolve the problem? He accounted for Bonds' advance to third on a fielder's choice throw by Bench to the Red first baseman. It was a logical solution except for the fact that the definition of a fielder's choice didn't fit Bench's act.

A fielder's choice is the act of a fielder who handles a fair grounder and, instead of throwing to first base to put out the batter-runner, throws to another base in an attempt to put out a preceding runer.

Baseball rules cover just about everything there is to cover in a game — except momentary mental skulls.

Disaster Again Hits The West Coast Relays

FRESNO (UPI) —More than 2,000 athletes kept one eye in the heavens and the other on the track today during the West Coast Relays at damp Ratcliffe Stadium.

Rain forced a postponement of the first day of competition Friday for the first time in the event's 45-year history. And fears were the entire event may be cancelled if more rain fell today on the clay track.

Meet director Cornelius (Dutch) Warmerdam said the year that disaster struck the relays which annually attract many of the nation's best track stars along with top-flight foreign competition.

One of the features of the relays was to have been a shot at the world record of 9:33.0 in the distance medley by Villanova University and the University of Houston.

Six milers who have run under four minutes, including Chuck LaBenz, John Mason and John Lawson, were to meet in an invitational mile run. In the two-mile, George Young (8:22.0) and Frank Shorter (8:33.4) were to battle Australia's Kerry Pearce (8:33.2).

Dodger Shuffle; Two Down, Two Up

SPOKANE, Wash. (UPI) — Bobby Valentine and Charlie Hough, two Pacific Coast League stars last season who were brought up by the Los Angeles Dodgers, have been returned to Spokane.

Tolan In Cincy With Bad Ankle

CINCINNATI (UPI) —Dr. George Ballou, Cincinnati Reds' team physician, said Friday no immediate decision had been reached on the extent of the injury to outfielder Bobby Tolan after X-rays were taken and orthopedists had examined him.

"We are reserving any decision on what to do until Saturday in order to better determine the seriousness of the injury," Dr. Ballou said.

Tolan reinjured his right ankle Thursday night after working out of Los Angeles. He was walking to the dugout when he felt a sharp blow, as though he had been hit by a baseball. Tolan flew here Friday morning for medical examination.

Tolan underwent ankle surgery in January and has been on the disabled list since then.

BOWLING TIPS

Weatherman Holds Key At Indy

Mark Donohue of Media, Pa., already has eclipsed, unofficially, the existing speed records at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway and apparently is ready to shoot for the pole on the opening day of qualification next Saturday.

Six other drivers have hit 170 miles per hour or better in practice this month, but nobody has come close to Donohue's 177.901 m.p.h. recorded Thursday.

Thus, time and the weatherman become important factors with just one week left before the opening of qualifications next Saturday. Most drivers and crews still have a lot of work getting up to qualifying speeds, let alone speeds to challenge Donohue's performances, and rain is curtailing activities.

Rain limited practice Friday to 61 minutes, and chief steward Harlan Fengler shut down the track at 3 p.m., three hours before the regular quitting time. Rain Thursday kept the 2 1-2-mile oval closed five hours.

Rain today could limit the amount of practice time. Clearing conditions were forecast for later today, Sunday and Monday, but the extended forecast said more rain may show up by Monday night and Tuesday.

The pole position — inside front row—traditionally has gone to the fastest car on the first of the four days of qualifications. Although a new rule this year gives all cars a crack at trying for the pole, possibly even on the second day of trails, that spot in all likelihood still will go to the fastest first-day qualifier.

So far, only 32 cars have been on the track—one less than will start the May 29 classic. Through Friday, 58 cars had arrived at the speedway and 38 have passed technical inspection.

Three cars made it onto the track before the rains came Friday.

Denis Hulme of New Zealand has the best speedway times this year behind Donohue. Hulme has turned the course as fast as 172.944 m.p.h., which is quicker than the official one and four-lap records set in 1968 by Joe Leonard, San Jose, Calif., of 171.953 and 171.559 m.p.h.

Treadway Is Week's Top Bowler

Dick Treadway, secretary of the Marin County Men's Bowling Association, was the kingpin of the past week's league bowling in Marin County.

Treadway ripped off a 693 three-game series for high score at Greenbrae Lanes and a 671 for high three-game score at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael. Orlando Conti rolled high four-game score, a 910 that included a pair of 242 lines.

Dave Mendelsohn again led the juniors with his 648 series at Greenbrae.

Rich Epidendio shook up the bowlers in the Marin Travel League when he converted the "big four," the 4-6-7-10 split, at Country Club Bowl.

The week's honor roll:

COUNTRY CLUB BOWL

Kentucky's Hurt Star Whips Utah

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI)— Darel Carrier suffered a six-stich gash in his right eyebrow Friday night, but never lost his shooting eye as he led the Kentucky Colonels to a 116-110 victory over the Utah Stars in the American Basketball Association Finals playoff.

The win trimmed Utah's lead to 2-1 and the Colonels sought the equalizer in a nationally-televised game today. The fifth game of the best-of-seven series will be played in Salt Lake City Wednesday night.

"It never bothered me," he said. "It's one of those things that happen in a game and you have to shake it off."

The veteran guard wound up with 25 points and scored the basket that put the Colonels ahead for good just before the end of the third quarter.

The Stars expected a big scoring splurge from Carrier, who averaged just over 30 points against them in the first two games at Salt Lake City.

But Utah had checked Carrier's backcourt, running mate, Louie Dampier, who made only three points in the first game and 12 in the second.

Dampier broke out of his slump Friday night with 23 points, though his shooting was still not up to par with only eight of 25 field goal attempts.

Rookie Center Dan Issel, a consistent Colonels' performer in the semifinal and final playoff rounds, outshone Utah's classy veteran, Zelmo Beaty, in their pivot duel. Issel had 24 points and 17 rebounds to 13 points and 11 rebounds for Beaty, who fouled out with more than six minutes left.

Errors Beats Twins

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Tony Oliva can't do anything wrong with his bat these days but he was having problems with his glove Friday night.

The Minnesota Twins' rightfielder had his usual day at the plate, collecting two hits and driving in a run to boost his league-leading average to .367.

But with two out in the ninth inning and the score tied 5-5, he dropped a routine pop-fly in short right that gave the Washingon Senators a 6-5 victory over the Twins.

"The ball hit right in the middle of the glove and I don't know how it popped out," Oliva said after the game. "I just can't understand it."

The Twins were ahead 5-2 with two out and none on when the Senators started a rally on Tom McCraw's triple off Oliva's glove against the right field screen.

"I was certain I was going to catch McCraw's drive (which would have ended the game) but the back of my glove hit the fence and jarred the ball loose," Oliva explained.

Bernie Allen followed by singling in McCraw and Paul Casanova then hit a two-run homer that tied the game 5-5. Ray Corbin replaced Bert Blyleven and Toby Harrah greeted him with an infield single and moved to second on a wild pitch.

Dick Billings then lifted the fly to Oliva in short right field and the inning again seemed over. But Oliva dropped it as Harrah raced home with the deciding run.

In the other games, Boston downed Milwaukee 5-4, Detroit nipped Kansas City 3-1, California outlasted Cleveland 4-2 in 11 innings and New York beat Chicago 4-3. The Oakland at Baltimore game was rained out.

Boston continued its hold on the American League East lead by downing Milwaukee. Billy Conigliaro hit a three-run homer in the first inning and scored the deciding run in the eighth on Duane Josephson's sacrifice fly. Sparky Lyle got his fifth save by getting Floyd Wicker to hit into a double play with the bases-loaded and one out in the ninth.

Mickey Lolich laid down a sacrifice bunt with none out and Ed Brinkman on second in the seventh with Kansas City leading Detroit 1-0. Mike Hedlund picked up the bunt and threw to third in an attempt to force Brinkman. But he fired the ball into leftfield and both Brinkman and Lolich scored to give Detroit the victory. The next batter, Dick McAuliffe, homered off the shocked Hedlund for an insurance run.

Syd O'Brien, a fifth inning replacement for shortstop Jim Fregosi, hit a two-run homer off reliever Chuck Machemehl with one out in the 11th to hand California the victory over Cleveland. Machemehl was sent to the minors after the game. Fregosi also homered for the Angels.

NATIONAL LEAGUE ROUNDUP

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The duel between Bob Gibson and Tom Seaver, a pair of Cy Young Award winners, doesn't exist. At least, according to Bob Gibson.

"You guys make too much of it," snarled the St. Louis ace Friday night after Seaver had recorded his second victory against him in little more than a week as the New York Mets beat the Cardinals 3-1.

"He's a swell pitcher but he can't take away from me anything I've done," said Gibson. "I pitched against the Mets tonight, not Tom Seaver. I pitch against a lot of good pitchers in this league —Juan Marichal, Ferguson Jenkins —I go through this every time I come to New York.

"I'd be afraid of him if he was batting .700. I didn't see him getting any hits tonight."

Gibson, who lost to Seaver and the Mets 12-2 April 26, led 1-0 in the seventh inning Friday night when Bud Harrelson tripled and scored on a wild pitch. An inning later, Ed Kranepool doubled and scored the tie-breaking run on Jerry Grote's double. Grote scored when second baseman Ted Sizemore let Seaver's ground ball skip by for an error.

"I crossed up the catcher," said Gibson in explaining the pitch that allowed the Mets to tie the score. "He signalled for a curve and I threw him a high fast ball. The hit that really hurt, though, was Grote's handle hit in the eighth. I jammed him inside with plenty on it but just nudged it into centerfield."

Elsewhere in the National League, San Francisco edged Atlanta 4-3 in 10 innings, Pittsburgh nipped Los Angeles 3-2, Houston routed Philadelphia 8-1 and Montreal downed Chicago 3-1. The Cincinnati-San Diego game was rained out.

Willie Stargell's 13th homer of the season was the margin of victory as the Pirates edged Los Angeles. Stargell smashed a 435-foot homer off Don Sutton in the sixth inning to give the Pirates a 3-0 lead.

Joe Morgan collected four hits, stole two bases, scored three times and drove in a pair of runs in leading Houston past the Phillies.

Ron Fairly led off the seventh inning with a single and Coco Laboy added a run-scoring single as Montreal downed the Cubs. After Fairly's homer, his first of the season, Ron Swoboda doubled, took third on a sacrifice and scored on Laboy's single.

Donohue Drives Javelin To Trans-Am Pole Spot

LIME ROCK, Conn. (UPI) — Mark Donohue of Media, Pa., driving a factory-backed Javelin, will drive off from the pole position today in the 200-mile Schaefer Trans-American Championship Auto Race. Donohue set a mark of 93.28 miles per hour in Friday qualifying run.

Baseball

CLEVELAND (UPI) —Right-hander Archie Reynolds of Salt Lake City, the strikeout leader in the Pacific Coast League with 53, has been recalled by the parent California Angels.

Reynolds, who will join the Angels in Cleveland today, is coming off a four-hit 1-0 shutout of Spokane last Tuesday. The 62, 205-pound hurler was purchased from the Chicago Cubs last October.

CHICAGO (UPI) — Outfielder Mike Hershberger was expected to join the Chicago White Sox today after his contract was purchased from Tucson of the Pacific Coast League, where he was batting .319 in 13 games.

CHICAGO (UPI) —Outfielder Mike Hershberger was expected to join the Chicago White Sox today after his contract was purchased from Tucson of the Pacific Coast League.

In 13 games with the Toros, Hershberger, a former fly chaser for the Oakland Athletics, was batting .319.

Basketball

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UPI) — Notre Dame signed Frank McLaughlin and Dick Dibiaso as assistants to head basketball coach Dick Phelps Friday. McLaughlin was Phelps' aide at Fordham last season and Dibiaso was an assistant coach at Virginia.

Football

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Linebacker Jack Ham, the Pittsburgh Steelers' second draft choice, was signed Friday for the 1971 national football league season.

Ham starred at Penn State, where he played in only three losing games during his varsity career.

Boxing

SAN JOSE (UPI) —Kim Booker, 1967 AAU welterweight champion and unbeaten in eight pro bouts, is scheduled to fight Henry Walker of Los Angeles in a 10-rounder May 14.

In a companion 10, Ray Echavarria of San Jose goes against Mexican featherweight Joe Valdez.

Tennis

RENO (UPI) —Two South African stars on the University of Nevada tennis team are trying to play tennis for 72 straight hours.

Glenn Grisillo and Mel Baleson began their marathon Thursday and have been playing since, taking a 10-minute breather every four hours. Friday they played a 103-101 set that lasted six hours.

Both players agree that only tired limbs can stop them. But— Grisillo says his arms might give out and Baleson says it would be his legs.

Willie Big Hit At Party

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—It's a good thing Willie Mays' 40th birthday party the other night lasted as long as it did.

And for two pretty good reasons.

The first, it gave Mays, a shy man when it comes to public gatherings other than a baseball game, a chance to compose himself after showing distinct signs of emotional distress over a steady stream of plaudits being showered on him by speaker after speaker.

Willie, who preferred to sit a couple of steps behind the others at the head table so that he wouldn't have to look at the big crowd, and maybe so that they might not see him wipe away a tear or two, acknowledged the "party" was something he would never forget.

The second reason why it was a good thing the party dragged on until near midnight after starting with off-dining room libations around 6:30 p.m., was that it gave Mays time to think about all the things he wanted to say when it finally became his turn go stand before the crowd and the microphone.

What Mays had to say wasn't exactly earth-shattering news but the aging superstar who seems to have found the secret to life after 30, revealed a couple of interesting items.

"I know a lot of people wonder what my thoughts are these days about hitting home runs and how long I expect to keep on playing," Mays started off.

"Hank Aaron and I, people say, have some sort of rivalry while we chase after the record (Babe Ruth's 714-homer mark). I guess you could call it a rivalry but Hank and I are good friends. When he does well I'm happy and I know that when I do well he is happy for me.

"No one can tell how many homers we might hit or how long we can play. For myself, all I've ever wanted out of baseball is appreciation. If the fans enjoy my playing then I enjoy myself. When they stop enjoying me then maybe that will be the time to go on and do something else."

Mays also told the big crowd what it feels like to be a baseball star and have people always interested in what he is doing.

"It's like living in a bowl," he said. "I have to be one person on the ball field and someone else away from the field. That's hard to do and maybe that's why it would be tough for me to get married. Hardly any woman would appreciate a guy like that, but that's the way I am and I can't change."

Mays then interrupted himself to do what many people thought was strange for him. He introduced his best girl friend, who was sitting in the audience.

Columnists have been saying ever since the end of the 1970 season that Mays would marry again, and soon. One keyhole type even wrote Mays already was secretly married.

"I can't account for what people want to write," Mays said later. But he did acknowledge that over the years writers, sports writers that is, had been very fair with him.

Before he sat down Mays was anxious to get one more thing off his chest. Since the opportunity to speak before a big crowd was his first (by his choosing) and probably his last, Willie wanted to set the record straight so there might be no doubt where he stood.

This last thing he wanted to talk about had to do with the problems of the black man. In the past he has been accused of being an Uncle Tom and of not caring by some among the more militant in the black movement.

"If anyone really cares to find out they can, and they'll see that I have done my share," Mays said.

West Must Know Correct Lead To Defeat No-Trump

During the defense of some hands you can easily count declarer's probable tricks. If these tricks will give declarer his contract, you must act quickly to defeat the contract in a hurry. Your attack may look risky, but deeds must when the the Devil drives.

WITH ACE

West opened the jack of clubs and declarer won in dummy with the ace. East carefully dropped the deuce to indicate his total lack of interest in the clubs.

South next led the king of diamonds to drive out the ace. Now West could see that declarer would surely take four diamonds and two hearts in the dummy and that he would almost surely take two additional club tricks in his own hand. (East might well have encouraged a club continuation if he had held as much as the queen of clubs.)

Since declarer was sure to win nine tricks as soon as he regained the lead, West had to take four more tricks on the run. Spades was the obvious suit to attack, but West had to choose the right card to lead.

UNBLOCKS

West led the nine of spades to make sure of unblocking the suit. Declarer put up dummy's ten, and East played the jack with some misgivings. When this held, East naturally returned the three of spades to West's king.

West now led the deuce of spades, and East could win two tricks with the A-7 behind dummy's Q-6. Four spade tricks and the ace of diamonds were just enough to defeat the contract.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one no-trump (16 to 18 points), and the next player passes.

You hold:
♠ - K 9 2
♥ - Q 7 3
♦ - A 7
♣ - J 10 9 8 6.
What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid three no-trump.

You have 10 points in high cards and therefore know that the combined count must be 26 to 28 points. This should be enough for game in no-trump but not enough for game in clubs.

Loses Umbrellas But Not Faith In Its Commuters

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI—The Alameda-Contra Costa Transit District is learning there's a touch of larceny in the hearts of its commuters.

Last year the company set out a bin of 50 used umbrellas in the San Francisco Depot for commuters caught in a rainstorm. The sign over the bin asked that they be returned after use.

None was returned.

AC transit tried it again this past March —this time with 150 umbrellas. They all disappeared except one. That one was broken.

But undaunted officials said Thursday, "we haven't lost all faith in our commuters. We hope to try again with another 150 umbrellas next time we have some heavy rain."

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, May 8, the 128th day of 1971 with 237 to follow.

The moon is between its first quarter and full phase. The morning stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars and Jupiter. The evening star is Saturn.

On this day in history:

In 1879 George Selden of Rochester, N.Y., filed for the first patent of an automobile. It was granted in 1895.

A thought for the day: President Harry Truman said shortly before the atomic bomb was dropped on Japan in 1945,

"The force from which the sun draws its power has been loosed against those who brought war to the Far East."

National Health Plan Is Forecast

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—A national health insurance plan will be in operation within three years, the American Health Association's executive director predicts.

"It will do something about the 20 million people in the ghettos and rural areas who can't get any health services now because of lack of facilities," James R. Kimmey told a recent American Pharmaceutical Association convention.

HOW TO PLAY WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

West Must Know Correct Lead To Defeat No-Trump

During the defense of some hands you can easily count declarer's probable tricks. If these tricks will give declarer his contract, you must act quickly to defeat the contract in a hurry. Your attack may look risky, but deeds must when the the Devil drives.

WITH ACE

West opened the jack of clubs and declarer won in dummy with the ace. East carefully dropped the deuce to indicate his total lack of interest in the clubs.

South next led the king of diamonds to drive out the ace. Now West could see that declarer would surely take four diamonds and two hearts in the dummy and that he would almost surely take two additional club tricks in his own hand. (East might well have encouraged a club continuation if he had held as much as the queen of clubs.)

Since declarer was sure to win nine tricks as soon as he regained the lead, West had to take four more tricks on the run. Spades was the obvious suit to attack, but West had to choose the right card to lead.

UNBLOCKS

West led the nine of spades to make sure of unblocking the suit. Declarer put up dummy's ten, and East played the jack with some misgivings. When this held, East naturally returned the three of spades to West's king.

West now led the deuce of spades, and East could win two tricks with the A-7 behind dummy's Q-6. Four spade tricks and the ace of diamonds were just enough to defeat the contract.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one no-trump (16 to 18 points), and the next player passes.

You hold:
♠ - K 9 2
♥ - Q 7 3
♦ - A 7
♣ - J 10 9 8 6.
What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid three no-trump.

You have 10 points in high cards and therefore know that the combined count must be 26 to 28 points. This should be enough for game in no-trump but not enough for game in clubs.

Loses Umbrellas But Not Faith In Its Commuters

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI—The Alameda-Contra Costa Transit District is learning there's a touch of larceny in the hearts of its commuters.

Last year the company set out a bin of 50 used umbrellas in the San Francisco Depot for commuters caught in a rainstorm. The sign over the bin asked that they be returned after use.

None was returned.

AC transit tried it again this past March —this time with 150 umbrellas. They all disappeared except one. That one was broken.

But undaunted officials said Thursday, "we haven't lost all faith in our commuters. We hope to try again with another 150 umbrellas next time we have some heavy rain."

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, May 8, the 128th day of 1971 with 237 to follow.

The moon is between its first quarter and full phase. The morning stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars and Jupiter. The evening star is Saturn.

On this day in history:

In 1879 George Selden of Rochester, N.Y., filed for the first patent of an automobile. It was granted in 1895.

A thought for the day: President Harry Truman said shortly before the atomic bomb was dropped on Japan in 1945,

"The force from which the sun draws its power has been loosed against those who brought war to the Far East."

National Health Plan Is Forecast

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—A national health insurance plan will be in operation within three years, the American Health Association's executive director predicts.

"It will do something about the 20 million people in the ghettos and rural areas who can't get any health services now because of lack of facilities," James R. Kimmey told a recent American Pharmaceutical Association convention.

WEEK'S BUSINESS

A Dark Cloud: Money Crisis

NEW YORK (UPI)—A monetary crisis that could be the worst since World War II raised a dark cloud on the American business horizon this week.

The crisis resulted in currency speculation against the dollar in Europe so intense that five European central banks stopped supporting the dollar and the West German government seriously considered revaluing the mark upward against the dollar.

However, as the weekend neared, it appeared more likely that Chancellor Willy Brandt's government would not revalue the mark but simply would allow it to float upward against the dollar for a while. A decision was expected on Saturday.

The speculation calmed down considerably on Thursday and the free market price of gold, which had spurted to an 18 month high, fell 42 1-2 cents while the dollar improved a little in the foreign exchange markets.

Nevertheless, a British expert said bluntly that "people have lost faith in the dollar."

The semiannual meeting of the Business Council at Hot Springs, Va., revealed a feeling of unease about the economic outlook. Many of the assembled business leaders were much less optimistic than Nixon Administration spokesmen about the pace of recovery and the fight to end inflation.

WEEK'S BUSINESS

A Dark Cloud: Money Crisis

NEW YORK (UPI)—A monetary crisis that could be the worst since World War II raised a dark cloud on the American business horizon this week.

The crisis resulted in currency speculation against the dollar in Europe so intense that five European central banks stopped supporting the dollar and the West German government seriously considered revaluing the mark upward against the dollar.

However, as the weekend neared, it appeared more likely that Chancellor Willy Brandt's government would not revalue the mark but simply would allow it to float upward against the dollar for a while. A decision was expected on Saturday.

The speculation calmed down considerably on Thursday and the free market price of gold, which had spurted to an 18 month high, fell 42 1-2 cents while the dollar improved a little in the foreign exchange markets.

Nevertheless, a British expert said bluntly that "people have lost faith in the dollar."

The semiannual meeting of the Business Council at Hot Springs, Va., revealed a feeling of unease about the economic outlook. Many of the assembled business leaders were much less optimistic than Nixon Administration spokesmen about the pace of recovery and the fight to end inflation.

WEEK'S BUSINESS

The stock market eased in reaction to the monetary crisis. The rise on retail trade slowed down in comparison with recent weeks; Dun & Bradstreet said it was only 1 to 5 per cent from a year ago on the average.

Domestic automobile sales for the final third of April were only even with last year's slow pace although sales for the whole month were up 7 per cent from a year ago. Sales of imported cars hit a record 144,000 in the month—16 per cent of the total market.

Some barometers declined: Factory orders dropped 0.7 per cent in March, the first drop in five months and March construction spending fell from the previous month—the first dip in nine months.

The pace of rising wholesale prices accelerated in April to 0.5 per cent from 0.2 per cent in March.

Bank Lauds U.S. Decision On China Trade

SAN FRANCISCO (BW) — Crocker-Citizens National Bank has lauded the U.S. Treasury Department announcement on lifting of controls on use of dollars in transactions with Communist China. In a statement the bank said:

"We believe the action is an essential ingredient in a step-by-step approach to improved relationships with the People's Republic of China.

"It is to be hoped that there will be reciprocity on the part of the People's Republic toward the desired improvement of relationships.

"Complex problems can never be solved unless there can be communications between interested parties. This is a concrete move toward establishing better rapport with the People's Republic.

"The humanitarian aspects of moves of this nature are implicit in what is being done and should call for an equally enlightened reaction from the People's Republic."

Lear Spokesman Sees Engine Ready By 1975

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A steam engine advocate has testified that antipollution standards have doomed the traditional auto engine and said research money would be better spent improving the old Stanley Steamer.

"The internal combustion engine is dead," Edward B. Uhler, marketing director for Lear Motors Corp., told the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). "It has been legislated out of existence."

Lear is developing a rankin cycle, or steam turbine, car engine and Uhler said the firm "can have a working engine in production by 1975 ... in quantity."

He said it would easily meet the 90 per cent pollutant reductions dictated by law for 1975 and 1976 model cars.

Teacher Plan

MAINZ, W. Germany — A plan to ask unemployed American science teachers to fill vacant jobs in German schools has been proposed to the Conference of State Ministers of Education, according to Bernhard Vogel, education minister for the State of Rhineland-Palatinate.

WEEK'S BUSINESS

The stock market eased in reaction to the monetary crisis. The rise on retail trade slowed down in comparison with recent weeks; Dun & Bradstreet said it was only 1 to 5 per cent from a year ago on the average.

Domestic automobile sales for the final third of April were only even with last year's slow pace although sales for the whole month were up 7 per cent from a year ago. Sales of imported cars hit a record 144,000 in the month—16 per cent of the total market.

Some barometers declined: Factory orders dropped 0.7 per cent in March, the first drop in five months and March construction spending fell from the previous month—the first dip in nine months.

The pace of rising wholesale prices accelerated in April to 0.5 per cent from 0.2 per cent in March.

Bank Lauds U.S. Decision On China Trade

SAN FRANCISCO (BW) — Crocker-Citizens National Bank has lauded the U.S. Treasury Department announcement on lifting of controls on use of dollars in transactions with Communist China. In a statement the bank said:

"We believe the action is an essential ingredient in a step-by-step approach to improved relationships with the People's Republic of China.

"It is to be hoped that there will be reciprocity on the part of the People's Republic toward the desired improvement of relationships.

"Complex problems can never be solved unless there can be communications between interested parties. This is a concrete move toward establishing better rapport with the People's Republic.

"The humanitarian aspects of moves of this nature are implicit in what is being done and should call for an equally enlightened reaction from the People's Republic."

Teacher Plan

MAINZ, W. Germany — A plan to ask unemployed American science teachers to fill vacant jobs in German schools has been proposed to the Conference of State Ministers of Education, according to Bernhard Vogel, education minister for the State of Rhineland-Palatinate.

Lear Spokesman Sees Engine Ready By 1975

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A steam engine advocate has testified that antipollution standards have doomed the traditional auto engine and said research money would be better spent improving the old Stanley Steamer.

"The internal combustion engine is dead," Edward B. Uhler, marketing director for Lear Motors Corp., told the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). "It has been legislated out of existence."

Lear is developing a rankin cycle, or steam turbine, car engine and Uhler said the firm "can have a working engine in production by 1975 . . . in quantity."

He said it would easily meet the 90 per cent pollutant reductions dictated by law for 1975 and 1976 model cars.

SERVING ALL OF MARIN COUNTY

The Editor's Notebook

Ah! Glorious Days Of Passenger Trains!

THE U.S. DEPARTMENT of Transportation is "loaning" the new National Railway Passenger Corp. an initial $300 million to launch Amtrak in an effort to save and revive passenger train travel.

The public declarations of Transportation Secretary Volpe and Amtrak president Lewis are most optimistic. Most of us fervently hope that the optimism is justifiable. We taxpayers hope our money is being wisely invested.

If you have seen an Amtrak train and station, however, you must have gnawing doubts.

IN THE BRIGHTLY printed booklet containing Amtrak schedules and fares, West Coast service appears an improvement over anything the private railroads ever offered. You can ride the train between San Diego and Seattle — all the way without changing trains. At about mid-point on the route is San Francisco-Oakland.

The brightly printed schedule doesn't tell you that the San Francisco-Oakland terminal is in fact the ancient, decaying Southern Pacific passenger station at the lower end of 16th street in Oakland. It is a dingy place. The big clocks on the wall haven't run for a long time and they still weren't running when the first Amtrak trains came and went this week.

"CONVENIENT TRAINS speed you to mid-town" proclaims Amtrak advertising.

The Bay Area terminal certainly isn't in mid-town of anything. The street lights in front of it still are not turned on at darkest night. There are no taxicabs awaiting arriving trains, nor is there any convenient bus to take you anywhere, except for a special Greyhound which meets San Francisco passengers and takes them to a rather poorly located terminal in San Francisco.

To put it charitably, the Oakland station is located on the wrong side of the tracks.

Furthermore, if you are trying to drive there from Marin you face considerable challenge in getting there. You take the 14th street ramp off the Nimitz freeway. Trouble is, it deposits you on 14th headed the wrong way at an intersection which allows no U-turns and no left turns. In other words, you can't get to 16th Street from there — directly. You have to go back to 13th, go over a couple of blocks, and then back-track to 14th or 16th so as to head the right way toward the station.

Signs to the station? There are none. You are on your own, in a ghetto neighborhood.

THE INSIDE of the station is grim. With a train arriving from Los Angeles and due to depart for Portland and Seattle, the huge old barn of a waiting room is occupied by only three dozen people, including aging red caps and a few curious onlookers who have come simply to see what Amtrak's first train looks like.

Behind the counter at the ticket and baggage desk there is no one under 60, and they move with the speed of people over 70.

The only bright spot in the place is the flaming red blazer of the Amtrak man whisking about with great enthusiasm and warmth. When you get close, the aroma which envelops him tells you that his enthusiasm and warmth must have been generated largely by an overly-long cocktail hour.

On the wall are the arrival and departure listings which still show all the now-defunct S.P. trains. The Amtrak arrivals and departures are listed only on a typed sheet scotch-taped to the doors where the light is poor. To add to the difficulty, the new schedules were typed with a very old ribbon. Perhaps they are readable to the under-30 set whose eyes have not yet matured.

When the first train arrived it was a somewhat different story. It arrived on time. While the crowd was scant, it was a happy group. The train carried a good dinner and good lounge (cocktail bar) cars.

Dinner in the diner was reported quite good although there were complaints about slow service in the lounge car.

"CONVENIENT TRAINS," says Amtrak advertising. But the trains between Seattle and San Diego operate only three times per week. On Monday, Thursday and Saturday they operate southbound only. On Sunday, Wednesday and Friday, they operate northbound only.

On Wednesday there is an additional southbound run from Oakland to Los Angeles, only. On Tuesday, there is an additional northbound run from Los Angeles to Oakland, only.

On Fridays and Sundays, only the Los Angeles-San Diego and Portland-Seattle links operate.

Not all of the trains carry diners, or lounge cars. Not all trains carry sleeping cars. And if you can figure out which trains carry what from the published schedules, you must have a special talent for deciphering government publications.

DREAMING OF the pleasures of train rides in earlier days, it is most pleasant to think of relaxing and resting on a train between business meetings.

But the realities of the situation are somewhat different.

Let's say you have a business meeting in Los Angeles in the middle of the day on a Friday. To go by train you must take the 8:55 a.m. train from Oakland Thursday. It will get you to Los Angeles at 7:15 p.m. From then until your meeting at midday on Friday you have time to kill. When the meeting is over Friday afternoon, you have more time to kill until the train for Oakland leaves at 10:15 a.m. Saturday. You'll be back to Oakland at 8:30 p.m. Saturday. It will consume three full days just to attend a meeting for a few hours on Friday.

Obviously, Amtrak is not going to put PSA out of business between here and Los Angeles in the near future.

Boy Scout Questioned On Story's Placement

Last night I went in front of a board of review for my Life Scout award in scouting. One of the questions that this board asked me was if I knew why when a boy receives his Eagle award the coverage of this high honor is placed, usually, in the last section of the paper. I could not answer.

I think that since it is such a high honor bestowed upon a boy that it should have a better coverage on it. I was also wondering why, even if it is in the paper, why is it such a small article?

Administrator's Spot Likened To Calley's

Before the issue disappears entirely from public view I would like to make an observation about the recent events leading to the resignation of the county administrator.

During times like these when administrators of public power are given mandates by their governing bodies to cut expenses they are put in a position not unlike that of Lieutenant Calley. It is not at all remarkable, in fact, it is quite human, to concentrate one's efforts on those least likely to put up a good fight. Most of us would choose to pick on a relatively helpless victim rather than the local "tough" or a person with powerful friends.

What are we expecting from our hatchetmen in government, Crusader Rabbit?

Perhaps it is time to take a long, hard look at the odd game of political buck passing.

Agenda's Purpose Must Be Obfuscation

When a public servant has succeeded in putting "mundialization" (a word not in the dictionary) on an agenda as a one-word item, what has he really accomplished? Has he:

(a) Succeeded in displaying an intellectual (?) erudition (?) superior (?) to the citizens he is supposed to serve?

(b) Managed to obscure an item that many people are vitally interested in and thus lessen the opposition?

If the object of an agenda is to inform and notify the citizenry then any one-word item, be it "civilization" or "realization" or "idioticalization" (also not in the dictionary) would in effect flummox the public and obscure issues and lead to bad feelings.

Is it not possible to so word an agenda that at least the "who" and "what" of an item were plain to ALL who might be interested? To do less is to cheat!

MARQUIS CHILDS

Communist Dissenter Ceausescu Keeps Door Open To The West

BUCHAREST — One of the charter members of a small exclusive club, "For Nixon Before '68," is the president and secretary general of the Communist Party of this eastern bloc country. Nicolae Ceausescu, a wily political operator, has demonstrated the courage of his convictions. As a dissenter in the Communist world he has stood up to the frowns of the Soviet Union, Romania's powerful neighbor on the east.

SHORTLY BEFORE the congress of world Communist parties in Moscow at the end of March, reports circulated that Ceausescu meant to return to the fold and be a good boy. He led his delegation to Moscow and on April 4 delivered a 20-minute speech, which in length, in the tradition of Communist oratory, is equivalent to clearing your throat.

In that speech he repeated what he had said before about not meddling in the affairs of other countries. It was the same declaration of independence that after the Russian invasion of Czechoslovakia threatened an invitation to a similar disaster.

In that fateful summer of 1968, when so many plans were dashed by Russian tanks rumbling through the streets of Prague, Ceausescu denounced the invasion in speeches throughout Romania. It was a chancy thing to do since there were many who believed the Russian colossus might very well turn next on Bucharest and throw out the dissenters.

CEAUSESCU SPOKE out first in 1965 when the quarrel between the Soviet Union and Communist China began to break. He contended that each Communist state should have the right to chart its own course and choose its own brand of communism. This meant a closer relationship with Peking and the beginning of a cooling off with Moscow.

That was capped by what happened in 1969. Ceausescu invited President Nixon to visit Bucharest. Two years before, when Nixon was in Eastern Europe on a world tour, calculated to build up his stature as a statesman, he got the frigid treatment in one Communist capital after another. This seemed to be on signal from Moscow, where every door was closed.

But Ceausescu received Nixon and the two shrewd politicians laid the groundwork for a continuing relationship. It was the first time since the end of World War II that an American president had paid an official visit to Eastern Europe.

JUST PRIOR to the Nixon visit Leonid Brezhnev, secretary general of the Soviet Communist Party, rated No. 1 in the hierarchy, had been scheduled to come to Bucharest to sign a treaty of trade and friendship. Brezhnev never came. It was not until early July of 1970 that Premier Alexei Kosygin showed up for the signing. And a little later Ceausescu paid a return visit to Washington, the films of which were widely shown on Romanian television.

The Ceausescu government continues to keep the door to the west open. Pan American Airways has just inaugurated a twice-weekly flight to Bucharest and an NBC television crew is traveling about the country filming various aspects of Romanian life for the "Today" program.

The significant change has come in the shift of Romania's trade. In 1965 about 80 per cent was with eastern bloc countries, 20 per cent with the rest of the world. In 1970 this shifted to 54 per cent with the bloc, and 46 per cent with the outside world.

FIRSTHAND OBSERVERS credit Ceausescu with being hardworking, austere, and determined to build an advanced industry in a country which has been largely agricultural.

Anticipating joint capital investment with the West, American and West German — Romania recognized West Germany in 1967 — the hope is to build up in electronics, computerization and other fields. Seeking membership in the General Agreements on Tariffs and Trade (GATT), the next step would be entry into the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund.

But the road ahead is long and hard. With tight controls fixed to channel development into industry, consumer goods here are scarcer than in other east European capitals. Prices are high and the average worker's wage of $100 a month covers little beyond bare necessities.

In the May Day parade are all the trappings of a Communist state — the long lines of marchers with red banners, the Young Pioneers, the huge pictures of the founding fathers, Marx and Lenin, the bands blaring "the Internationale." Yet there is a difference with a liberalized regime that abjures political trials and even allows some measure of dissent.

Making It Perfectly Clear For A Happy Mother's Day

WASHINGTON — President Nixon said today in a press conference that he was for Mother's Day, providing it was a just and honorable Mother's Day in which every mother in this country could decide her own destiny.

The President told reporters that when the Democrats were in power there were 37.8 million mothers in the United States. Since his administration took office, there are now 38.7 million mothers, or an increase of almost one million mothers. "This shows," said the President, "that my game plan for producing more mothers is working."

"MR. PRESIDENT," a reporter asked, "why have you come out for mothers at this time?"

"Mr. Lisagor, I would like to make this perfectly clear — the easy way, the political way, the popular way, would be to attack motherhood in this country. But the hard way, and in my opinion the best way, not for the short term, but the long run, is to take a strong stand for mothers.

"Now, I know you're going to say not all mothers are good, and I know you're going to say mothers don't know how to raise their children, and I know you're going to say mothers are responsible for many of the problems this country faces. But I would just like to make one thing perfectly clear. The majority of mothers are not flag burners or bums. They are fine upstanding Americans, and it is for this reason that I have decided to come out for motherhood, even if it means I may be a one-term President."

"MR. PRESIDENT, now that you've declared yourself for mothers, will you also come out for mom's apple pie?"

"Mr. Kaplow, I'd like to make myself perfectly clear. As you know, my administration has been working to improve the quality of apple pie in this country. I have on my desk now the Sara Lee Commission report on mom's apple pie. Now, there are some who say the President should set a standard for apple pie. There are others who say the government should decide what goes into a mother's apple pie. There are still others who would like to do away with apple pie altogether. But as President of the United States, I believe that apple pie is a very personal thing and should be left to the states where it is made.

"This is not to say the government shouldn't step in when a mother makes a bad apple pie. But this should be a last resort. Besides, I don't think mom's apple pie will be an election issue. Miss Thomas?"

"MR. PRESIDENT, I would like to get back to Mother's Day. Vice President Agnew has made some comments about the mothers of several of the members of the news media. Does this mean that you and he are in disagreement on an overall Mother's-Day policy?"

"Miss Thomas, I would be the last one to have a vice president agree with everything I have said. But I know from talking to Mr. Agnew, and working with him, that he and I are in overall agreement that the United States should have a low profile Mother's Day policy. There may be certain mothers that I don't approve of. But when it comes down to whether Mr. Agnew supports my Mother's Day proclamation, the answer to your question is, "Why don't you ask him?"

"Mr. President, does the fact that you're coming out for motherhood mean that you will come out for God and country before the next election?"

"Mr. Rather, I'm sending my message on the 'State of God' next week, and I don't think it would be beneficial to discuss that at this time."

WINDOW ON THE WORLD

Romania's Look Of Ease Partly True, Partly False

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

BUCHAREST, Romania — Here in this capital of Communist Romania, the youth dancing the frug are just as disjointed, the music just as loud, the beat as relentless as anywhere in the west. The mini skirts are just as mini.

In the warm spring evenings, window shoppers throng the streets and at the end of a holiday, automobile headlights gleam in a seemingly endless string along the narrow highway leading across the flat plain to Bucharest from the resorts in the Transylvania mountains to the north.

It is the look of ease and relaxation, and even of prosperity.

In more than 2,000 years of history, the Romanians have learned to live with circumstances, to switch from fascism during the German occupation under Hitler to the Russian communism of Josef Stalin after World War II almost without missing a beat, just as in the past they balanced between occupations by the Slavs, the Austro-Hungarians and the Turks.

The Romanians are used to outside rule and to sacrifice.

TODAY'S ROMANIAN rulers have for a decade presided over a determined de-Russification program which has achieved an impressive economic growth rate and a large measure of independence.

Yet as the Romanian economy has advanced at a rate of around 6 per cent per year, the Romanian people have existed on one of the lowest standards of living within the European Communist bloc.

But as the government has pressed its campaign of independence from Moscow, it also has paid increasing attention to the problem of popular support.

IF THEY ARE WARY of expressing a political opinion, Romanians at least no longer fear to visit with an American.

For a decade there have been no political show trials and most, if not all, political prisoners long since have been released.

Police controls have become less obvious.

Shaken by events in Poland where labor unrest led to strikes and the fall of the Wladislaw Gomulka government, the Romanian regime has promised its workers a 20 per cent rise in real wages under its 1971-75 economic plan, an increase in family and other social allowances and an increased voice for labor in the management of industry.

In its drive for economic and political independence, the Romanian government has sharply increased its trade with the west. In 1965, 80 per cent of its foreign trade was inside the Communist bloc. In 1970 that figure had been reduced to 54 per cent.

WITH THE United States, its relations have seen steady improvement, although trade between the two has been limited. In 1963 it came to approximately $2 million. In 1969 it came to about $40 million.

Tourism from the United States is one of the gambits the Romanians hope will make them rich. One of the attractions they are counting on is a five course meal for $4.

Ah! Glorious Days Of Passenger Trains!

THE U.S. DEPARTMENT of Transportation is "loaning" the new National Railway Passenger Corp. an initial $300 million to launch Amtrak in an effort to save and revive passenger train travel.

The public declarations of Transportation Secretary Volpe and Amtrak president Lewis are most optimistic. Most of us fervently hope that the optimism is justifiable. We taxpayers hope our money is being wisely invested.

If you have seen an Amtrak train and station, however, you must have gnawing doubts.

IN THE BRIGHTLY printed booklet containing Amtrak schedules and fares, West Coast service appears an improvement over anything the private railroads ever offered. You can ride the train between San Diego and Seattle — all the way without changing trains. At about mid-point on the route is San Francisco-Oakland.

The brightly printed schedule doesn't tell you that the San Francisco-Oakland terminal is in fact the ancient, decaying Southern Pacific passenger station at the lower end of 16th street in Oakland. It is a dingy place. The big clocks on the wall haven't run for a long time and they still weren't running when the first Amtrak trains came and went this week.

"CONVENIENT TRAINS speed you to mid-town" proclaims Amtrak advertising.

The Bay Area terminal certainly isn't in mid-town of anything. The street lights in front of it still are not turned on at darkest night. There are no taxicabs awaiting arriving trains, nor is there any convenient bus to take you anywhere, except for a special Greyhound which meets San Francisco passengers and takes them to a rather poorly located terminal in San Francisco.

To put it charitably, the Oakland station is located on the wrong side of the tracks.

Furthermore, if you are trying to drive there from Marin you face considerable challenge in getting there. You take the 14th street ramp off the Nimitz freeway. Trouble is, it deposits you on 14th headed the wrong way at an intersection which allows no U-turns and no left turns. In other words, you can't get to 16th Street from there — directly. You have to go back to 13th, go over a couple of blocks, and then back-track to 14th or 16th so as to head the right way toward the station.

Signs to the station? There are none. You are on your own, in a ghetto neighborhood.

THE INSIDE of the station is grim. With a train arriving from Los Angeles and due to depart for Portland and Seattle, the huge old barn of a waiting room is occupied by only three dozen people, including aging red caps and a few curious onlookers who have come simply to see what Amtrak's first train looks like.

Behind the counter at the ticket and baggage desk there is no one under 60, and they move with the speed of people over 70.

The only bright spot in the place is the flaming red blazer of the Amtrak man whisking about with great enthusiasm and warmth. When you get close, the aroma which envelops him tells you that his enthusiasm and warmth must have been generated largely by an overly-long cocktail hour.

On the wall are the arrival and departure listings which still show all the now-defunct S.P. trains. The Amtrak arrivals and departures are listed only on a typed sheet scotch-taped to the doors where the light is poor. To add to the difficulty, the new schedules were typed with a very old ribbon. Perhaps they are readable to the under-30 set whose eyes have not yet matured.

When the first train arrived it was a somewhat different story. It arrived on time. While the crowd was scant, it was a happy group. The train carried a good dinner and good lounge (cocktail bar) cars.

Dinner in the diner was reported quite good although there were complaints about slow service in the lounge car.

"CONVENIENT TRAINS," says Amtrak advertising. But the trains between Seattle and San Diego operate only three times per week. On Monday, Thursday and Saturday they operate southbound only. On Sunday, Wednesday and Friday, they operate northbound only.

On Wednesday there is an additional southbound run from Oakland to Los Angeles, only. On Tuesday, there is an additional northbound run from Los Angeles to Oakland, only.

On Fridays and Sundays, only the Los Angeles-San Diego and Portland-Seattle links operate.

Not all of the trains carry diners, or lounge cars. Not all trains carry sleeping cars. And if you can figure out which trains carry what from the published schedules, you must have a special talent for deciphering government publications.

DREAMING OF the pleasures of train rides in earlier days, it is most pleasant to think of relaxing and resting on a train between business meetings.

But the realities of the situation are somewhat different.

Let's say you have a business meeting in Los Angeles in the middle of the day on a Friday. To go by train you must take the 8:55 a.m. train from Oakland Thursday. It will get you to Los Angeles at 7:15 p.m. From then until your meeting at midday on Friday you have time to kill. When the meeting is over Friday afternoon, you have more time to kill until the train for Oakland leaves at 10:15 a.m. Saturday. You'll be back to Oakland at 8:30 p.m. Saturday. It will consume three full days just to attend a meeting for a few hours on Friday.

Obviously, Amtrak is not going to put PSA out of business between here and Los Angeles in the near future.

And a little later Ceausescu paid a return visit to Washington, the films of which were widely shown on Romanian television.

The Ceausescu government continues to keep the door to the west open. Pan American Airways has just inaugurated a twice-weekly flight to Bucharest and an NBC television crew is traveling about the country filming various aspects of Romanian life for the "Today" program.

The significant change has come in the shift of Romania's trade. In 1965 about 80 per cent was with eastern bloc countries, 20 per cent with the rest of the world. In 1970 this shifted to 54 per cent with the bloc, and 46 per cent with the outside world.

FIRSTHAND OBSERVERS credit Ceausescu with being hardworking, austere, and determined to build an advanced industry in a country which has been largely agricultural.

Anticipating joint capital investment with the West, American and West German — Romania recognized West Germany in 1967 — the hope is to build up in electronics, computerization and other fields. Seeking membership in the General Agreements on Tariffs and Trade (GATT), the next step would be entry into the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund.

But the road ahead is long and hard. With tight controls fixed to channel development into industry, consumer goods here are scarcer than in other east European capitals. Prices are high and the average worker's wage of $100 a month covers little beyond bare necessities.

In the May Day parade are all the trappings of a Communist state — the long lines of marchers with red banners, the Young Pioneers, the huge pictures of the founding fathers, Marx and Lenin, the bands blaring "the Internationale." Yet there is a difference with a liberalized regime that abjures political trials and even allows some measure of dissent.

WINDOW ON THE WORLD

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

BUCHAREST, Romania — Here in this capital of Communist Romania, the youth dancing the frug are just as disjointed, the music just as loud, the beat as relentless as anywhere in the west. The mini skirts are just as mini.

In the warm spring evenings, window shoppers throng the streets and at the end of a holiday, automobile headlights gleam in a seemingly endless string along the narrow highway leading across the flat plain to Bucharest from the resorts in the Transylvania mountains to the north.

It is the look of ease and relaxation, and even of prosperity.

In more than 2,000 years of history, the Romanians have learned to live with circumstances, to switch from fascism during the German occupation under Hitler to the Russian communism of Josef Stalin after World War II almost without missing a beat, just as in the past they balanced between occupations by the Slavs, the Austro-Hungarians and the Turks.

The Romanians are used to outside rule and to sacrifice.

TODAY'S ROMANIAN rulers have for a decade presided over a determined de-Russification program which has achieved an impressive economic growth rate and a large measure of independence.

Yet as the Romanian economy has advanced at a rate of around 6 per cent per year, the Romanian people have existed on one of the lowest standards of living within the European Communist bloc.

But as the government has pressed its campaign of independence from Moscow, it also has paid increasing attention to the problem of popular support.

IF THEY ARE WARY of expressing a political opinion, Romanians at least no longer fear to visit with an American.

For a decade there have been no political show trials and most, if not all, political prisoners long since have been released.

Police controls have become less obvious.

Shaken by events in Poland where labor unrest led to strikes and the fall of the Wladislaw Gomulka government, the Romanian regime has promised its workers a 20 per cent rise in real wages under its 1971-75 economic plan, an increase in family and other social allowances and an increased voice for labor in the management of industry.

In its drive for economic and political independence, the Romanian government has sharply increased its trade with the west. In 1965, 80 per cent of its foreign trade was inside the Communist bloc. In 1970 that figure had been reduced to 54 per cent.

WITH THE United States, its relations have seen steady improvement, although trade between the two has been limited. In 1963 it came to approximately $2 million. In 1969 it came to about $40 million.

Tourism from the United States is one of the gambits the Romanians hope will make them rich. One of the attractions they are counting on is a five course meal for $4.

I-J RAP SESSION: THE LETTERS POUR IN

The Independent-Journal today presents more 'Rap Session' contest letters discussing Youth and the Establishment. The contest will continue through May 24, with first prize of $125 and second prize of $75 offered for the best letter in each of four age groups: 14-17, 18-21, 22-30, over 30 years old. Your letters are invited.

One Goal In Life: To Achieve Happiness

Throughout the United States and the world, every man, woman and child has one main goal in life: to achieve happiness for himself and his family. When you stop to think about it, that's all a man tries to accomplish before he dies. He does this by whatever means he has been brought up, or conforming to new ideas. This is mainly describing the generation gap. The "over-30" group has been cultured differently than the "new generation," so they have a different view on achieving happiness in life than the young group. Because the younger group and older group do have this wide variance of opinion on many points, the two groups are constantly in conflict; always finding faults in the other guy's system. The older guy achieves happiness by becoming rich and retiring, and the younger guy achieves happiness by being outdoors and giving up his love for money and material wealth.

Obviously, these two ideas of happiness contradict each other, so it ultimately becomes a war between the two groups. Where to we go from there?

If more people realized that a world can't go on divided, they would open their minds more. I think the closing of the war in S.E. Asia, which I believe is coming soon, will pull the generation gap closer together, because one main goal in achieving happiness in both groups is to avoid war, and the more the war goes on, the wider the generation gap becomes. So, inversely, when the present war ends, each group will have achieved mutual happiness with the other.

Only Difference Is Frame Of Reference

The basis of the generation gap is that there is a difference between a person of say 18 and 45. But where is the difference? The 18-year-old has the same fears, pleasures and worries as anyone else including the 45-year-old. They might disagree on length of hair or preference of music but that does not make them different& If it did, nobody would be able to communicate to each other because nobody thinks exactly like anyone else.

Man is like a lump of clay, from the day he is born until the day he ceases to be willing to accept change, he is forever gathering information and developing opinions from his friends, culture and environment. A person raised in the ghetto would have a completely different outlook on life than if he were raised in Beverly Hills, even though he is the same person.

The 45-year-old that considers the Rolling Stones vulgar and obscene, if 18 today would probably be buying their albums. The 18-year-old if 18 in the '40s would probably be dancing to Glenn Miller (slow dancing that is).

Therefore, since the only difference is frame of reference, try considering the other person's views from his outlook on life. Once you do, the "generation gap" will cease.

Older People Should Try Youths' Ways

I think that the old people should try the youths' way of long hair or the way we dress. They might think all this is bad, but if they tried they might like it and learn to talk to the youths. I picked the old people to get into the younger generation because the youths are more involved in this world today. The older people see the youth striking and they put in their minds that they are all bad. But that is not true. We all should get spokesmen from their sides and the youths and sit down and talk things over. But the older generation might think we might take the generation over.

Young Must Focus Upon The Present

The generation gap is inevitable in today's changing world. Youth has inherited a confused, increasingly self-conscious society that has outgrown the past. Yet by rejecting the past they also reject their parents who still cherish the values and traditions that sustained them during the turbulence of the post-war years. This separation of values often results in alienation and mutual distrust between parent and child.

In most cases, this alienation persists because each group fails to understand the other's viewpoint.

Young people criticize the old-fasioned ideas and preoccupation with success of their elders. Too often they forget that their parents were brought up in an era of depression and world war, when getting ahead meant staying fed and clothed.

Many members of this seasoned group are also blindly critical. Frightened and bewildered by change, they misunderstand the motives of the post-war generation. They see demonstrations and protest groups as a rejection of American society, rather than as an attempt to improve it.

In the face of an uncertain future and an irrelevant past, young people are focusing on the present in their search for new values and meaning. This search takes many forms: encounter groups, travel, psychotherapy, sexual experimentation and the use of drugs. Unfortunately, many of these things, looked on with suspicion and distaste by much of the older generation, serve to increase the distance between them and their offspring.

All of us, young and old, must seek together the principles to guide human conduct. By understanding what men are, we can agree, together, to try to be what men should be.

Examine Old Values To Find Prejudices

How can youth and the over-30s reach a better understanding of one another? Is there really a happy medium between different languages, moral philosophies, value standards and life styles? The answers must be as complex as man himself.

Man differs from other animals in a sense because he has an extraordinary development of the brain and the power to articulate language — he thinks and he speaks. It would be good for us to recognize thinking and speaking as a right of all men and a means toward attempting to gain the truth. We must respect this right and tolerate one another for it.

It would be good, also, for us to recognize that man's ways of thinking and speaking change with every sunrise. Each day is a new day with new thoughts and new ways to express them. This process seems to be natural and ever-continuing.

How, then, can we connect yesterday's thoughts and speech with what we think and say today — how can we unite the old with the new? Since there is much confusion today as to what is right, we might start by reassuring ourselves of the validity of yesterday's truths. Let us not be afraid to think and speak about old truths because if we lay them all out in front of us for examination, we might be able to pick out those that may have found a base in prejudiced thinking. We just might discover that yesterday's prejudices made up yesterday's truths and that possibly we are and have been continuing to pass these prejudices off as reason.

We might all gain a better understanding of one another and ourselves regardless of our age or circumstance by turning the pointing finger away from each other and pointing it at the past and present truths by which we live. I feel it a duty, to ourselves and to our children and to the truths of tomorrow, to attempt to expose and rid ourselves of prejudice in all its forms and wherever it may be found.

OVER 30 YEARS

Wrong Category

The letter by Margaret Myles which appeared May 5 under the headline, "Turn Down Decibels And Quit Pretending," was wrongly classified. It appeared with the 18-21 year contest entries. It should have appeared in the Over-30 classification.

Look To Future And Keep Your Faith

I am the mother of an 18-year-old son.

Sometimes he doesn't understand me, and sometimes I don't understand him. But I will say this: He knows a lot more than I did at his age.

As for this so-called "generation gap," there will always be that. I had it myself and one thing they don't want to hear is: "When I was your age we did this or that." I didn't want to hear it in my time, but we say it because we may think we can prevent the obstacles we went through, but let me tell you this, "experience is the best teacher." I tell that to my son, and his friends know more than I did at his age.

In the beginning I raised him to be self-sufficient and not to depend on anyone. That is why I have faith in him, no matter what comes.

I admit at times I am confused by it all.

I have had an opportunity to meet a lot of his friends, and whether they have long hair or not they are basically intelligent and I would venture to say, "smarter than me."

I know I depend a lot on him and often ask his advice. Not to say I worry, but what parent doesn't? I know one thing, I am proud to have a son, and when I gave birth to him I was very happy!

He has taken care of me when I was ill and done a lot for me around the house, since I work.

I say, "look to the future," and it will be not as bad as some people think. Have faith!

Immigrant Expresses Confidence In America

I been in America few years. Born in France, I have live the horrors of war, suffered misery that wars bring to people anywhere.

I will tell you in my own words what I feel about the country that I love.

Americans criticize themselves when something seems wrong to them, they fight it out very strongly. It is a sign of good health for a sick person when she is aware that she is ill.

Americans are lucky to be free people and many have taken advantage of this, channels of communication are open and arguments have become unlimited and out of hand.

I believe wealth and beauty of this land shall be cherished and tenderly protected. America is the only hope to mankind. Is no other country that can compare to the United States. Only the people have created the most efficient and modern cornucopia, with the greatest abundance the world has ever known.

I believe America have no desire to take no one else territory. America has no interest in imposing upon anyone else a particular system of government. In spite to the contrary, America is the hope of all mankind.

The time has come when young and old will have to unite to look over whatever damage has being done, with respect, love and humility piece it together; and with God, wisdom and guidance, a lasting peace will be achieved for all.

Patience, Flexibility Required Of Adults

Stop and listen is the first most important thing to help the generation gap. Our children love to express their views on politics, the establishment, the family, etc. — stop and listen to them. Then if you have a fact on your view express yourself. It cannot be hearsay or beliefs but facts; then a mutual respect develops.

Patience is hard to have at times for either group. The years change all of our thinking and what we might think today could change tomorrow.

Don't criticize either your child or his friends, his hair or his dress. He knows how you feel and is waiting to upset you. If you do not react he is disappointed. He has to be part of the crowd but hope for moderation.

Independence for the adolescent is necessary. You may have different ideas but if it is within bounds "grin and bear" it. It is pretty hard at times to let him pursue his own project such as having your driveway strewn with nuts, bolts, fenders, etc. At least he is home.

Money is most important today. Money handed out freely brings rebellion. Let them earn it. This not only teaches them the value and respect for money but also responsibility and importance and makes them a part of this society. Always be truthful.

Be adaptable to change — one of the hardest of all. Perhaps it could be expressed as Richard L. Evans, who delivers the "Spoken Word" part of the Salt Lake Tabernacle Choir and Organ broadcast, put it: "Old or young, we have to keep flexible in living life; not flexible as to principles, as to things of eternal truth, but flexible in our reactions to environment, to people and places, to the going and coming of friends and family, to changing situations and circumstances."

Adults Must Become More Open-Minded

A better understanding would prevail between the younger generation and the over-30 group, I believe, if adults would spend more time and energy trying to comprehend the problems that the young people face in our society today. Careful examination of our values and ideas, which we sometimes try to impose on young people, possibly would make us more open-minded and understanding of today's youth.

In the confusing world we live in today, it is extremely difficult for the young to establish their self-identity. In addition to being born under the threat of the bomb, they face the problems of pollution, poverty, population explosion, and a tragic war they do not support or believe in. The future must look pretty bleak to the young people of today, and they need our support and sympathy, not criticism and ostracism. We cannot afford to be apathetic and indifferent to the younger generation's views and ideas, as it is very obvious to all that many changes must be made within our society if we are to survive.

Communication between the young and adults, where each party really listens to what the other one is saying is an absolute necessity. Sometimes we tend to talk at the young instead of really listening to what they are telling us. Also, I believe that if we respect young people as individuals, and not try to inflict adult authority on them, we would have smoother relationships. We should strive to treat young people in the same manner in which we would like to be treated. Most of all, we have to create an atmosphere where feelings of either group may be expressed and respected.

I believe more interest should be expressed by adults in the areas that the young wish to share with us. In other areas, such as copying their clothing styles, where young people do not wish us to intrude, I believe we should stay out.

We have a habit of stereotyping the young, such as lumping all adolescents with long hair into the drug category. Perhaps an adult, if he really thought about it, would not take offense to matters such as the length of hair when there are so many more significant things to worry about. We have to learn to be flexible and be able to compromise with young people, and at other times, even make concessions.

If we give of ourselves to the young, love and trust them, they will respond with love and trust. We should not have to impose our values and ideas upon young people, for if we set good examples for them to follow, and if they have good feelings about us, they will want to emulate us.

Generation Gap Starts With Infancy

I believe the generation gap opens up at a very tender age with our youngsters because we parents do not treat them like little friends or little people but like something slightly sub-human called a "child." Instead of being polite and respectful to this little person, a parent interrupts him without apology, bosses him around, often without explanation of why, invades his privacy, and makes decisions for him. While constantly telling him "not to interrupt," a parent keeps on talking, never giving the little person a chance to say anything.

With the best intentions in the world, a parent makes choices for him which he himself is not too young to make. For example, a favorite TV program might be due at 5:30 p.m. and the youngster is hanging around an hour ahead of time, waiting for it. The mother tells him to run outside and she will call him for his program. When 5:30 approaches, she looks outside and sees he is having a wonderful time with his friends. She then makes a unilateral decision that he prefers to continue this good time and does not call him for his program. Can he trust her again? Not quite so much. The erosion of confidence has begun.

Family Best Place To Communicate

Hurray for the I-J! Your "Rap Session" is a brilliant idea. This so-called generation gap may not be as wide or deep as its publicity suggests, but whereever it exists the human beings involved — young or old — should bend every effort to build a bridge across it. Communication is one of the important planks needed for such a bridge.

Most people talk too little, not too much. Many lack courage or ability to express their deep convictions. In my youth it was considered bad form at a social gathering to bring up religion or politics (sex was taboo). Controversy was frowned upon. Now we speak of everything everywhere at any time but oposing opinions continue to make open discussion extremely difficult.

I believe the family home — though by no means the only place — provides the best workshop for this special art. Beginning at birth the gurgles and giggles proceeding from the nursery can develop in later years into great conversations. All that is needed for this growth is a delight in listening and a loving response.

By the time children have reached their teens they usually have discovered a few simple rules that can keep an exciting argument going or bring it to a grinding halt. C. S. Lewis wrote his own useful rule: "Agree to disagree but not to judge." Granted that becoming a pro in any field demands "know how" and lots of practice, it also offers magnificent rewards.

As communication grows the bridge across the generation gap can begin to grow, reducing the distance between, until, hopefully, we are able to reach each other. I feel sure your "Rap Session" will make a valuable contribution toward this goal.

There's No Such Thing As Fair, Impartial

We have all been brought up with the belief that there is such a thing as fair, unjust, justice or fairness or impartiality. From my point of view there is no such thing as impartial. Most behaviors are a function of learning history, fairness and words such as deserve. People get what they deserve in the end or somewhere along the line. These words are not what they appear to be; there is no absolute standard of fairness, fairness sounds like an objective term.

There is a great deal of evidence for center of gravity. There is none for emotional centers of gravity, yet when people say these together it sounds as though there are such things.

We're brought up in schools that give you a "C" because you deserved a "C," involved here is the myth of fairness. Fair is a way of controlling the behavior of young people who eventually get to be old people. It is a way of interacting with one another that has survival value or has had up until now. It is a way of controlling situations where people may tend to escalate in aggressive behavior; possibly ending up in killing one another. We may de-escalate simply by saying to the other person, "I want to be fair," or stop doing that, that's not fair.

When we say things are not fair we are controlling each other, and we are doing it with aversive stimuli, it would be better for us in the long haul, if we forego this type of control with one another and introduce another kind.

Solution To "Gap" Contradict Selves

I come away from today's (April 30) "Rap Session" somewhat less than enlightened. Judging from the letters presented, the way to produce a generation "so intelligent, so full of compassion for the oppressed, so full of enthusiasm, and so filled with idealism" is for the previous generation (their parents) to spend all their time in X-rated movies, or staggering around in an alcoholic or nicotine haze (not pot; that's a "good-guy" vice).

Or, if you prefer, to produce children who are "beautiful people, super-smart, with character and guts," their parents need only be "too busy searching for their own identity," and "gouging for that damned almighty dollar" (which, after all, only pays the bills) to give them any Tender Loving Care.

No, I don't hate the young. I have several specimens in my own home. I simply feel there's a helluva lot of nonsense being spouted about what is either a "super-generation" or a "bunch of hippie bums," depending on your bias. This generation is composed of young human beings, neither much better nor much worse than all those who have gone before. They are simply receiving far more attention. And it's about time we brought a halt to this sanctimonious downgrading of the generation which reared them. It may be fun, but it's destructive and grossly unfair.

Really Listening Greatest Contrib

To listen. The greatest contribution which my group (over-30) could make toward better understanding between younger people and ourselves is to listen. This sounds so simple at first glance that it may appear naive, but real listening means more than just the ability to keep one's mouth shut. It is a state of mind — of openness and receptivity.

Too often adults give an impression of listening while internally they have turned off because they (1) are not interested, (2) disagree with what the other person is saying, (3) have prepared themselves to reject what they are about to hear because "young people don't know what they're talking about."

It is a difficult thing to listen without passing judgment, to listen so that another person's viewpoint is honestly heard and can be verbalized in a way that lets the other person know that he has been understood. Equally important is listening with empathy. Communication of feelings is when a person is committed to identifying with another human being's inner experience. Often an adult's own feelings can interfere with his ability to hear what a younger person is saying.

Today young people are confronted by a myriad of overwhelmingly complex problems. The long-continuing war in Vietnam, the seeming impersonalization of government and industry, and the destruction of our environmental balance give young people a walled-in feeling.

In order to establish a link with younger people, we need to listen openly to their expressions of fear, frustration and concern without saying, "Yes, I know, but . . ."

By the same token, young people must approach us with equal neutrality. They must be willing to listen to our gripes about the spiraling economy and taxes, without turning a deaf ear because it does not concern them. They should be willing to discuss ideas for change without automatically turning us off because we seem too caught up in the daily struggle of making a living.

Only when we begin to listen and hear (and in this I think that adults must make the greater effort) can we begin to communicate our mutual concerns.

Mrs. WILLIAM GLASCOCK

No Magic Antidote, But Understanding Helps

The "generation gap" is not a new phenomena. It is as old as time, and yet so many of us are looking for a magic antidote. I don't feel there's any quick, easy solution. Understanding, and that's what it's really all about, takes working at, day after day on both sides.

The words "communication" and "involvement" have been tossed around so much today, they have the ring of tired cliches, but I think they are the only effective means we have of establishing understanding between any age groups.

There is too much suspicion and prejudice on both ends of the scale. Generalization is a dangerous thing that spreads and contaminates. Every long-haired youth is not a "drug-crazed hippy," and not everyone over 30 in an "establishment robot" who will never again have an original thought.

The great progress in our world has come from the exchange of ideas. We must talk to one another, often and at length. We must keep open minds and open hearts. We must not fear involvement in each other's worlds. Most of all we should not be afraid to alter our opinions.

That old rule of judging everyone on his or her individual merits still holds true. Categorizing people into age groups is the worst form of discrimination. Young or old, I would hope we are all anti-discrimination. It's hard to "think" 18 when you're 35, and even more difficult for an 18-year-old to project himself 17 years into the future, but even the attempt fosters understanding. We can learn from each other if we'll only let the other guy talk once in a while.

NORINE WEEMS

To Close The Gap, Live For The Present

I am thrilled to be a woman in my early 40s — thrilled to watch and be awakened, and to finally realize that our biggest gap is talking "gaps." I can't make a hole unless I dig it. Nor can I embrace you unless I am aware of your existence. And all I know for sure is what I pen at this moment. We can only reach an understanding of one another if we live in the here and now. It begins at this moment, and if you feel a gap then you better come to terms with the void in you.

Thank God we are becoming aware of the proper moral values. I pity the woman who must drape herself in white "baby" seal skins to be "someone," or the fancy lady who sat in our capitol, and now has unborn breast of calf flown hundreds of miles for a "wee dinner for two" when millions must hock their self-esteem to get a few measly food stamps. Thank God we have bridged the gap of false pride in esteeming the warrior, and finally realizing that we must love more than our immediate neighbor. Thank God we have increased our awareness, and look back through history, and try to feel as it might have felt to be a slave, and for the black person to not only realize I am his friend, but that I also love him, because he is my brother. And to feel good about ourselves, but not to be prideful, as pride is the breeder of wars. Instead, we, as a mass generation, are feeling the moment, and relinquishing our egocentric selves by wanting nothing from Charlie of 18 or Harry at 52, but only happiness for them both.

We spent too many precious moments already, worrying about "who's doing it with whom, and how" — as I, at one time, bestowed the medal of valor on myself for making it to my marriage bed.

Let us rejoice in our freedom of expression. Don't worry about the one word on the bathroom wall, think of what it did for the donor. Fan the flame of kindred spirit, and rock the world with life. To hell with where we'll plant our "dearly beloved." When you walk down the street, whistle. The stock market may drop, but the sky won't.

MARCIA B. STOVER

To Big Difference, Ask — Then Listen

The no-longer-youngsters should be able to dig the Revolution Scene a little better, having had somewhat similar inclinations (though much less courage to carry them out) way back in the dark ages, when to be told was to do. Parents used to ask, "What do these young people know? They haven't been around long enough for anything to penetrate." But now it's, "They know too much! And about all the wrong things." True. They know the old set of values is as dead as yesterday's other beautiful memories. And that life moves on, and no matter what the direction, you've got to move with it. Listen to the sound of the times. For example, does any father know what motivates his son? He'd be in for a surprise and might even learn something if he d ask. And listen to the answer!

The under-30s are also under-informed. The world didn't begin the day they were born. If anybody's to blame for the mess we're in why not Eve, standing there with applesauce on her face? Ever since she was thrown by the first snake eyes, there's been one kind of trouble or another. Having nothing to look forward to but the Bomb is a cop-out! That mushroom cloud first blossomed during World War II, but no one asked to buy back his introduction to the human race because of it. A step in the right direction would be to stop tuning out when adults go into the "old traditions" bit. It could be really informative. Why not ask? And listen to the answer!

So, in a nutshell — which is where most of us seem to be living these days — the key words to inter-generational understanding are: ASK, and LISTEN!

Mrs. JEANE VESPER

We Cannot Meet, But We Can Understand

Understanding is best described as being tolerant and sympathetic and being tolerant and sympathetic is most difficult in a growing number of relationships between youth and the over-30.

In many now defeated cases, this may be obtained by the youth and the over-30 recognizing, whether the individual wants to or not, the reasons why aims, needs, drives, habits and hopes differ. Naturally, each individual relationship between youth and over-30 differs, varies considerably and no such recognitions come easy.

Almost desperately, I observe youth turning to religion and I wonder if this is not actually or also, a search for tolerance and sympathy. And I observe over-30 trying to escape attempts to communicate by showing youth anger, contempt, and other negatives.

When my son returned from Vietnam, he asked, "Understand me." I answered, "I do; I do not, however, agree." In this way, our relationship has tottered plenty as we both have wondered how youth-son and over-30-parent could be reaching for such completely different ways of life. We had some shouting, emotional debates but every now and then, each would listen briefly to the other, thereby not destroying for all time the deep affection we once had and, with patience — yes, and tolerance and sympathy one for the other, hoped to have, somehow, again. It became a matter of each of us really trying and then, finally, succeeding in each being tolerant and sympathetic.

As the growing expression states, "there is no way" to date by which our totally different frames of references and purposes can meet — but we can meet and talk and listen sometimes, anyway — and when we do, he understands, and I understand, for we have become tolerant and sympathetic, one for the other.

One Goal In Life: To Achieve Happiness

Throughout the United States and the world, every man, woman and child has one main goal in life: to achieve happiness for himself and his family. When you stop to think about it, that's all a man tries to accomplish before he dies. He does this by whatever means he has been brought up, or conforming to new ideas. This is mainly describing the generation gap. The "over-30" group has been cultured differently than the "new generation," so they have a different view on achieving happiness in life than the young group. Because the younger group and older group do have this wide variance of opinion on many points, the two groups are constantly in conflict; always finding faults in the other guy's system. The older guy achieves happiness by becoming rich and retiring, and the younger guy achieves happiness by being outdoors and giving up his love for money and material wealth.

Obviously, these two ideas of happiness contradict each other, so it ultimately becomes a war between the two groups. Where to we go from there?

If more people realized that a world can't go on divided, they would open their minds more. I think the closing of the war in S.E. Asia, which I believe is coming soon, will pull the generation gap closer together, because one main goal in achieving happiness in both groups is to avoid war, and the more the war goes on, the wider the generation gap becomes. So, inversely, when the present war ends, each group will have achieved mutual happiness with the other.

Only Difference Is Frame Of Reference

The basis of the generation gap is that there is a difference between a person of say 18 and 45. But where is the difference? The 18-year-old has the same fears, pleasures and worries as anyone else including the 45-year-old. They might disagree on length of hair or preference of music but that does not make them different& If it did, nobody would be able to communicate to each other because nobody thinks exactly like anyone else.

Man is like a lump of clay, from the day he is born until the day he ceases to be willing to accept change, he is forever gathering information and developing opinions from his friends, culture and environment. A person raised in the ghetto would have a completely different outlook on life than if he were raised in Beverly Hills, even though he is the same person.

The 45-year-old that considers the Rolling Stones vulgar and obscene, if 18 today would probably be buying their albums. The 18-year-old if 18 in the '40s would probably be dancing to Glenn Miller (slow dancing that is).

Therefore, since the only difference is frame of reference, try considering the other person's views from his outlook on life. Once you do, the "generation gap" will cease.

Older People Should Try Youths' Ways

I think that the old people should try the youths' way of long hair or the way we dress. They might think all this is bad, but if they tried they might like it and learn to talk to the youths. I picked the old people to get into the younger generation because the youths are more involved in this world today. The older people see the youth striking and they put in their minds that they are all bad. But that is not true. We all should get spokesmen from their sides and the youths and sit down and talk things over. But the older generation might think we might take the generation over.

Young Must Focus Upon The Present

The generation gap is inevitable in today's changing world. Youth has inherited a confused, increasingly self-conscious society that has outgrown the past. Yet by rejecting the past they also reject their parents who still cherish the values and traditions that sustained them during the turbulence of the post-war years. This separation of values often results in alienation and mutual distrust between parent and child.

In most cases, this alienation persists because each group fails to understand the other's viewpoint.

Young people criticize the old-fasioned ideas and preoccupation with success of their elders. Too often they forget that their parents were brought up in an era of depression and world war, when getting ahead meant staying fed and clothed.

Many members of this seasoned group are also blindly critical. Frightened and bewildered by change, they misunderstand the motives of the post-war generation. They see demonstrations and protest groups as a rejection of American society, rather than as an attempt to improve it.

In the face of an uncertain future and an irrelevant past, young people are focusing on the present in their search for new values and meaning. This search takes many forms: encounter groups, travel, psychotherapy, sexual experimentation and the use of drugs. Unfortunately, many of these things, looked on with suspicion and distaste by much of the older generation, serve to increase the distance between them and their offspring.

All of us, young and old, must seek together the principles to guide human conduct. By understanding what men are, we can agree, together, to try to be what men should be.

Examine Old Values To Find Prejudices

How can youth and the over-30s reach a better understanding of one another? Is there really a happy medium between different languages, moral philosophies, value standards and life styles? The answers must be as complex as man himself.

Man differs from other animals in a sense because he has an extraordinary development of the brain and the power to articulate language — he thinks and he speaks. It would be good for us to recognize thinking and speaking as a right of all men and a means toward attempting to gain the truth. We must respect this right and tolerate one another for it.

It would be good, also, for us to recognize that man's ways of thinking and speaking change with every sunrise. Each day is a new day with new thoughts and new ways to express them. This process seems to be natural and ever-continuing.

How, then, can we connect yesterday's thoughts and speech with what we think and say today — how can we unite the old with the new? Since there is much confusion today as to what is right, we might start by reassuring ourselves of the validity of yesterday's truths. Let us not be afraid to think and speak about old truths because if we lay them all out in front of us for examination, we might be able to pick out those that may have found a base in prejudiced thinking. We just might discover that yesterday's prejudices made up yesterday's truths and that possibly we are and have been continuing to pass these prejudices off as reason.

We might all gain a better understanding of one another and ourselves regardless of our age or circumstance by turning the pointing finger away from each other and pointing it at the past and present truths by which we live. I feel it a duty, to ourselves and to our children and to the truths of tomorrow, to attempt to expose and rid ourselves of prejudice in all its forms and wherever it may be found.

Look To Future And Keep Your Faith

I am the mother of an 18-year-old son.

Sometimes he doesn't understand me, and sometimes I don't understand him. But I will say this: He knows a lot more than I did at his age.

As for this so-called "generation gap," there will always be that. I had it myself and one thing they don't want to hear is: "When I was your age we did this or that." I didn't want to hear it in my time, but we say it because we may think we can prevent the obstacles we went through, but let me tell you this, "experience is the best teacher." I tell that to my son, and his friends know more than I did at his age.

In the beginning I raised him to be self-sufficient and not to depend on anyone. That is why I have faith in him, no matter what comes.

I admit at times I am confused by it all.

I have had an opportunity to meet a lot of his friends, and whether they have long hair or not they are basically intelligent and I would venture to say, "smarter than me."

I know I depend a lot on him and often ask his advice. Not to say I worry, but what parent doesn't? I know one thing, I am proud to have a son, and when I gave birth to him I was very happy!

He has taken care of me when I was ill and done a lot for me around the house, since I work.

I say, "look to the future," and it will be not as bad as some people think. Have faith!

Immigrant Expresses Confidence In America

I been in America few years. Born in France, I have live the horrors of war, suffered misery that wars bring to people anywhere.

I will tell you in my own words what I feel about the country that I love.

Americans criticize themselves when something seems wrong to them, they fight it out very strongly. It is a sign of good health for a sick person when she is aware that she is ill.

Americans are lucky to be free people and many have taken advantage of this, channels of communication are open and arguments have become unlimited and out of hand.

I believe wealth and beauty of this land shall be cherished and tenderly protected. America is the only hope to mankind. Is no other country that can compare to the United States. Only the people have created the most efficient and modern cornucopia, with the greatest abundance the world has ever known.

I believe America have no desire to take no one else territory. America has no interest in imposing upon anyone else a particular system of government. In spite to the contrary, America is the hope of all mankind.

The time has come when young and old will have to unite to look over whatever damage has being done, with respect, love and humility piece it together; and with God, wisdom and guidance, a lasting peace will be achieved for all.

Patience, Flexibility Required Of Adults

Stop and listen is the first most important thing to help the generation gap. Our children love to express their views on politics, the establishment, the family, etc. — stop and listen to them. Then if you have a fact on your view express yourself. It cannot be hearsay or beliefs but facts; then a mutual respect develops.

Patience is hard to have at times for either group. The years change all of our thinking and what we might think today could change tomorrow.

Don't criticize either your child or his friends, his hair or his dress. He knows how you feel and is waiting to upset you. If you do not react he is disappointed. He has to be part of the crowd but hope for moderation.

Independence for the adolescent is necessary. You may have different ideas but if it is within bounds "grin and bear" it. It is pretty hard at times to let him pursue his own project such as having your driveway strewn with nuts, bolts, fenders, etc. At least he is home.

Money is most important today. Money handed out freely brings rebellion. Let them earn it. This not only teaches them the value and respect for money but also responsibility and importance and makes them a part of this society. Always be truthful.

Be adaptable to change — one of the hardest of all. Perhaps it could be expressed as Richard L. Evans, who delivers the "Spoken Word" part of the Salt Lake Tabernacle Choir and Organ broadcast, put it: "Old or young, we have to keep flexible in living life; not flexible as to principles, as to things of eternal truth, but flexible in our reactions to environment, to people and places, to the going and coming of friends and family, to changing situations and circumstances."

Adults Must Become More Open-Minded

A better understanding would prevail between the younger generation and the over-30 group, I believe, if adults would spend more time and energy trying to comprehend the problems that the young people face in our society today. Careful examination of our values and ideas, which we sometimes try to impose on young people, possibly would make us more open-minded and understanding of today's youth.

In the confusing world we live in today, it is extremely difficult for the young to establish their self-identity. In addition to being born under the threat of the bomb, they face the problems of pollution, poverty, population explosion, and a tragic war they do not support or believe in. The future must look pretty bleak to the young people of today, and they need our support and sympathy, not criticism and ostracism. We cannot afford to be apathetic and indifferent to the younger generation's views and ideas, as it is very obvious to all that many changes must be made within our society if we are to survive.

Communication between the young and adults, where each party really listens to what the other one is saying is an absolute necessity. Sometimes we tend to talk at the young instead of really listening to what they are telling us. Also, I believe that if we respect young people as individuals, and not try to inflict adult authority on them, we would have smoother relationships. We should strive to treat young people in the same manner in which we would like to be treated. Most of all, we have to create an atmosphere where feelings of either group may be expressed and respected.

I believe more interest should be expressed by adults in the areas that the young wish to share with us. In other areas, such as copying their clothing styles, where young people do not wish us to intrude, I believe we should stay out.

We have a habit of stereotyping the young, such as lumping all adolescents with long hair into the drug category. Perhaps an adult, if he really thought about it, would not take offense to matters such as the length of hair when there are so many more significant things to worry about. We have to learn to be flexible and be able to compromise with young people, and at other times, even make concessions.

If we give of ourselves to the young, love and trust them, they will respond with love and trust. We should not have to impose our values and ideas upon young people, for if we set good examples for them to follow, and if they have good feelings about us, they will want to emulate us.

Generation Gap Starts With Infancy

I believe the generation gap opens up at a very tender age with our youngsters because we parents do not treat them like little friends or little people but like something slightly sub-human called a "child." Instead of being polite and respectful to this little person, a parent interrupts him without apology, bosses him around, often without explanation of why, invades his privacy, and makes decisions for him. While constantly telling him "not to interrupt," a parent keeps on talking, never giving the little person a chance to say anything.

With the best intentions in the world, a parent makes choices for him which he himself is not too young to make. For example, a favorite TV program might be due at 5:30 p.m. and the youngster is hanging around an hour ahead of time, waiting for it. The mother tells him to run outside and she will call him for his program. When 5:30 approaches, she looks outside and sees he is having a wonderful time with his friends. She then makes a unilateral decision that he prefers to continue this good time and does not call him for his program. Can he trust her again? Not quite so much. The erosion of confidence has begun.

Family Best Place To Communicate

Hurray for the I-J! Your "Rap Session" is a brilliant idea. This so-called generation gap may not be as wide or deep as its publicity suggests, but whereever it exists the human beings involved — young or old — should bend every effort to build a bridge across it. Communication is one of the important planks needed for such a bridge.

Most people talk too little, not too much. Many lack courage or ability to express their deep convictions. In my youth it was considered bad form at a social gathering to bring up religion or politics (sex was taboo). Controversy was frowned upon. Now we speak of everything everywhere at any time but oposing opinions continue to make open discussion extremely difficult.

I believe the family home — though by no means the only place — provides the best workshop for this special art. Beginning at birth the gurgles and giggles proceeding from the nursery can develop in later years into great conversations. All that is needed for this growth is a delight in listening and a loving response.

By the time children have reached their teens they usually have discovered a few simple rules that can keep an exciting argument going or bring it to a grinding halt. C. S. Lewis wrote his own useful rule: "Agree to disagree but not to judge." Granted that becoming a pro in any field demands "know how" and lots of practice, it also offers magnificent rewards.

As communication grows the bridge across the generation gap can begin to grow, reducing the distance between, until, hopefully, we are able to reach each other. I feel sure your "Rap Session" will make a valuable contribution toward this goal.

There's No Such Thing As Fair, Impartial

We have all been brought up with the belief that there is such a thing as fair, unjust, justice or fairness or impartiality. From my point of view there is no such thing as impartial. Most behaviors are a function of learning history, fairness and words such as deserve. People get what they deserve in the end or somewhere along the line. These words are not what they appear to be; there is no absolute standard of fairness, fairness sounds like an objective term.

There is a great deal of evidence for center of gravity. There is none for emotional centers of gravity, yet when people say these together it sounds as though there are such things.

We're brought up in schools that give you a "C" because you deserved a "C," involved here is the myth of fairness. Fair is a way of controlling the behavior of young people who eventually get to be old people. It is a way of interacting with one another that has survival value or has had up until now. It is a way of controlling situations where people may tend to escalate in aggressive behavior; possibly ending up in killing one another. We may de-escalate simply by saying to the other person, "I want to be fair," or stop doing that, that's not fair.

When we say things are not fair we are controlling each other, and we are doing it with aversive stimuli, it would be better for us in the long haul, if we forego this type of control with one another and introduce another kind.

Solution To "Gap" Contradict Selves

I come away from today's (April 30) "Rap Session" somewhat less than enlightened. Judging from the letters presented, the way to produce a generation "so intelligent, so full of compassion for the oppressed, so full of enthusiasm, and so filled with idealism" is for the previous generation (their parents) to spend all their time in X-rated movies, or staggering around in an alcoholic or nicotine haze (not pot; that's a "good-guy" vice).

Or, if you prefer, to produce children who are "beautiful people, super-smart, with character and guts," their parents need only be "too busy searching for their own identity," and "gouging for that damned almighty dollar" (which, after all, only pays the bills) to give them any Tender Loving Care.

No, I don't hate the young. I have several specimens in my own home. I simply feel there's a helluva lot of nonsense being spouted about what is either a "super-generation" or a "bunch of hippie bums," depending on your bias. This generation is composed of young human beings, neither much better nor much worse than all those who have gone before. They are simply receiving far more attention. And it's about time we brought a halt to this sanctimonious downgrading of the generation which reared them. It may be fun, but it's destructive and grossly unfair.

Really Listening Greatest Contrib

To listen. The greatest contribution which my group (over-30) could make toward better understanding between younger people and ourselves is to listen. This sounds so simple at first glance that it may appear naive, but real listening means more than just the ability to keep one's mouth shut. It is a state of mind — of openness and receptivity.

Too often adults give an impression of listening while internally they have turned off because they (1) are not interested, (2) disagree with what the other person is saying, (3) have prepared themselves to reject what they are about to hear because "young people don't know what they're talking about."

It is a difficult thing to listen without passing judgment, to listen so that another person's viewpoint is honestly heard and can be verbalized in a way that lets the other person know that he has been understood. Equally important is listening with empathy. Communication of feelings is when a person is committed to identifying with another human being's inner experience. Often an adult's own feelings can interfere with his ability to hear what a younger person is saying.

Today young people are confronted by a myriad of overwhelmingly complex problems. The long-continuing war in Vietnam, the seeming impersonalization of government and industry, and the destruction of our environmental balance give young people a walled-in feeling.

In order to establish a link with younger people, we need to listen openly to their expressions of fear, frustration and concern without saying, "Yes, I know, but . . ."

By the same token, young people must approach us with equal neutrality. They must be willing to listen to our gripes about the spiraling economy and taxes, without turning a deaf ear because it does not concern them. They should be willing to discuss ideas for change without automatically turning us off because we seem too caught up in the daily struggle of making a living.

Only when we begin to listen and hear (and in this I think that adults must make the greater effort) can we begin to communicate our mutual concerns.

Mrs. WILLIAM GLASCOCK

No Magic Antidote, But Understanding Helps

The "generation gap" is not a new phenomena. It is as old as time, and yet so many of us are looking for a magic antidote. I don't feel there's any quick, easy solution. Understanding, and that's what it's really all about, takes working at, day after day on both sides.

The words "communication" and "involvement" have been tossed around so much today, they have the ring of tired cliches, but I think they are the only effective means we have of establishing understanding between any age groups.

There is too much suspicion and prejudice on both ends of the scale. Generalization is a dangerous thing that spreads and contaminates. Every long-haired youth is not a "drug-crazed hippy," and not everyone over 30 in an "establishment robot" who will never again have an original thought.

The great progress in our world has come from the exchange of ideas. We must talk to one another, often and at length. We must keep open minds and open hearts. We must not fear involvement in each other's worlds. Most of all we should not be afraid to alter our opinions.

That old rule of judging everyone on his or her individual merits still holds true. Categorizing people into age groups is the worst form of discrimination. Young or old, I would hope we are all anti-discrimination. It's hard to "think" 18 when you're 35, and even more difficult for an 18-year-old to project himself 17 years into the future, but even the attempt fosters understanding. We can learn from each other if we'll only let the other guy talk once in a while.

NORINE WEEMS

To Close The Gap, Live For The Present

I am thrilled to be a woman in my early 40s — thrilled to watch and be awakened, and to finally realize that our biggest gap is talking "gaps." I can't make a hole unless I dig it. Nor can I embrace you unless I am aware of your existence. And all I know for sure is what I pen at this moment. We can only reach an understanding of one another if we live in the here and now. It begins at this moment, and if you feel a gap then you better come to terms with the void in you.

Thank God we are becoming aware of the proper moral values. I pity the woman who must drape herself in white "baby" seal skins to be "someone," or the fancy lady who sat in our capitol, and now has unborn breast of calf flown hundreds of miles for a "wee dinner for two" when millions must hock their self-esteem to get a few measly food stamps. Thank God we have bridged the gap of false pride in esteeming the warrior, and finally realizing that we must love more than our immediate neighbor. Thank God we have increased our awareness, and look back through history, and try to feel as it might have felt to be a slave, and for the black person to not only realize I am his friend, but that I also love him, because he is my brother. And to feel good about ourselves, but not to be prideful, as pride is the breeder of wars. Instead, we, as a mass generation, are feeling the moment, and relinquishing our egocentric selves by wanting nothing from Charlie of 18 or Harry at 52, but only happiness for them both.

We spent too many precious moments already, worrying about "who's doing it with whom, and how" — as I, at one time, bestowed the medal of valor on myself for making it to my marriage bed.

Let us rejoice in our freedom of expression. Don't worry about the one word on the bathroom wall, think of what it did for the donor. Fan the flame of kindred spirit, and rock the world with life. To hell with where we'll plant our "dearly beloved." When you walk down the street, whistle. The stock market may drop, but the sky won't.

MARCIA B. STOVER

To Big Difference, Ask — Then Listen

The no-longer-youngsters should be able to dig the Revolution Scene a little better, having had somewhat similar inclinations (though much less courage to carry them out) way back in the dark ages, when to be told was to do. Parents used to ask, "What do these young people know? They haven't been around long enough for anything to penetrate." But now it's, "They know too much! And about all the wrong things." True. They know the old set of values is as dead as yesterday's other beautiful memories. And that life moves on, and no matter what the direction, you've got to move with it. Listen to the sound of the times. For example, does any father know what motivates his son? He'd be in for a surprise and might even learn something if he d ask. And listen to the answer!

The under-30s are also under-informed. The world didn't begin the day they were born. If anybody's to blame for the mess we're in why not Eve, standing there with applesauce on her face? Ever since she was thrown by the first snake eyes, there's been one kind of trouble or another. Having nothing to look forward to but the Bomb is a cop-out! That mushroom cloud first blossomed during World War II, but no one asked to buy back his introduction to the human race because of it. A step in the right direction would be to stop tuning out when adults go into the "old traditions" bit. It could be really informative. Why not ask? And listen to the answer!

So, in a nutshell — which is where most of us seem to be living these days — the key words to inter-generational understanding are: ASK, and LISTEN!

Mrs. JEANE VESPER

We Cannot Meet, But We Can Understand

Understanding is best described as being tolerant and sympathetic and being tolerant and sympathetic is most difficult in a growing number of relationships between youth and the over-30.

In many now defeated cases, this may be obtained by the youth and the over-30 recognizing, whether the individual wants to or not, the reasons why aims, needs, drives, habits and hopes differ. Naturally, each individual relationship between youth and over-30 differs, varies considerably and no such recognitions come easy.

Almost desperately, I observe youth turning to religion and I wonder if this is not actually or also, a search for tolerance and sympathy. And I observe over-30 trying to escape attempts to communicate by showing youth anger, contempt, and other negatives.

When my son returned from Vietnam, he asked, "Understand me." I answered, "I do; I do not, however, agree." In this way, our relationship has tottered plenty as we both have wondered how youth-son and over-30-parent could be reaching for such completely different ways of life. We had some shouting, emotional debates but every now and then, each would listen briefly to the other, thereby not destroying for all time the deep affection we once had and, with patience — yes, and tolerance and sympathy one for the other, hoped to have, somehow, again. It became a matter of each of us really trying and then, finally, succeeding in each being tolerant and sympathetic.

As the growing expression states, "there is no way" to date by which our totally different frames of references and purposes can meet — but we can meet and talk and listen sometimes, anyway — and when we do, he understands, and I understand, for we have become tolerant and sympathetic, one for the other.

Demos May Seek Passage Of Reagan's State Budget

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Assembly Democratic leaders indicated yesterday they may seek passage of Gov. Ronald Reagan's $6.7 billion state budget but strike major unresolved programs such as welfare and education from the spending program.

Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti and Ways and Means Chairman Willie Brown Jr. told newsmen they might seek to finance those programs separately with appropriation bills tied to tax increase legislation.

Moretti said those programs could continue to function at their current budgeted levels in the next fiscal year starting July 1 without the legislature "appropriating one nickel for them."

Moretti said existing law assures continued financing of welfare and education programs at their current levels and that those two areas need not be included in the budget document itself.

He stressed, however, that "when we come to July 1, I want the entire fiscal situation resolved."

The two Democrats refused to be pinned down during an informal news conference on the Assembly floor but outlined what they called a "hypothetical" plan for construction of the budget.

Under questioning about passing a budget containing no funds for welfare and education but financing them separately with legislation tied to increased taxes, Moretti replied:

"We may well do that. That's the only way we can get attention to those needs."

Brown announced his Ways and Means Committee plans a special hearing Wednesday night on the budget and said it probably would reach the floor May 17 or May 20, at the latest. The deadline for legislative passage is June 30.

Brown told the Assembly the spending plan would contain a "rather unusual" balancing procedure in which Republicans could "easily" support.

But Assembly Republican leader Robert Monagan argued during a brief partisan floor scrap that such major unresolved policy issues as welfare, school finance and taxation should be dealt with in advance of the budget.

Profile Of A New College President

Sonoma State Is 'Alive And Doing Things,' Says Its Chief Administrator

NEW MAN ON CAMPUS at Rohnert Park is Thomas H. McGrath, appointed president of Sonoma State College only in late January, but already a familiar figure at the school and one of its most

By BONNIE BARD

Psychologist Thomas H. McGrath never pictured himself as a college president, but since his appointment to the top spot at Sonoma State College he has grown accustomed to the role.

"It's hard adjusting to a new job and a new home too," McGrath said.

He and his wife, Margaret, live in an apartment in Santa Rosa, but because of a lack of space for mementoes they've collected over the years, they haven't been able to consider it as "home." He said they hope eventually to buy a house in the college vicinity.

"I NEVER REALLY thought I'd become a college president," McGrath admitted. "My whole approach to my career hasn't been planned. I've simply thrown myself completely into whatever I am doing."

McGrath's career started with teaching at Mount San Antonio College at Walnut, Los Angeles County, in 1947: seven years on the psychology faculty at the Southern California campus of California State Polytechnic College, and research with the human factors group at the Navy electronics laboratory in San Diego.

He has been dean of students at California State Polytechnic College, Kellogg-Voorhis, from 1957 until 1964, when he joined the staff of State College Chancellor Glenn S. Dumke. McGrath had advanced to assistant executive vice chancellor at the time of his appointment to the Sonoma State presidency on Jan. 27.

McGRATH, 53, said he moved around often early in his career to gather as much experience as possible, but not necessarily to climb the ladder of success.

"I don't find it necessary to be top dog — to have influence," he said. "Titles never meant much to me."

McGrath added that he has never really missed being in the classroom as an instructor although he did long for the campus atmosphere while doing Navy research.

"When I went back as dean of students I found myself tied to a desk with office hours, but I really didn't miss the classroom,'' he said. "After all, deans are really teachers without a classroom."

"I WOULDN'T be a good dean now," McGrath said. "I've grown too rigid and too conservative."

He said he believes that deans must be young enough to relate to student and to keep up with the heavy workload, but mature enough for decision-making.

Although McGrath has been at the Rohnert Park campus only three months, he qualifies as one of the college's biggest boosters and speaks of it with pride.

"SONOMA STATE has a reputation with young people as being an 'in campus,' " he said, noting Santa Cruz enjoys the same honor in the University of California system. "We're alive and doing things here."

"The young age of the college might have something to do with it, but a lot is due to Amby's approach to its organization as a real community," he said, referring to former President Ambrose R. Nichols Jr., who resigned a year ago and now teaches in the chemistry department.

"A great many people were involved in early decisions and felt a real sense of participation," McGrath observed, adding that the rural atmosphere surrounding the campus is especially attractive to young people.

IN HIS FORMER position in the chancellor's office and in his new capacity, McGrath has felt some of the antagonism from the outside community where the college is sometimes considered a hotbed of radical activities and a home to youngsters who have a prejudice against washing.

While McGrath heard some of these comments made during an investigation he headed last summer, each derisive charge now has a personal meaning for him.

In a meeting with a Sonoma County civic leader, McGrath was discussing the man's son, a student at a private Bay Area university who was spending his junior year studying abroad. The concerned father told McGrath that his son was no longer happy with his private school and wanted to complete his education somehwere else upon his return.

"HE'S EVEN considering Sonoma State," McGrath was told.

Budgetary problems have also become one of McGrath's personal concerns as the college attempts to fit the expanding curriculum within the current fiscal limitations.

He said smaller colleges like Sonoma State will be hardest pressed because, unlike larger universities, they cannot simply set up additional classes of 300 students to accommodate higher enrollment.

"The style of the institution is personal, so we have no large classrooms," McGrath said. "Our largest room is intended for 125 students, so we can't average out the necessary small classes intended with some very large lecture courses."

IN HIS YEARS on various campuses, McGrath has seen the college system change along with the student life-style.

"Students are different — they have no rigid goals. They want to contribute and are not impressed by degrees, licenses and such," he said.

McGrath noted that many students no longer set a goal of attending college four years, earning a degree And then getting a job. Some remain at the college until they feel their personal needs are met, which could be one to six years, he said.

"The academic atmosphere is very supportive of their lives," he said. "Young people living together in a college or commune atmosphere is fine for a while, but problems develop for the student. It's all very self-reinforcing and there's no balance that causes him to look at himself from another point of view," he said.

McGrath believes that student political action has run its course on most campuses. "It was self-destructive," he said.

While in Sacramento, McGrath heard reports both from the chancellor's office and from Gov. Ronald Reagan's office that Sonoma State had the potential of being a violent campus.

"That was based on second and third-hand information they had very much over-rated," McGrath claimed.

He considers himself a student-oriented president and meets frenquently and casually with students, either in his office lounge or the student center.

"SOME HAVE suggested that I close the college down in protest of the governor's budget recommendations," McGrath said. "I told them that if the college is ever closed, it will be because 4,000 students want it closed. If there's one student who wants to attend class, then the college will stay open — no matter what."

McGrath believes the college has far fewer radical students than residents of outside communities imagine.

"We really have a good atmosphere here," he said.

Embroidery: Next-Best-Thing To Fishing

88-Year-Old Frank Bauman Keeps Busy With Needle And Thread

By DON KEOWN

Many a widower or bachelor has been forced, out of sheer necessity, to master the skill of sewing buttons onto his shirts and even darning the holes in his socks.

But even before Frank G. Bauman's wife passed away in 1951, he did all the sewing in his family.

And at 88, nearly 89, he continues to sew as a hobby second in his affections only to fishing and hunting.

Sewing is hardly an apt description for the fine stitchery that he produces in his spare time when not sitting on a lake shore or creek bank with fishing pole in hand.

MUCH OF IT is difficult and elaborate embroidery work with complicated and exacting patterns that betray the engineering background of Bauman before his retirement.

Born in Pittsburgh, Pa., on July 17, 1882, he worked mainly as a machinist, tool and diemaker and as a fitter. He was employed by the Thomas Spacing Machine Co. from 1937 until six months prior to his 80th birthday.

FOR THOMAS Spacing he designed and fashioned the lubricating system for a mammoth shearing machine, working without blueprints except those in his keen mind.

He played a similar role in the development of other contributions by that company to America's technological arsenal.

Off the job, his nimble fingers and sharp brain were as active as they were at work.

As a youth and as a young man, he particularly enjoyed boat-building as well as hunting and fishing as his hobbies. As he grew older, he gave up boatbuilding to concentrate upon the hunting and fishing.

WHEN HIS years caused him to forego hunting, he turned to small bore target shooting, loading his own shells for greater accuracy, and he became an expert shot.

Now the fishing is his principal outdoor interest, and he talks about it with great enthusiasm.

"Given a nice day," he says, "I'm happiest with a fishing rod in my hands."

But given a rainy or cold day, Bauman still has his fancy needlework to fall back upon to keep himself occupied.

"I GUESS I have always

been interested in making fancy things with my hands," he says.

He remembers the chains he wove from horsehair as a schoolboy.

He became seriously interested in fancy stitchery "around 1937" when his sister-in-law showed him a pair of embroidered towels that she had completed and the beauty of the stitching aroused his artistic instincts.

"SHE TOLD ME how to go about embroidering," he says, "and pretty soon I was doing my own."

While still employed, Bauman's spare time was limited, and so was his embroidery. But in 1948 he started his most ambitious project to date, a tablecloth and napkin set in Italian cutwork, and a year and seven months later it was finished.

Since coming to Marin County three years ago, Bauman has found a great deal more time for his needlework.

IN THOSE three years, he has completed six large tablecloths, two luncheon cloths, two twin-size quilts, four stitchery pictures "and an unknown number of guest towels done in Swedish Modern."

His daughters, Mary Ritzman and Elner Miller, also of Corte Madera, say their father "approaches the complex embroidery work the same way he used to do his engineering — by first studying the pattern extensively to determine in which direction the stitches should be made."

"This advance planning," they add, "results in a design appearing on both sides of the material, with the stitches on the underside all going in the same direction. And because he determines thread lengths in advance, there are no visible knots."

THUS BAUMAN'S work is distinguished by a reverse side upon which the design is as interesting and as attractive as that on the primary side. Making his skill all the more noteworthy, he works left-handed.

And throughout his work, Bauman maintains a close approximate count of the number of stitches as well as the length of thread used in each piece.

For example, one tablecloth, 59 inches by 90 inches, involved 31,270 stitches, another required 28,380 stitches, and each of his quilts involved more than 37,000 stitches.

WHEN HE decides to devote a day to his embroidering — "when it isn't fishing weather" — Bauman is likely to put in as much as six and a half hours on the work, three hours in the morning, another two in the afternoon and an hour and a half in the evening.

"I find that when I am working with a needle and thread, figuring out a design, or actually putting it in, I feel better," the octogenarian says.

And that is his advice for other senior citizens: "Keep yourself occupied. Then you forget all those little aches and pains. You don't have time to feel miserable."

BAUMAN SAYS he has given some of his work to friends and

For example, one tablecloth, 59 inches by 90 inches, involved 31,270 stitches, another required 28,380 stitches, and each of his quilts involved more than 37,000 stitches.

WHEN HE decides to devote a day to his embroidering — "when it isn't fishing weather" — Bauman is likely to put in as much as six and a half hours on the work, three hours in the morning, another two in the afternoon and an hour and a half in the evening.

"I find that when I am working with a needle and thread, figuring out a design, or actually putting it in, I feel better," the octogenarian says.

And that is his advice for other senior citizens: "Keep yourself occupied. Then you forget all those little aches and pains. You don't have time to feel miserable."

BAUMAN SAYS he has given some of his work to friends and

Adds daughter Mrs. Ritzman of tablecloths, luncheon cloths and napkins that her father has made for her: "They are so pretty, we won't even let company eat on them."

Mrs. Ritzman, who paints, took some of her father's needlework to a Marin Society of Artists gathering to show to some of her fellow artists.

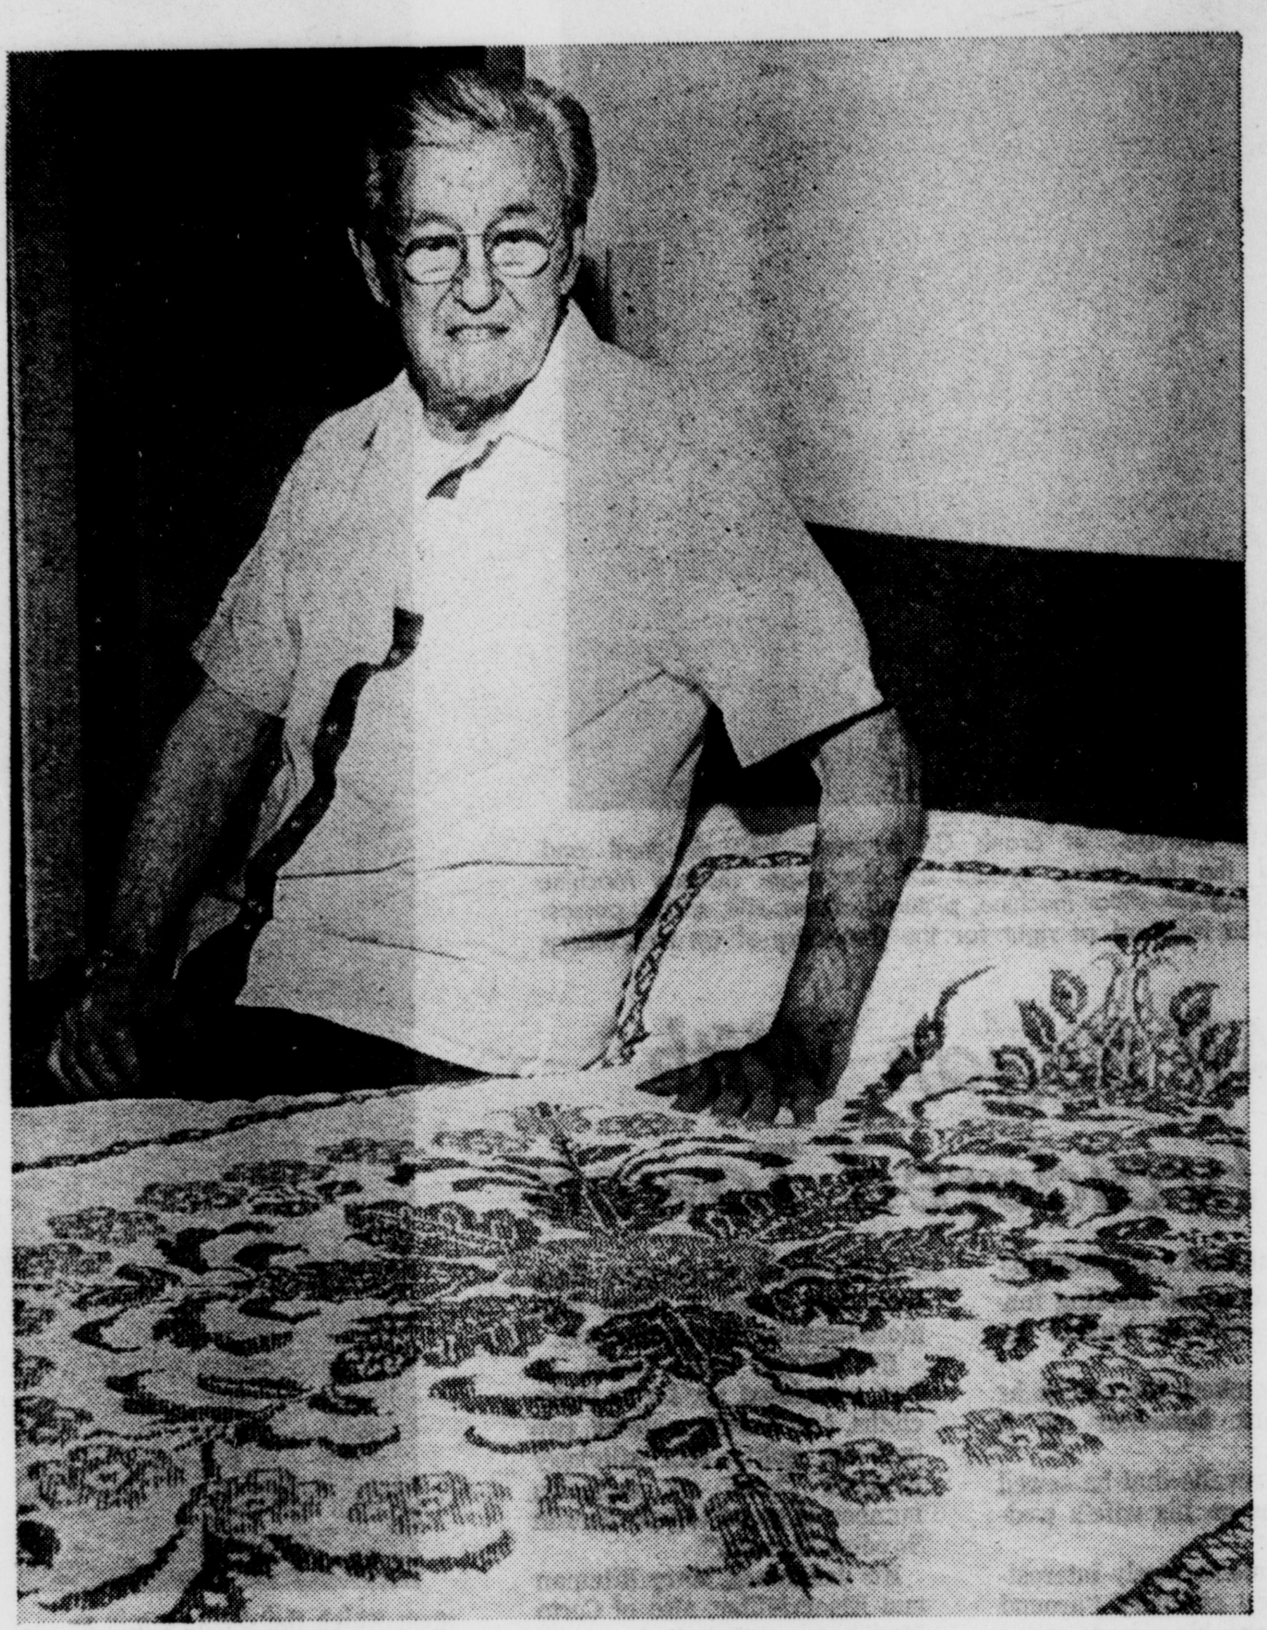
"THEY THOUGHT it was fantastic," she reports. "They were so impressed they insisted that it ought to be shown somewhere."

Consequently some "wall pictures" that the creative 88-year-old did in embroidery are scheduled to be exhibited at the Crocker-Citizens National Bank in Corte Madera in September.

Bauman will be 89 then. But in excellent health, he expects to continue with his embroidery — and his fishing —well into his 90s.

As for the daughters, neither does embroidery work. Mrs. Ritzman sticks to her painting, and Mrs. Miller crochets some.

"But father has preempted the embroidery field in our family," laughs Mrs. Ritzman. "He's just too good for us."



WITH PARDONABLE PRIDE, Frank G. Bauman poses in his Corte Madera home with one of the bedspreads for which he did the fancy needle work. Bauman has finished two of the quilted spreads, along with tablecloths, luncheon cloths, towels, embroidered pictures, etc., in the past three years since coming to Marin.

WORKING LEFT-HANDED, Frank Bauman does some fancy stitchery upon a tablecloth which, when completed, will be, his daughters say, "too pretty even to use for company." His work is distinguished by an underside in which the design is every bit as neat and attractive as it is on the primary side.

One School Where No Child Fails —

St. Stephen's Parish School Features More Teachers For Fewer Pupils

By BECKY MATSON

In one small school in Marin County today, there is no sense of crisis in the classroom.

Public schools may be struggling with Gargantuan problems, but St. Stephen's Parish Day School in Belvedere quietly goes about the task of educating 36 youngsters.

Begun eight years ago in the lower level of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Parish Day School was designed as a "church-related school, unique in character, to provide an education that could not be obtained in public schools."

WITH THE flexibility of a private school, Parish Day feels free to inject its academic program with "the loving concern of a Christian community."

Each day begins with a chapel period in the church sanctuary.

"We try to teach children to trust and care for each other," said Rev. John Thornton, rector of St. Stephen's Parish who also acts as headmaster for the school. "We do this various ways; first, by helping them become aware of themselves as a person, and then aware of their feelings for other people."

TO THE casual observer, Parish Day resembles the one-room schoolhouse of a century ago. Ages range from 4½ to 11 and, academically, courses are equivalent to public school instruction kindergarten through third grade. In this ungraded school, however, calendar ages are almost meaningless.

"We're in the business of detecting readiness," said Reverend Thornton. "And we provide educational opportunities on the basis of that readiness."

Educators long ago determined that chronological age and individual development do not necessarily match. The mental-age range in a group of 6-year-olds entering the first grade is often more than three years.

PHYSICALLY, it's the same story — the eye-to-hand muscle coordination necessary to learn to read and write, do not develop at the same time in all children.

Unlike the current "free school" movement, Parish Day has a certain number of rules and an academic program based on the same subjects as public schools: Language arts, mathematics, science, art, French, music and physical education.

"Teaching is more difficult in a non-graded school," said Principal-Teacher Margaret Jackson, "because each child is working at his own level in each subject. This is the real value of our school.

"WE ADJUST oursleves to suit a child — we don't make the child adjust to fit into a system. We can accommodate children who are gifted and we can help those who have difficulty learning."

All of the students are loosely grouped into three divisions — Lower and Upper Primaries, and a Transition Group.

"We used to call the third one, the 'Bridge Group'," said Nance Wrisley, a teacher at Parish Day for the last six years, "but we had to change the name. People thought we were teaching the children to play cards.

"ACTUALLY, WE have very little structure. Each child progresses at his own rate. And there is always success. This is the whole idea behind St. Stephen's — the children never fail.

"A child may go ahead in one area and take longer in another. Very rarely do children keep pace with each other for any length of time. Each child is accepted for himself, for his own uniqueness."

Even though it is housed in an Episcopal church, the school is non-sectarian. Half of the students come from families of the church's members; the rest are from Protestant denominations, Jewish, and other religious backgrounds.

BUT PARENTS don't object to the chapel period.

"We're only concerned with communicating love to these children," said Reverend Thornton, "and there is nothing doctrinaire about what we're doing.

"Everyone goes right along with this. We're very sensitive to the children who come from Jewish homes or from homes where there is no form of religious expression. We try to take an approach which develops a relationship of caring and support for one another.

"As I tell the parents, we don't teach dogmatic religion; we teach existential theology.

"ONE OF THE exercises in chapel period is that teams are formed and one child is blindfolded. Then the other child is required to lead him all over the church building — in and out the pews, up over the pews, over the altar rail, everywhere, but being very careful and helping him, in and out and over and under so that he doesn't injure himself in any way — developing his trust in another person.

"Are you willing to put your life in somebody else's hands?

"For a moment it's kind of terrifying and you have to get over the terror and follow along. This exercise develops both trust and trustworthiness."

A DIFFERENT kind of trust is expected of the parents. When they enroll their children, they agree to let the staff decide when a child is ready for any academic discipline. They are also asked not to compare their child's progress with that of any other child.

"Providing continuous progress for each child requires discernment on the part of the teachers," one parent said. "You have to trust the staff."

Progress reports in essay form come to parents twice a year. Formal testing is done once a year, using the same standardized tests as in public schools.

"TEST SCORES only tell us where a child is in relation to public schools," Reverend Thornton said.

"We have a teacher-student ratio of one to 12; in public schools, it's one to 30. We don't have to traumatize the children by constant testing. We live with these kids, you see, and tests can't tell us much more about them than we already know."

Anita Sumariwalla, the Lower Primary teacher, uses every opportunity for a learning experience. When a new playhouse (in the form of a castle) arrived, the children examined its construction in minute detail.

THEN MRS. Sumariwalla said, "I've found a little hole in the wall of our room. Let's peek in and see how our school was built, too." They did, and learned not only how walls were built but also the new words of "hollow," "solid," and "construction."

The children will paint the walls of the castle, "after we put on some cover-up clothing," Mrs. Sumariwalla said. "My children are mostly talented in painting themselves."

Parents differ in their opinions of the value of St. Stephen's School philosophies.

TO ONE mother, "the biggest plus factor is the proven fact of far greater academic gain." But according to another, it's the religious ingredient: "Chapel period gives the children another dimension about human beings, life in general, and the Creator of those beings and that life."

Academic success comes eventually to each child. One, a 6-year-old, reads at second grade level and is doing third grade math. Another child is the age of a public school fifth grader, but is comfortable working at third grade level. His best friend is two years younger, reads at sixth grade level and is working in third grade math.

"It doesn't matter," Mrs. Jackson said. "In Upper Primary, I'm using five different math books among thirteen children. Each child is working in a different section. And the children help each other."

"We promote the feeling of a family," said Mrs. Wrisley. "Of course there's some competition, but it isn't rewarded. With a small group, of different ages, teachers can easily see who is ready to advance and who is not. Also, with small numbers, the teacher can allow for individual differences. We can spot difficulties before they develop into problems."

Parents express qualms about the eventual move their children must make into the grade layering and sometimes impersonal climate of a larger school.

"IT IS something in the minds of the parents," said Reverend Thornton. "But once a child leaves here, I'm not sure it becomes a problem to him. He has self-confidence and feels secure. We believe the longer you can keep a child in a successful atmosphere, the better he will be able to cope with any other situation.

"We're preparing these children for their next environment — for the rest of their elementary school, junior high school, high school, college, and graduate school educations.

"We think we prepare them for all of it."

WHILE CHARLIE OGDEN, right, helps David Rosenthal master the unit system of mathematics, he is also reinforcing his own knowledge of the subject. "We try to teach children to trust and care for each other," says Rev. John Thornton, St. Stephen's headmaster.

"With more than 80 per cent of the population now living in urban areas, less than 40 per cent of the labor force is producing goods while 60 per cent performs services."

The observations come from Marcelett Henry, supervisor of the Food Education and Service Training (FEAST) and Occupational Clothing Training programs at Tamalpais High School in Mill Valley.

FOOD SERVICE, Mrs. Henry continues, has become the country's fourth largest business. And conservative figures estimate that in 1968 California's food service businesses were ringing up more than $5,700 in sales every minute.

With these facts and figures in mind, Tamalpais High School has aimed its specialized vocational studies at the fields where the labor demand exists and flourishes.

One or more semesters in a food service or clothing production class can, Mrs. Henry notes, soften considerably the uphill struggle the youngster without a college degree or training in a specialized school faces when he goes job hunting today.

"SUCCESS IN employment is dependent on the student's ability to make the behavioral changes required by employers," Mrs. Henry believes.

At Tamalpais, Project FEAST offers instruction in commercial cooking and waiting tables, coordinated with the mathematics-science-English classes and incorporated into the regular curriculum of the high school.

The Occupational Clothing Training program introduces its students to the manufacturing, merchandising and retailing functions of that industry.

THE OBJECTIVE in both courses is to enable students to acquire in a formal class situation the specialized abilities they need to be effective employees.

Lois McDonnell, mathematics teacher, says: "One of the less glamorous, but absolutely essential aspects of the FEAST program deals with mastering figures oriented toward hotel management and food service.

"These include learning the table of liquid and dry measurements, and accounting procedures. The student gets acquainted with decimals, percentages, bank deposit systems, payrolls, insurance, costs and pricing.

"And he learns the satisfaction that comes when, after running through a whole day's restaurant checks on the cash register, his totals check out to the last penny, with no shortage or overage."

PETER KLAIN of the English department adds, "I am concerned that FEAST participants be able to express themselves clearly, forcefully and colorfully. Both written and oral experiences are important, for both are usually involved in that all-important first contact with an employer.

"Classroom activities are planned to give the student as much experience as possible in speaking properly and writing legibly."

The purpose of the food education and service training basically is to prepare juniors and seniors who select the courses to enter a family of occupations related to food and hospitality services found in hotels, motels, restaurants, clubs and hospitals.

THE COURSES are designed to develop a reasonable proficiency in skills necessary for those who plan to go to work as soon as they graduate from high school, but also to lay the

"With more than 80 per cent of the population now living in urban areas, less than 40 per cent of the labor force is producing goods while 60 per cent performs services."

The observations come from Marcelett Henry, supervisor of the Food Education and Service Training (FEAST) and Occupational Clothing Training programs at Tamalpais High School in Mill Valley.

FOOD SERVICE, Mrs. Henry continues, has become the country's fourth largest business. And conservative figures estimate that in 1968 California's food service businesses were ringing up more than $5,700 in sales every minute.

With these facts and figures in mind, Tamalpais High School has aimed its specialized vocational studies at the fields where the labor demand exists and flourishes.

One or more semesters in a food service or clothing production class can, Mrs. Henry notes, soften considerably the uphill struggle the youngster without a college degree or training in a specialized school faces when he goes job hunting today.

"SUCCESS IN employment is dependent on the student's ability to make the behavioral changes required by employers," Mrs. Henry believes.

At Tamalpais, Project FEAST offers instruction in commercial cooking and waiting tables, coordinated with the mathematics-science-English classes and incorporated into the regular curriculum of the high school.

The Occupational Clothing Training program introduces its students to the manufacturing, merchandising and retailing functions of that industry.

THE OBJECTIVE in both courses is to enable students to acquire in a formal class situation the specialized abilities they need to be effective employees.

Lois McDonnell, mathematics teacher, says: "One of the less glamorous, but absolutely essential aspects of the FEAST program deals with mastering figures oriented toward hotel management and food service.

"These include learning the table of liquid and dry measurements, and accounting procedures. The student gets acquainted with decimals, percentages, bank deposit systems, payrolls, insurance, costs and pricing.

"And he learns the satisfaction that comes when, after running through a whole day's restaurant checks on the cash register, his totals check out to the last penny, with no shortage or overage."

PETER KLAIN of the English department adds, "I am concerned that FEAST participants be able to express themselves clearly, forcefully and colorfully. Both written and oral experiences are important, for both are usually involved in that all-important first contact with an employer.

"Classroom activities are planned to give the student as much experience as possible in speaking properly and writing legibly."

The purpose of the food education and service training basically is to prepare juniors and seniors who select the courses to enter a family of occupations related to food and hospitality services found in hotels, motels, restaurants, clubs and hospitals.

ANTHONY QUINN plays an army deserter in 18th Century Mexico who finds himself committed to protecting the people of a small village from a gang of desperadoes in the motion picture, "Guns for San Sebastian," which will have its second television showing tonight at 8:30 o'clock on Channels 3 and 4. The movie is in color.

TV Has Come A Long Way

It was 25 years ago this year that television first appeared in a few of the nation's living rooms.

Now, there are approximately 60 million U.S. homes equipped with sets. About one-third of them have two or more receivers.

Originally a neighborhood wonderment when a family purchased a 10-inch screen that flickered and faded, it now comes in color. About 22.6 million homes enjoy it in all its tints — and there are almost 30 million color sets in use.

A quarter of a century ago, there were about 5,000 sets. Those were black-and-white with relatively tiny viewing screens.

On Aug. 25, 1949, compatible, all-electronic color transmission was announced.

Robert Reed, star of "The Brady Bunch, will also play a recurring role next season as a police lieutenant in "Mannix."

groundwork for those who plan to continue their education for professional jobs at the community college or university level.

The FEAST approach is to teach students to take pride in work well done; to develop dependability and promptness; to have an understanding of what management expects and requires of employees; to understand unions and their roles in contracts, regulations and responsibilities; to learn how to listen to, understand and follow instructions; to learn how to work with all kinds of people under pressure and varying conditions; to acquire knowledge of the many kinds of kitchen equipment and how to use it, and finally to learn sanitary and safety procedures and precautions.

Courses covered through the eleventh and twelfth grades include nutrition, sanitation, quantity cooking, American government and physical education.

ELECTIVES include accounting, typing, booking, office machines, consumer economics and commercial food preparation.

The FEAST staff, in addition to Mrs. Henry, its director, and its teachers and counselors, includes an active advisory committee composed of representatives of management, labor and education.

The Occupational Clothing Training Program based at Tamalpais High is also under the direction of Mrs. Henry.

This course offers students who are interested in jobs in the clothing industry an opportunity to explore employment possibilities, and to prepare for certain entry-level assignments.

While open to both boys and girls, its present enrollment of 18 is composed entirely of girls, Mrs. Henry said.

Although sewing machines are there, and used, the Occupational Training Program, she added, should not be confused with the old high school sewing class experienced by many of the parents of today's students. "Our program includes merchandising and retailing aspects that were never envisioned in the old courses," she explained.

Employers, according to Mrs. Henry, have indicated a special interest in potential employees with specialized training in the clothing field, making it an unusually fertile employment field.

SUCH TRAINEES increase significantly their chances for eventually rising to executive status in a field in which they might enter on a clerical or skilled labor level, Mrs. Henry believes.

In the special employment opportunities it offers young people in a time in which their job picture is not always bright, the food service industry resembles the clothing business.

Mrs. Henry noted that records of Culinary Union Local 126 through the late 1960s and into the early 1970s show a continuing gain in the number of restaurants, both franchised and non-franchised, within Marin County.

Some one is going to have to do the cooking, the managing and the serving in those restaurants and food service establishments.

When trained, competent young people are available to handle those responsibilities, it is a boon not only to the restaurateurs, but to their customers as well.

A talented chef and an efficient waitress are gems that gleam like diamonds.

PATTERN LAYOUTS, an all-important facet of the mass production that makes possible economically-priced clothing, are mastered by these Tamalpais High School students.

Babies — Blessing Or A Booby Trap?

THE BABY TRAP by Ellen Peck; Bernard Geis, 245 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Mary Lou Jacobson.

"I want to tell you about this trap, not because I see babies as the enemies of the human race, really, but because I see babies as the enemies of you." So says Ellen Peck, 27-year-old Baltimore junior high school teacher and author of the new book "Baby Trap."

"I am going to emphasize what is not shown in other sources: the problems of having children; and the unique values to the childless marriage," she promises.

Mrs. Peck, herself childless by choice, does just that, very entertainingly. This is a book well written . . . fast paced and well documented. Many of the case histories of good childless marriages and terrible child-centered marriages are written vignette-style, to prove her theory that the only good marriage is one without children.

"Baby Trap" is aimed at the young woman either preparing for marriage or who is just married, to show her the alternatives to having children —assuming the role of Geisha, mistress, lover and wife . . . but never mother . . . to her husband. Mrs. Peck assures the young reader that these are jobs for any woman without the time-consuming occupation of mother to a brood of kids.

She explores the "Baby Sell" . . . the push by the media and the multimillion-dollar corporations whose earnings depend on selling baby products. Her tour through the Baby News store at Fisherman's Wharf in San Francisco is filled with pathos and humor as she explores the "manufacturer's trap."

Mrs. Peck cites many examples of wayward husbands, bored by the lack of attention at home, burdened by the financial responsibilities of wife and children, weary of a dull job but afraid to change, and of women wasting time, training and talent buried under a load of diapers, dishes and dirt. She compares these men and women with the carefree couples who have the nerve to say to an unbelieving culture: "We don't want or need children; we have each other."

The author adds weight to her argument by citing the population explosion and the cultural changes that allow people to choose the Pill, live their own lives and enjoy wider personal experiences.

"I'm grown up, and I want my life now, thank you. My adult life. And I want it directly, I don't care to live in a second childhood . . . vicariously," says Mrs. Peck.

If that sounds selfish and self-centered the author will tell you she is capable of making contributions to society other than children.

If you already have children you will find the book will give you some food for thought on your own motivations, challenges and interests as a woman and a mother.

"I don't want you to wake up a dozen years from now and realize that your days are built on routine, that your life consists of living vicariously through your children, that you've lost your zest for new experiences . . . and quite possibly your husband's interest as well. And yet these are a few of the consequences of the baby trap." So warns Ellen Peck.

A Novel Of Lovely Imagery And Marvelous Characters

Here is a beautiful book by an author who sketches his story in a "painterly" rather than linear manner, and who makes of most other writers crass fools.

Frederick Buechner tells the tale of Lion Country with exquisite sensitivity in a delicately wrought yet piercing style, so finely played out you can hear its hum.

The plot concerns a spinsterish bachelor of New York City, with the means to pursue whims; in this case, researching an article on a mail order school for ministers. Its head preacher man, it develops, has a said penchant for expose himself. Named Leo Bebb, he takes comfort in the flamboyant abandon of lions in one of those cageless zoos.

His daughter, Sharon, shocks Antonio Parr, the protagonist, out of his teacups-in-the-parlor stance, and the inevitable is inevitable as it always is, but, driven by the masterful hand of Buechner, it's better.

The storyline is intertwined with marvelous characterizations. Miriam, Antonio's twin, who dies as he comes to life, from a disease for which pain is the only symptom. Brownie, the used-car salesman turned disciple to Bebb. Herman Redpath, the rich little Indian.

And Bebb, himself. The jailbird saint.

Through it all, the imagery: lovely, funny, true. "A summer's day of a girl." "The soft collision of our flesh." "He smiled as though the Lord had promised a major tax cut."

The theme? A search for the facts. But accuracy sometimes distorts the issue. And to add to the confusion, "Lion Country" has a joyful ending.

Everyone lives happily ever after?

Up until now the English novelist Francis Clifford has been best-known as the author of "The Naked Runner." Henceforth, he should be equally well-known as the creator of "The Blind Side," for it is, indeed, as its publisher proclaims it, "a major novel of suspense."

Two brothers, Richard and Howard Lawrence, with little in common except for the sharing of boyhood in a home in which there is no love, choose separate paths in life.

Richard, idealistic, sentimental, a bit self-righteous, becomes a Roman Catholic priest. Howard, cynical and embittered, is a naval officer attached to the Defense Ministry — and a spy for the Communists.

The book begins in Biafra where Richard, assigned as a missionary, undertakes a desperate, perhaps foolhardy mercy mission for his village that ultimately costs him an arm. Clifford's depiction of the obscene horrors and terrors caused by the strife of the futile Nigerian secessionist attempt are among the most powerful and revealing descriptions of mankind's inhumanity to his own kind that can be found anywhere.

The scene then shifts to England to where Richard returns, in ill grace with the Church for his unsanctioned behavior. There his own life becomes enmeshed with that of Howard for whom time and luck in his traitorous career are running out.

In the end, the two brother's weaknesses bring about an ironical and tragic conclusion to their difficulties — and yet one from which both men have learned a lesson; Richard that love and duty are sometimes exclusive and separate things, Howard that life lived without love is not life at all.

Clifford's novel is fraught with meaning for these times that are both blindly cynical and blindly idealistic at times, depending upon whether the Howards or the Richards are on the stage at the moment.

It's Schmaltzy, But So Is Opera

Reviews Of New Reading

It is extremely difficult to imagine the magnificent voice of James McCracken going unemployed for over two years while in Italy on his first European trip after leaving the Met. Yet this is exactly what he experienced when he and his wife, mezzo Sandra Warfield, decided that Jim was stalemated in minor roles at the Met and had to make the break to Europe on the chance that he would land major roles, even if in smaller opera houses.

This is the story of that struggle and young singers would be well advised to read it if they are serious about becoming professionals. The determination it takes to be successful in this business even assuming a fine voice is incredible.

After a very long period of auditioning — without landing a single job — Jim describes an audition for an important Italian impressario that went very well. They loved everything he did and requested more. Finally the impressario came up to him with tears in his eyes, embraced him and said, "McCracken, you are truly a great tenor. What a shame I can't engage you." It was at this point that they considered going back to Cleveland, but then Sandra landed a title role with a touring La Scala opera company and they stayed in Europe.

This proved to be the right decision as slowly things began to happen for them with occasional roles here and there on the continent and then out of the blue an offer from Washington, D.C., for Jim to sing Otello.

Of course, if you are an opera fan you know that Jim and Sandra have since achieved enormous success.

The one fault with the book is the way it is written — as a daily diary with Jim and Sandra taking turns at the tape recorder. It was supposed to cover a single year — 1969 — but fortunately they varied from this to include events from the years 1957 through 1969, so it comes close to being a biography for that time period.

In spite of the tape recorder approach to writing, this comes off as a very interesting story of two singers in search of success and finding not only success but love. Schmaltzy? Yes, but so is opera.

"I'm grown up, and I want my life now, thank you. My adult life. And I want it directly, I don't care to live in a second childhood . . . vicariously," says Mrs. Peck.

If that sounds selfish and self-centered the author will tell you she is capable of making contributions to society other than children.

If you already have children you will find the book will give you some food for thought on your own motivations, challenges and interests as a woman and a mother.

"I don't want you to wake up a dozen years from now and realize that your days are built on routine, that your life consists of living vicariously through your children, that you've lost your zest for new experiences . . . and quite possibly your husband's interest as well. And yet these are a few of the consequences of the baby trap." So warns Ellen Peck.

A Novel Of Lovely Imagery And Marvelous Characters

Here is a beautiful book by an author who sketches his story in a "painterly" rather than linear manner, and who makes of most other writers crass fools.

Frederick Buechner tells the tale of Lion Country with exquisite sensitivity in a delicately wrought yet piercing style, so finely played out you can hear its hum.

The plot concerns a spinsterish bachelor of New York City, with the means to pursue whims; in this case, researching an article on a mail order school for ministers. Its head preacher man, it develops, has a said penchant for expose himself. Named Leo Bebb, he takes comfort in the flamboyant abandon of lions in one of those cageless zoos.

His daughter, Sharon, shocks Antonio Parr, the protagonist, out of his teacups-in-the-parlor stance, and the inevitable is inevitable as it always is, but, driven by the masterful hand of Buechner, it's better.

The storyline is intertwined with marvelous characterizations. Miriam, Antonio's twin, who dies as he comes to life, from a disease for which pain is the only symptom. Brownie, the used-car salesman turned disciple to Bebb. Herman Redpath, the rich little Indian.

And Bebb, himself. The jailbird saint.

Through it all, the imagery: lovely, funny, true. "A summer's day of a girl." "The soft collision of our flesh." "He smiled as though the Lord had promised a major tax cut."

The theme? A search for the facts. But accuracy sometimes distorts the issue. And to add to the confusion, "Lion Country" has a joyful ending.

Everyone lives happily ever after?

Up until now the English novelist Francis Clifford has been best-known as the author of "The Naked Runner." Henceforth, he should be equally well-known as the creator of "The Blind Side," for it is, indeed, as its publisher proclaims it, "a major novel of suspense."

Two brothers, Richard and Howard Lawrence, with little in common except for the sharing of boyhood in a home in which there is no love, choose separate paths in life.

Richard, idealistic, sentimental, a bit self-righteous, becomes a Roman Catholic priest. Howard, cynical and embittered, is a naval officer attached to the Defense Ministry — and a spy for the Communists.

The book begins in Biafra where Richard, assigned as a missionary, undertakes a desperate, perhaps foolhardy mercy mission for his village that ultimately costs him an arm. Clifford's depiction of the obscene horrors and terrors caused by the strife of the futile Nigerian secessionist attempt are among the most powerful and revealing descriptions of mankind's inhumanity to his own kind that can be found anywhere.

The scene then shifts to England to where Richard returns, in ill grace with the Church for his unsanctioned behavior. There his own life becomes enmeshed with that of Howard for whom time and luck in his traitorous career are running out.

In the end, the two brother's weaknesses bring about an ironical and tragic conclusion to their difficulties — and yet one from which both men have learned a lesson; Richard that love and duty are sometimes exclusive and separate things, Howard that life lived without love is not life at all.

Clifford's novel is fraught with meaning for these times that are both blindly cynical and blindly idealistic at times, depending upon whether the Howards or the Richards are on the stage at the moment.

It's Schmaltzy, But So Is Opera

Reviews Of New Reading

It is extremely difficult to imagine the magnificent voice of James McCracken going unemployed for over two years while in Italy on his first European trip after leaving the Met. Yet this is exactly what he experienced when he and his wife, mezzo Sandra Warfield, decided that Jim was stalemated in minor roles at the Met and had to make the break to Europe on the chance that he would land major roles, even if in smaller opera houses.

This is the story of that struggle and young singers would be well advised to read it if they are serious about becoming professionals. The determination it takes to be successful in this business even assuming a fine voice is incredible.

After a very long period of auditioning — without landing a single job — Jim describes an audition for an important Italian impressario that went very well. They loved everything he did and requested more. Finally the impressario came up to him with tears in his eyes, embraced him and said, "McCracken, you are truly a great tenor. What a shame I can't engage you." It was at this point that they considered going back to Cleveland, but then Sandra landed a title role with a touring La Scala opera company and they stayed in Europe.

This proved to be the right decision as slowly things began to happen for them with occasional roles here and there on the continent and then out of the blue an offer from Washington, D.C., for Jim to sing Otello.

Of course, if you are an opera fan you know that Jim and Sandra have since achieved enormous success.

The one fault with the book is the way it is written — as a daily diary with Jim and Sandra taking turns at the tape recorder. It was supposed to cover a single year — 1969 — but fortunately they varied from this to include events from the years 1957 through 1969, so it comes close to being a biography for that time period.

In spite of the tape recorder approach to writing, this comes off as a very interesting story of two singers in search of success and finding not only success but love. Schmaltzy? Yes, but so is opera.

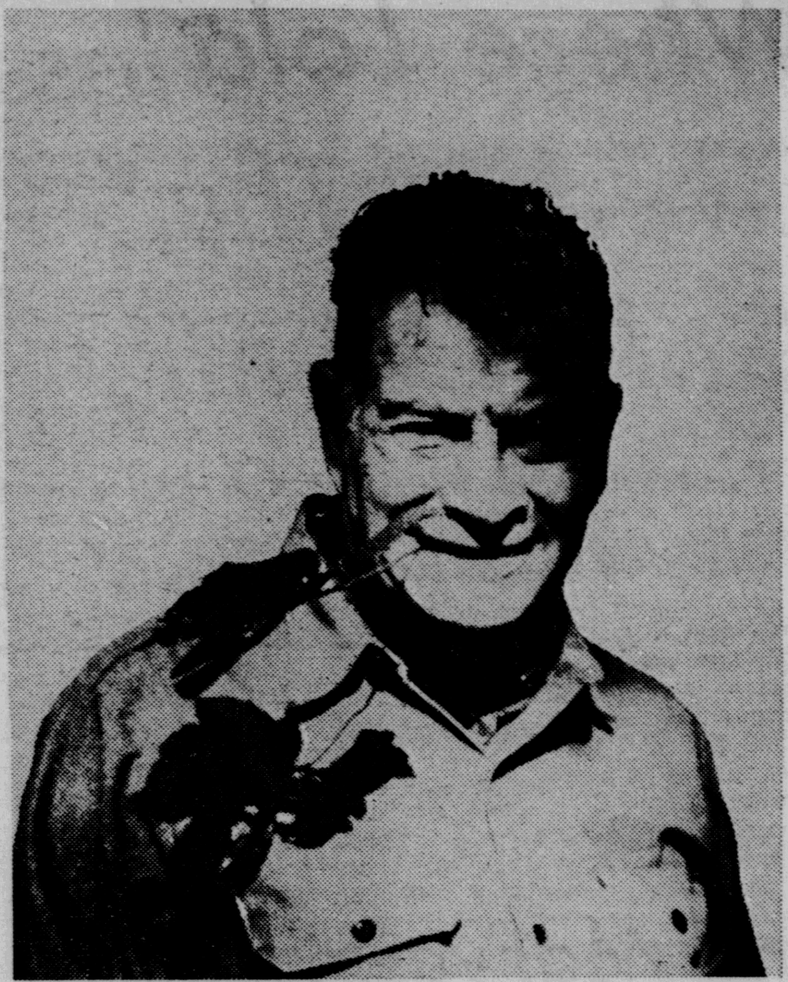
Yes, Man Can Survive Without The Supermarket



SOME OF OUR most delicious and most nutritious foods can be found growing in the wild, free for the picking, contends Euell Gibbons, author of "Stalking the Wild Asparagus" and now of "Stalking the Good Life."

By DON KEOWN

Through books, those of us without the opportunity or the courage to kick the habits and shackles of civilization can share, at least vicariously, the freedom and enjoyment of those who actually have made that big jump.

And publishers have rushed to satisfy that thirst.

"Stalking the Good Life" by Euell Gibbons and "An Ultimate Retreat" by Richard B. Erno are two books that fall within the same field, although quite different from each other.

Euell Gibbons is the naturalist who attracted wide attention and created no little controversy with his "Stalking the Wild Asparagus," a handbook on foraging for and preparing wild foods harvested from nature.

"Stalking the Good Life" is more of the same, a generally fascinating exposition of the wild plant leaves, stalks, herbs, tubers, fruits, berries, nuts, fish and shellfish that can be found in the woods, meadows and shores by the knowledgeable person and converted into not only nutritious but appetizing edibles.

Gibbons' enthusiasm for nature's bounty is infectious, and the reader soon finds himself caught up in the author's adventures as he deliberately places himself in locations where such foodstuffs would seem to be at a bare minimum — and then proves that survival away from the supermarket is a relatively simple matter, providing you have established the required friendly relationship with the outdoors.

Chapters on wild nuts, berries, herbal teas, the dill crock, seaweeds and fruits are particularly enticing. A chapter on wild health foods will intrigue the health food fan. And an exposition about tapping trees for their syrup opens up all kinds of engaging possibilities.

"I call on the youth of America to get those brilliant young minds to work on creative ideas for solving our pollution problems," he writes. "These problems will finally be solved, not by demonstrations, fights or name-calling. They will be solved by human ingenuity, applied with love, for love is a powerful form of pressure which few are prepared to resist. The solution to our ecological problems starts in your heart."

Fascinating as Gibbons' book is, we regard it with one major misgiving. It is quite plainly a collection of short articles written through the years, and reprinted here without too much editing. Thus the reader finds himself subjected to a great deal of needless repetition. One set of instructions on cooking dandelion would seem to suffice. It has always seemed to us that an author, in publishing such a compilation in book form, owes it to his readers to edit carefully and thoroughly, if not to rewrite totally.

Still, Euell Gibbons' "Love Affair With Nature" is the chronicle of a man who has reduced the man-and-nature relationship to the most basic level, nourishment, and who makes of that rapport a most pleasurable, even exciting experience — for himself and for his readers.

"An Ultimate Retreat" is also a pleasant reading experience, but a less extraordinary one than "Stalking the Good Life."

It is simply the account of one family's escape from urban pressures — periodically. Of how the Ernos acquired a cabin in Arizona's Mogollon Mountains, and of their first summer spent there, renewing a forgotten feeling for the wild things and the relics of earlier dwellers around them. Richard Erno is given to flights of soaring imagination and fancy rhetoric that sometimes come off and sometimes do not.

Erno concludes his amusing chronicle of that summer, thusly: "The world talks much of 'progress.' But progress, as we have been told many and many a time, is a two-edged sword — it cuts both ways. We are now learning how sharp the other edge can be.

"If the only choice left is between life in a state of nature and half-life in a state of pollution and fear, we'll take nature. The living isn't easy, but at least the life one lives is life, not death."

Still, the Ernos can flee city life only part of the year, and even then not escape the accoutrements of urban living completely. And even the Euell Gibbons who can get along almost totally away from civilization for periods of time can enjoy the accompanying and cherished solitude only so long as they remain relatively few in number. If they lure tens of thousands into joining them, they also create a new kind of congestion with many of the old disadvantages.

The real solution remains with those who answer Gibbons challenge, remain at home, and fight filth, noise, contamination and all the other man-created problems on the grounds where the battle must be won — where we live, and where most of us must continue to live.

"THERE'S LOVE All Day" is another of those Hallmark Editions books upon which the publisher has lavished the same care and taste he bestows upon his greeting cardsand the dramas he sponsors on television.

This small gem, priced at $2.50, is a collection of poems by the invalid California poet Kenneth Patchen as selected by Dee Danner Barwick from five of his books published between 1936 and 1968. The theme is love, joy and an exuberance for life that Patchen has always felt and expressed despite his atflictions and pain. "Religion Is That I Love You," one poem is entitled. And that just about summarizes the Patchen philosophy.

THE FAD for do-it-yourself reached something of a zenith with the recent publication of a book whose instructions covered the conducting of a "home-made" cremation.

Further evidence of the trend is the publication of "How to Do Your Own Divorce in California" by Nolo Press of Box 2147, Berkeley, 94702. The author is Charles E. Sherman and he advises at the outset: "Do not try to do your own divorce if your spouse will oppose it, nor where you have unresolved problems with child custody, etc."

Forms contained in the book can be used until July 1, 1971, after which a set of revised forms and instructions will be available from the publisher.

There is something peculiarly European, and not just in their location, about the novels of Nicolas Freeling.

Freeling's narrative techniques have been compared, with good reason, to those of Georges Simenon — a concern for the subleties of character, an introspective mood and a great deal of social philosophizing on the part of Inspector Van der Valk, his Dutch policeman.

This time a man is stabbed fatally in Amsterdam's marketplace, almost within eyesight of the inspector. He is an elderly gentleman of somewhat vague and erratic financial means, married to a much younger woman, and with three grown-up daughters living in Dublin.

It becomes apparent to Van der Valk that the answers he seeks are to be found in Dublin, and so reluctantly he goes there. But he must tread carefully, for his chief suspect is the young son of a prominent Irish politician. And one of the "lovely lady" daughters is a delicious temptress.

Freeling's newest novel gets off to a rather stumbling start, but soon picks up momentum. Like other Van der Balk yarn, it tends to move with herks and jerks, interrupted by the inspector's bouts of social and personal analysis, and yet curiously enriched by these pauses. The Dublin characters and atmosphere are excellent. And Freeling fans will enjoy themselves wholeheartedly, even if they do not regard "The Lovely Ladies" as quite up to par with his very best.

STAIN and SOIL RESISTANT, means dirt and liquid stains remain on the surface for a time so they may be blotted off.

Where Lola Lived In The Gold Country

Neglected House Once Sheltered Glamor Figure

The house stands on a quiet residential street in the Mother Lode town of Grass Valley, only a small sign and tourist brochures identify it as the home of the famed Lola Montez, who was once the most glamorous and influential woman of Europe and later the darling of thousands of entertainment-starved California miners.

The tourist literature does not mention, however, that the house is neglected and shamefully dilapidated, and that little provision is made for those who might want to tour it.

The clapboard siding — its paint long gone — weathers more each year. The old structure is settling crookedly on its foundations, and the original plantings in the yard are fighting a losing battle with time, neglect and weeds.

Despite the importance and colorful history of the house and its former occupant, there has been little done in the past decade or two to maintain or enhance it. The owner does not live in Grass Valley and does not answer queries about the house.

ONLY ONE person seems to have really cared about Lola Montez' home. He is Jens Blair, a Danish immigrant who for a number of years has lived nearby.

Blair's fascination with Lola Montez started in his childhood days in Europe. He maintained an interest in her throughout his life, and for the past 30 years has carried on a campaign to take care of her house and collect and preserve information about her life. Education And Vacation Merge In Mexico

This year, an anticipated record number of tourists and scholars will discover that the fine line between a formal education and a foreign vacation often disappears completely at summer schools in Mexico.

Where, one may ask, does the "tourist" end, and the "scholar" begin?

NOWADAYS, there is no easy answer, in line with the increasingly-accepted educational philosophy that "learning should be fun" and the long-accepted tourism truism that one of the most enjoyable aspects of foreign travel is its educational function.

Since 1921, when the famed National University in Mexico City first opened its summer school to foreign students, the lure of combining education with the glamor and excitement of a foreign vacation has played a growing role in Mexico's tourist industry.

In the interval, more than 50,00 North Americans have attended summer school at the National University alone, and it is estimated that several hundred thousand more have taken summer courses of some sort at the scores of highly-accredited universities, colleges, academies and a variety of other schools south of the border offering academic subjects as well as informal courses in Mexican arts, crafts and folklore.

LAST YEAR'S total exceeded 30,000, according to Mexicana Airlines, which does a brisk business transporting "scholar-tourists" to Mexico from its U.S. gateways in Los Angeles, Chicago, San Antonio and Miami.

Although teachers and college students desiring formal accreditation have traditionally provided the bulk of school-bound passengers, according to the airline, there is an increasing trend towards study in Mexico by vacationers of all ages and backgrounds, from children traveling with their parents to retired golden-agers.

The airline compiles a list of summer schools in Mexico each year based on data received from these schools in answer to queries sent out earlier in the year.

The 1971 summer report lists dates of courses, costs for tuition, room and board; a brief outline of major subjects offered, and the address of contacts for further information or registration applications at 17 schools.

ACCORDING TO information passed along by the airline this year, most summer school programs will combine recreation with study and include field trips to archaeological sites, excursions to nearby cities, and a wide range of social, cultural and sports activites.

For example, highly-accredited "Monterrey Tec," a member of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools, stresses the "learning can be fun" philosophy. Listed on its posters, alongside details about intensive study courses, are enticements such as: "Beautiful modern buildings and excellent facilites: 13 residence halls, air-conditioned library and dining rooms, computing center, TV center, two swimming pools, gymnasium, stadium . . . local touring, complete program of social and cultural activities."

Copies of the 1971 summer school report are available free on request from Mexicana Airlines at 275 Post Street, San Francisco, Calif. 94108.

This year, an anticipated record number of tourists and scholars will discover that the fine line between a formal education and a foreign vacation often disappears completely at summer schools in Mexico.

Where, one may ask, does the "tourist" end, and the "scholar" begin?

NOWADAYS, there is no easy answer, in line with the increasingly-accepted educational philosophy that "learning should be fun" and the long-accepted tourism truism that one of the most enjoyable aspects of foreign travel is its educational function.

Since 1921, when the famed National University in Mexico City first opened its summer school to foreign students, the lure of combining education with the glamor and excitement of a foreign vacation has played a growing role in Mexico's tourist industry.

In the interval, more than 50,00 North Americans have attended summer school at the National University alone, and it is estimated that several hundred thousand more have taken summer courses of some sort at the scores of highly-accredited universities, colleges, academies and a variety of other schools south of the border offering academic subjects as well as informal courses in Mexican arts, crafts and folklore.

LAST YEAR'S total exceeded 30,000, according to Mexicana Airlines, which does a brisk business transporting "scholar-tourists" to Mexico from its U.S. gateways in Los Angeles, Chicago, San Antonio and Miami.

Although teachers and college students desiring formal accreditation have traditionally provided the bulk of school-bound passengers, according to the airline, there is an increasing trend towards study in Mexico by vacationers of all ages and backgrounds, from children traveling with their parents to retired golden-agers.

The airline compiles a list of summer schools in Mexico each year based on data received from these schools in answer to queries sent out earlier in the year.

The 1971 summer report lists dates of courses, costs for tuition, room and board; a brief outline of major subjects offered, and the address of contacts for further information or registration applications at 17 schools.

ACCORDING TO information passed along by the airline this year, most summer school programs will combine recreation with study and include field trips to archaeological sites, excursions to nearby cities, and a wide range of social, cultural and sports activites.

For example, highly-accredited "Monterrey Tec," a member of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools, stresses the "learning can be fun" philosophy. Listed on its posters, alongside details about intensive study courses, are enticements such as: "Beautiful modern buildings and excellent facilites: 13 residence halls, air-conditioned library and dining rooms, computing center, TV center, two swimming pools, gymnasium, stadium . . . local touring, complete program of social and cultural activities."

Copies of the 1971 summer school report are available free on request from Mexicana Airlines at 275 Post Street, San Francisco, Calif. 94108.

Home That Lola Montez Loved Still Stands In Grass Valley

Blair did not come to California immediately. He had met two sisters in Salt Lake City, and determined almost at once that one of them was the girl who should become his bride.

ANXIOUS TO set aside a goodly amount of money for his marriage, he departed for Nome to try his luck at mining. Returning three years later to claim his bride, he learned that there had been a disastrous mix-up in names. He had been corresponding with one of the sisters, but it was the other with whom he had fallen in love and she was no longer available to him. Also, his draft notice was awaiting him.

Following a stint in the Army, Blair was discharged at the end of World War I. He continued a mixed career in the United States, which included a lengthy stint in the Hollywood film-making colony.

In the 1930s he came to Grass Valley with a film company which was shooting a Lola Montez episode, and he returned the following year to make his home there.

HE TURNED his hand to mining, as he had done in Alaska, but continued his interest in Lola Montez and in her home. He tried several times to purchase the house, but was never able to do so.

Eventually, he settled instead for a home of his own nearby. He moved in there, with an arrangement with the owner of the Lola Montez home to serve as caretaker. He worked faithfully over the years to maintain Lola's house, with limited funds and limited time.

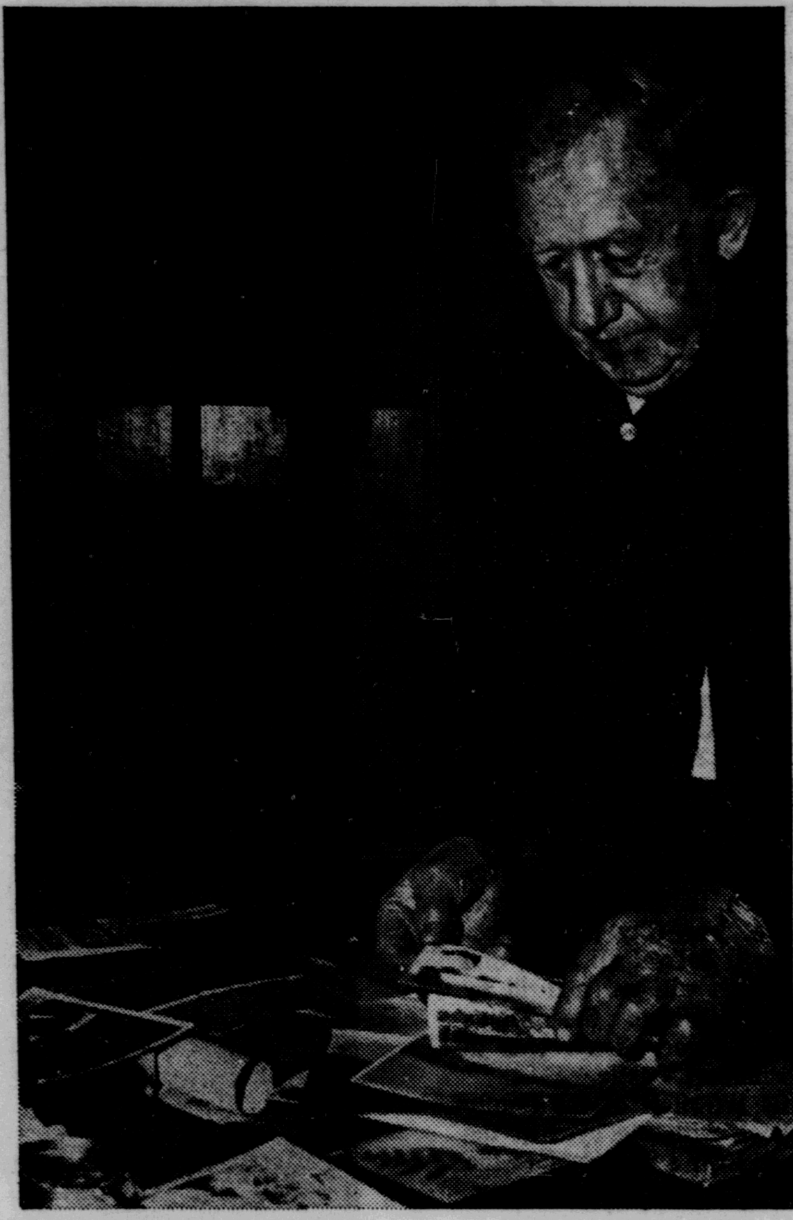
His dog Jack was Jens Blair's faithful companion until last fall, when death overtook the pet. In mid-winter Blair — discouraged over his long-continuing failure to obtain either ownership of Lola's house or adequate repair funds from the owner, and saddened by the death of his dog — became ill.

HE LEFT Grass Valley, to go to a veteran's hospital in Arizona. He has remained there through the winter, but friends have received word that he had hopes of being well enough to return to Grass Valley soon.

As mild spring weather in Grass Valley has brought the leaves back to the trees and the few remaining lilacs and roses in Lola's garden into bloom, there are good prospects that Jens Blair soon will be back at his accustomed place.

The picturesque old home he loves so much should have more care and restoration than Jens Blair is able to provide, but upon his return he will do the best he can.

And visitors to Grass Valley again have some one who is interested and knowledgeable to tell them the details of the adventurous, romantic life of Lola Montez.



JENS BLAIR, self-appointed caretaker of the Lola Montez home in Grass Valley, examines some of the memorabilia concerning the glamorous woman that he has collected. Temporarily confined to a veterans' hospital by ill health, Blair hopes to be back on the "job," caring for the old house, very soon.

Denmark Delights Entire Family

From Tots To Senior Citizens

From tots to teen-agers, from 20 years old to senior citizens, Denmark offers a rich variety of fun for all that can't be beaten anywhere.

It is hard to explain why, but one thing is certain; there is something in the air in Denmark that simply spells happy family vacation.

Let's start in wonderful Copenhagen, the lively gateway to Europe: The City and Harbor Tour will delight all ages, and youngsters will get a thrill by walking through the King's glamorous reception rooms at Christianborg Castle.

THE WOMEN of the family will look with big eyes at the Arts and Crafts Tour to the world famous workshops, where the artists create so many beautiful things for the homes. And there will be hot family discussions after the visits to the fascinating new Danish schools on the World of Tomorrow Tour.

But the best moments may be the afternoon refreshments at a sidewalk cafe, enjoying pulsating traffic of small cars and bicycle girls on their way home from work.

There may not be a dull moment for the vacationing family in Copenhagen but you'll soon realize that it's just as much fun to tour the fairytale country with its rolling green roads, romantic old fairytale inns and surprising mini-museums.

THE FERRY crossings between the islands are a chapter by themselves. First, to see the many small cars pouring into the gap of the big ferryboat, then to enjoy a good walk on the deck, entertained by the seagulls, while moving towards the next island.

For traveling families, it is a good idea to take advantage of the hotel-check system which makes it possible to have dinner, overnight stay, and breakfast at a nice country hotel for $8 per person, including tax and tips.

Speaking about economy, what about spending a week on a Danish farm for $6 a day including full board children half price. These farm vacations have become the big hit in Denmark today. It's reasonable, it's different and most of all, it's lots of fun! There is no hydromatic drive in the bathroom or soft music in the background anywhere on the farms but you'll enjoy the cows, the pigs, the good food, and the hospitable people and all the activities in the refreshing country air.

IT MIGHT BE most practical just to take demi-pension (breakfast and dinner) and then make excursions during the day — either to the beach or to some of Denmark's many historic towns, medieval castles, modern industries, open air museums or thousand-year-old village churches.

Or you may feel like taking a canoe trip down one of Denmark's charming peaceful rivers or rent a sail or motor boat and enjoy some of the 4,600 miles of scenic coastlines among 500 picturesque islands.

Or what about a ride in a 19th Century stagecoach drawn by horses through small villages and lovely forests of North Sealand, a perfect escape to the peaceful rural Denmark? You start the ride from a farm near Fredensborg, north of Copenhagen. Two to 20 passengers can take part in such an excursion.

BY THE WAY, have you heard that Denmark's youth hostels are now also open to motoring tourists? They are ideal for families who travel on a budget. Here the price for a room with running hot and cold water is 75 cents per person per night.

Remember, when you rent cars in Denmark, don't be afraid of renting one of the small cars. They are less expensive and move much easier through the fairytale towns than the big ones to which you are accustomed from home.

Especially for children there are summer camps, riding schools, sailing schools, yes, even a traffic school at Legoland (a true children's paradise of a miniature village in Jutland, packed with fun and entertainment.)

DON'T FORGET that there is a tourist office in practically every town in Denmark ready to help you get the most out of your vacation.

One of the great experiences that family members will have on their trip will be their visit to Tivoli. This fairytale-come-true garden has something for each and every one — symphonies in the beautiful concert hall, modern sounds from the lively discotheque, pantomimes and many other amusements, thousands and thousands of flowers, millions of colored lights, or the world famous Danish specialties served in all the different categories or restaurants — enough to talk about for many years to come.

Shopping may already be a family pastime at home, but whether it is or not, shopping in Copenhagen is certainly a very popular sort of entertainment, mainly because of all the beautiful Danish things famous the world over — especially silver, porcelain, furniture in distinctive modern design.

ONE OF DENMARK'S quaint country inns makes an ideal spot for an outdoor Danish luncheon, featuring the open-face sandwiches or any of the other tasty delicacies for which the Scandinavian land is famous.

Petunias Provide Months Of Color With Little Care

Garden Page

Petunias flower heavily over a long season, usually a minimum of three to four months.

The plants can be set out after danger of heavy frost has passed and they can also be planted much later, even into August, and still make a colorful show.

Petunias can be used in almost any sunny spot in the garden, large or small, where you want a bright splash of color. Medium or large beds or border plantings of one or two colors give the most striking effect.

PETUNIAS are one of the many annuals that can be set out now for spring and summer garden color. The variety here is the Candy Apple, a brilliant scarlet hybrid. And only about two dozen have been required to make an attractive border that compliments nicely the tree roses.

Ten plants will quickly make an eight to 12-foot border of color.

LARGE SINGLE varieties such as Candy Apple (bright red), Happiness (bright rose-pink), Mariner (deep blue) and Astro (red and white) are well suited to beds and borders. For showy effect at night, Glacier and Apollo (pure white) reflect even a small amount of light.

A new group of carnation-flowered doubles called the "Delights" produce a heavy crop of flowers in mass plantings.

Petunias also provide color in front of permanent shrubs. They are especially useful in new landscapes to fill in bare spots between small shrubs. Any spot a foot or more in diameter with at least a half-day of sun is sufficient.

CONTAINER gardening is becoming more popular all the time. Petunias are widely adapted to a large variety of planter boxes, tubs, urns and hanging baskets. The large fringed double varieties such as Bridal Bouquet (white) and Fanfare Mixture are best suited to containers or other areas where the individual flowers can be admired. Many petunias are becoming available in pots, already in good bloom, to achieve more immediate effect in containers and for late planting.

Petunias will grow well with minimum care even in poor soils. Fertilizer should be added to the soil when the plants are set in the garden. Peat moss or compost is also helpful, although not necessary. Soil in containers should be very porous so water flows through it easily.

TWO OR THREE light applications of fertilizer can be made during the summer.

Once the plants are established, they should be watered deeply at one to two-week intervals, depending on the weather. Excessive water and fertilizer, or too much shade, can reduce flowering. Of course, container plants must be watered and fertilized more often.

Petunias have practically no pest or disease problems except snails and slugs which will eat newly set out plants.

Some gardeners prune plants back in mid-season to encourage a heavier flush of bloom. Even without this grooming they perform better than almost all other annuals.

A BARROW FULL OF FLOWERS

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

✓While spring is a busy time for spraying in your garden, to combat the pests that are springing up there, or to prevent their appearance, choose the least potent and least lasting product that will accomplish the job you have to do, and follow the manufacturer's instructions carefully, particularly as to the amount applied

✓Keep the spent blossoms cut or plucked from the rose bushes that are blooming so profusely now.

✓Outdoor living season is upon us. Can your patio use a few potted plants or shrubs to make it a more attractive place for entertaining or relaxing? Dwarf citrus is one possibility.

✓If you haven't already done so, put in those bedding plants that will give your garden summer color.

JUST ABOUT the ultimate in versatility is exemplified by the handyman-built combination serving cart and table pictured above. You can, as Eileen O'Neill has done, load it in the kitchen with dishes and food, then push it to the place where dinner is to be served. Then lift the leaves, give it a twist, and you have a table that easily seats six for either indoor or outdoor feasts. It can, of course, be finished to harmonize with other furnishings. The table is made of plywood with the help of a full-size pattern. Simply trace the pattern on the wood, saw out the parts and then assemble the pieces. Even screw and bolt holes are located for you. For Combination Drop-Leaf Table and Serving Cart Pattern 163, send $1 to Steve Ellingson, San Rafael Independent-Journal Pattern Department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409. Add another 25 cents to speed your pattern via air mail.

The Hand Grinder Is Useful Tool Around The Home

These grinders, unlike other power drills, have been used for years by hobbyists, and come with a variety of cutting, grinding, drilling and polishing heads. They are available in most hardware and hobby stores.

According to Dremel Manufacturing Co., Racine, Wis., makers of hand grinders, jigsaws and other power tools, the list of household uses for the small hand grinder is almost endless.

FOLLOWING are some examples:

Sharpening blades on tools, lawn equipment, and kitchen utensils.

Removing rust and scale from tools, lawn equipment, gutters, etc.

Sanding warped drawers and cabinet doors so that they work smoothly.

DRILLING small holes to help repair children's toys and engraving identification on toys, tools and other metal equipment to discourage theft.

For the avid do-it-yourselfer, the hand grinder can be used to deburr the ends of saw-cut pipe and metal pieces. With the right attachments, hand grinders can be used for routing and as a small drill press. They can also be used to polish brass fixtures.

The hand grinders come in various sizes. Cost of a small grinder with an adequate set of accessories for the average household averages $34.95.

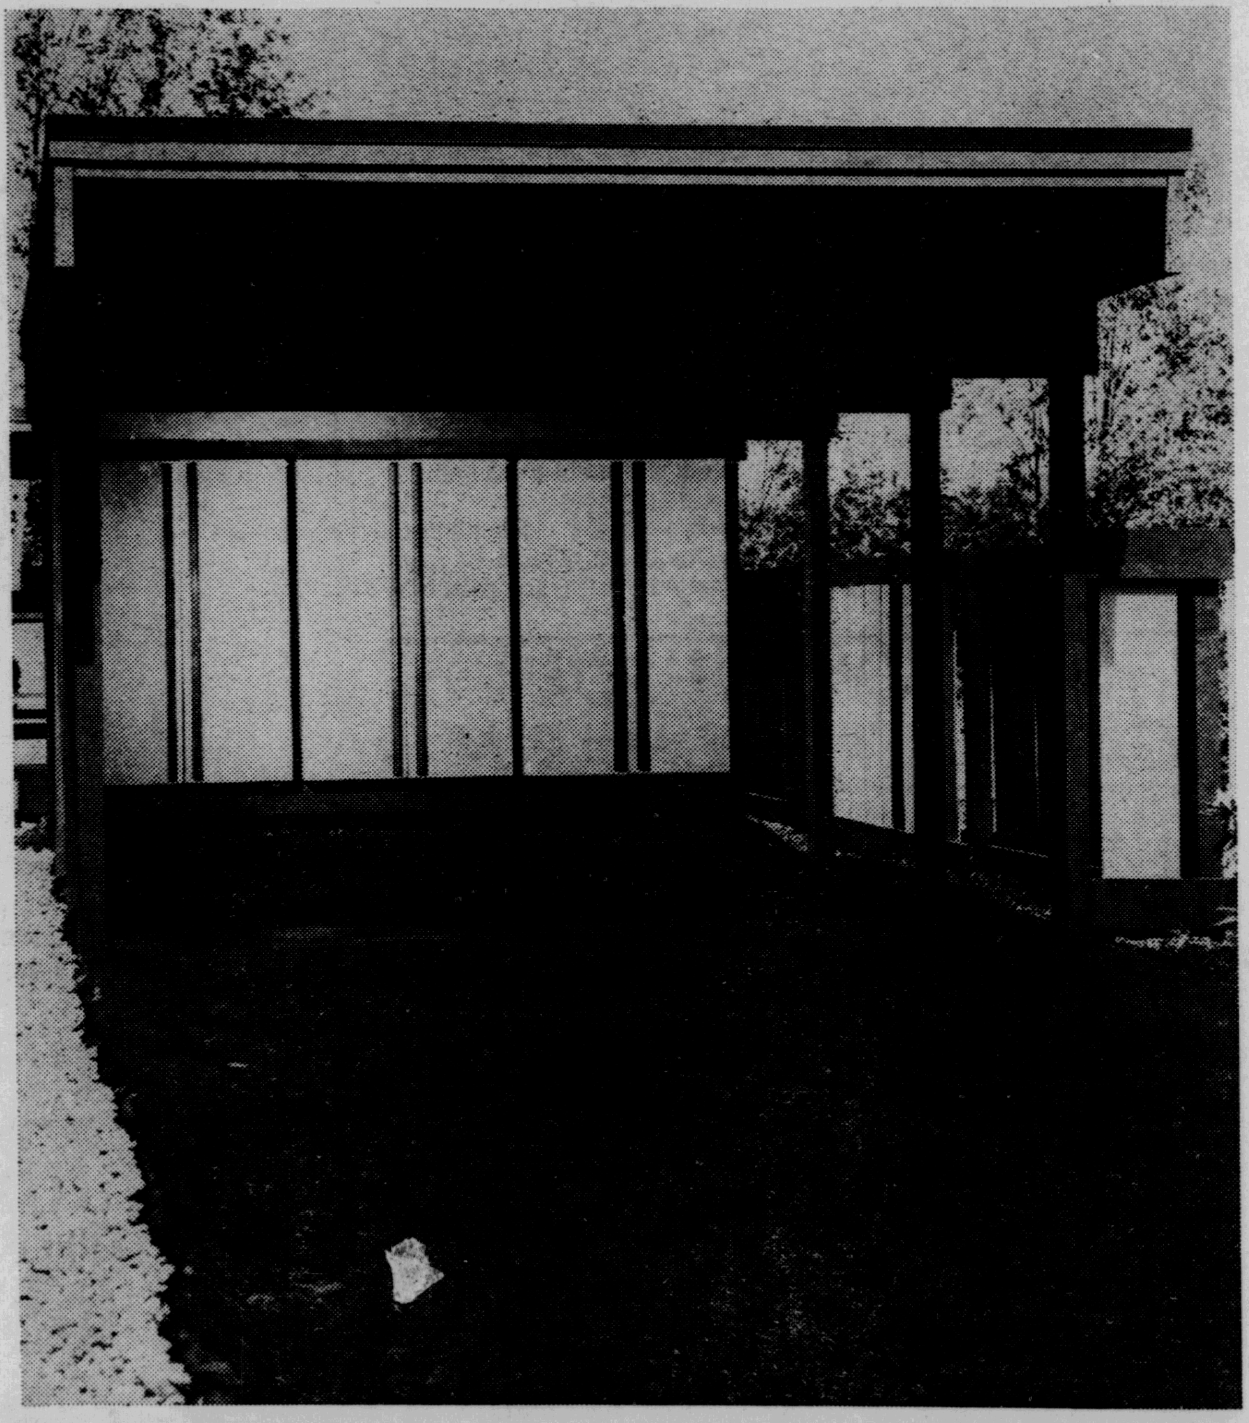
CARPORT WITH CABINETS



ANY WEEKEND CARPENTER, with the help of a plan, can build this handsome carport that will not only protect the family car, but also provide storage space for garden equipment. A durable and waterproof textured plywood enriches the exterior of the structure that houses storage cabinets six feet high. For the pattern, send 25 cents to American Plywood Association, 1119 A Street, Tacoma, Wash., 98401 and ask for Plan No. 70-641.

Organization Is Workshop Answer —

'A Place For Everything, Everything In Its Place'

Handyman's Pages

The quality of equipment and the care he takes of it.

Not for him the cheap bruss that's thrown away when the job is done.

It's the same for the professional carpenter, mechanic or electrician — he invests in the best tools and keeps them clean and in top condition.

THIS IS A good practice for the home handyman to follow. He doesn't need the most expensive equipment, since he won't be giving tools the same day-in, day-out rough wear, but he sould look for good quality.

As with most things, "cheap tools can be dear," since replacing saws that won't cut, hammers whose heads fly off, or pliers that fall apart means added expense rather than savings.

Once the home owner has good tools, he should protect his investment with tender, loving care, including proper storage. Tools should not be thrown together in a heap or dumped in a drawer. They will get scratched, dulled and often will get lost.

Organization — a place for everything and everything in its place — is the answer.

FOR FREQUENTLY — used tools, paint brushes, chisels, extension cords, saw blades and belts, and appliances such as sanders and drills a wall of perforated hardboard is the perfect solution.

Since there is an infinite variety of sturdy hooks and hangers for everything from staplers to shelves, a workshop wall covered with perforated hardboard becomes a spacesaving storage wall.

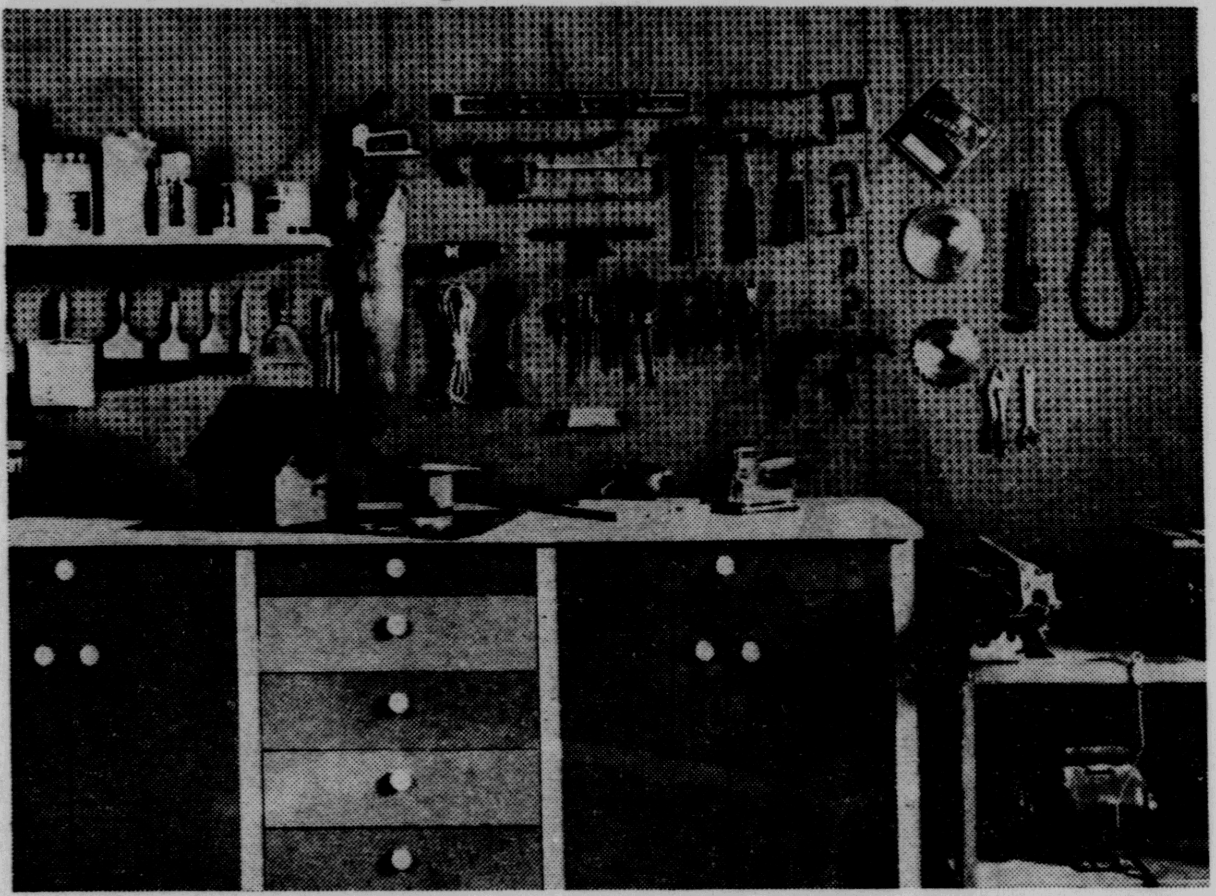
Objects hung there are easy to see and to reach. And they're easy to put back if you outline the object with a thick marker at its proper place on the panel.

PERFORATED hardboard comes in standard size panels. It's available unfinished or prefinished, perforated the full length or just to wainscot level.

Because hardboard panels are easy to cut and work, a storage wall can be installed by any handyman with basic wood-working techniques.

Woodwork First

When using flat latex paint on the walls and gloss or semigloss on the woodwork, paint the woodwork first, since it is easier to remove wet latex splatters and smears from a dried enamel than to remove an enamel from a dried latex.



PANELING OF perforated hardboard can organize your wall storage, safeguard your equipment and keep your workshop neat. Hooks and heavy duty fittings are available for the perforations.

TV Has Come A Long Way

It was 25 years ago this year that television first appeared in a few of the nation's living rooms.

Now, there are approximately 60 million U.S. homes equipped with sets. About one-third of them have two or more receivers.

Originally a neighborhood wonderment when a family purchased a 10-inch screen that flickered and faded, it now comes in color. About 22.6 million homes enjoy it in all its tints — and there are almost 30 million color sets in use.

A quarter of a century ago, there were about 5,000 sets. Those were black-and-white with relatively tiny viewing screens.

On Aug. 25, 1949, compatible, all-electronic color transmission was announced.

Reed On 'Mannix'

Robert Reed, star of "The Brady Bunch, will also play a recurring role next season as a police lieutenant in "Mannix."

ANTHONY QUINN plays an army deserter in 18th Century Mexico who finds himself committed to protecting the people of a small village from a gang of desperadoes in the motion picture, "Guns for San Sebastian," which will have its second television showing tonight at 8:30 o'clock on Channels 3 and 4. The movie is in color.

TV Has Come A Long Way

It was 25 years ago this year that television first appeared in a few of the nation's living rooms.

Now, there are approximately 60 million U.S. homes equipped with sets. About one-third of them have two or more receivers.

Originally a neighborhood wonderment when a family purchased a 10-inch screen that flickered and faded, it now comes in color. About 22.6 million homes enjoy it in all its tints — and there are almost 30 million color sets in use.

A quarter of a century ago, there were about 5,000 sets. Those were black-and-white with relatively tiny viewing screens.

On Aug. 25, 1949, compatible, all-electronic color transmission was announced.

Reed On 'Mannix'

Robert Reed, star of "The Brady Bunch, will also play a recurring role next season as a police lieutenant in "Mannix."

PRETTY Jacqueline Chidsey of The Golddiggers will perform with the other members of that dancing and singing group on the "23rd Annual Emmy Awards Show" to be colorcast Sunday at 10 p.m. on Channels 3 and 4. She holds one of the awards that will be presented during the evening's festivities.

AUDREY HEPBURN and Peter O'Toole co-star in the movie, "How to Steal a Million," a comedy and suspense picture about art forgery that will be shown in color Sunday at 9 p.m. on Channels 7 and 11.

The Snow Goose Passes Its Test

The snow goose, star of Fame's upcoming production of Paul Gallico's famous story "The Snow Goose" is being put through test flights at Los Angeles before the one-hour filmgoes on location in England.

On its first trial, the goose flew one quarter of a mile on cue and returned to its handler's shoulder at a whistle blast.

PRETTY Jacqueline Chidsey of The Golddiggers will perform with the other members of that dancing and singing group on the "23rd Annual Emmy Awards Show" to be colorcast Sunday at 10 p.m. on Channels 3 and 4. She holds one of the awards that will be presented during the evening's festivities.

AUDREY HEPBURN and Peter O'Toole co-star in the movie, "How to Steal a Million," a comedy and suspense picture about art forgery that will be shown in color Sunday at 9 p.m. on Channels 7 and 11.

The Snow Goose Passes Its Test

The snow goose, star of Fame's upcoming production of Paul Gallico's famous story "The Snow Goose" is being put through test flights at Los Angeles before the one-hour film-goes on location in England.

On its first trial, the goose flew one quarter of a mile on cue and returned to its handler's shoulder at a whistle blast.

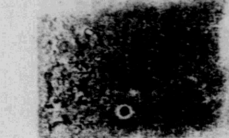
On The Stereo Scene



Recent Records: Dylan To Davis, Rock Opera To Aaron Copland

By JOHN SUNIER

The new rock opera "Jesus Christ Superstar" has already taken its place as one of the more serious efforts to combine many different musical approaches in one synergistic whole that transcends the usual pigeon-holing of musical styles.

The two-disc album is available on Decca DXSA-7206 in a handsome presentation with complete libretto.

Lyricist Tim Rice and composer Andrew Lloyd Webber have done an often stirring job of bringing the Passion story into modern concepts, both theological and musical. The excellent vocalists include Ian Gillan as Jesus, Murray Head as Judas and Yvonne Elliman as Mary Magdalene. The production, which includes a sizeable orchestra and even Moog, was done in Britain and is rich and exciting.

The form of "Jesus Christ Superstar" is much closer to what we define as opera than the last British effort in this direction, The Who's "Tommy."

The lyrics are light years from old King James but few will be shocked if they open themselves to this serious and devoted version.

SPEAKING OF The Who, their latest is "The Who Live at Leeds" (Decca DL 79175). The packaging is ingenious — a kraft paper folder with many different papers inserted which relate to the group's live appearances. These include such items as their contract to appear at Woodstock and an order for a case of smoke generators, the vital ingredient of the group's Grand Finale.

Who favorites such as "Magic Bus" and "My Generation" are heard in turned-on live performances as the Leeds Music Festival, but my favorite was their version of Mose Allison's "Young Man Blues."

Very good sound for "live" recording.

ONE OF THE most unusual LPs of music from India that I have heard is Decca DL 75100 "Jugalbandi Duet for Sitar and Sarangi."

Performers are Ghulamhusain Khan on sitar and Munir Khan on sarangi, which is an Indian stringed instrument played with a bow. The sarangi is usually used as an accompanying instrument to vocal performers, but can also be a solo instrument in its own right.

Jugalbandi is a strict form of duet, in this case featuring the sitar playing in vocal style with the sarangi improvising variations a split second behind the sitar. This is the first recording ever made of this combination and is tremendously exciting — as much as the sitar-violin improvisations of Ravi Shankar and Yehudi Menuhin. Tabla and drone accompaniment round out the performance of the three short ragas on this album, recorded in superb stereo in Indore, India.

BOB DYLAN has either copped out on us and gone soft or has entered an exciting new phase, depending on who one reads or talks of today.

His latest "New Morning" (Columbia KC 30290) is full of beautiful harmonies, smooth vocal treatments, soothing sounds and cheerful lyrics that certainly show a new side of Dylan. Though personally I still prefer the "Highway 66 Revisited" Dylan, I found the relaxed countrified sounds of the title tune, "One More Weekend," "If Not for You" and all the others a thoroughly enjoyable half-hour or so.

The trend away from the having-it-as-bad to the having-it-as-good should be encouraged — we can't be down-in-the-mouth all the time. Dylan shows us the way; let's get into agreement with him.

MILES DAVIS is another superb artist who has entered a new phase musically.

His double-disc album illustrates it in greatest depth with scintillating live performance recordings: "Miles Davis at Fillmore" (Columbia G 30038). The four 20- to 30-minute tracks are titled merely "Wednesday Miles, Thursday Miles, Friday Miles and Saturday Miles." Standout members of the present group are Chick Corea on electric piano, Steve Grossman on soprano sax, Keith Jarrett on organ and Jack DeJohnette on drums.

Each record side is quite different from the rest. Categorization is absolutely impossible — Miles' new music encompasses everything: classical, avant-garde, rock, jazz. And never does it fail to swing. Those of us with catholic tastes have given the avant-est garde styles of both classical and jazz music plenty of chance to move us and all too frequently have remained unmoved. A frequent come-back from the pathbreakers is that one must study and understand the new music forwards and backwards in order to get anything out of it.

Well, Miles needs no analysis or essays — just an open ear. It's far out, but it works. Try it.

A FINE ALBUM of chamber works by Aaron Copland, since Stravinsky's recent death our leading living composer, is to be heard on Columbia M 30376. This was previously released on the CBS label, now defunct.

The "Sextet for Clarinet, Piano and String Quartet" is a chamber arrangement of his rather experimental "Short Symphony" of 1933. It is full of unusual rhythmic complexities.

The "Quartet for Piano and Strings" is the more communicative Copland, with familiar open harmonies and that so-called "American" sound. The third work is "Vitebsk," a trio based on Jewish themes, for violin, cello and piano.

Copland himself is the pianist in all these performances, and the string quartet is the Juilliard (who by the way have an excellent new album of the Opus 18 Beethoven String Quartets on Columbia M3 30084).

On The Stereo Scene

By JOHN SUNIER

The new rock opera "Jesus Christ Superstar" has already taken its place as one of the more serious efforts to combine many different musical approaches in one synergistic whole that transcends the usual pigeon-holing of musical styles.

The two-disc album is available on Decca DXSA-7206 in a handsome presentation with complete libretto.

Lyricist Tim Rice and composer Andrew Lloyd Webber have done an often stirring job of bringing the Passion story into modern concepts, both theological and musical. The excellent vocalists include Ian Gillan as Jesus, Murray Head as Judas and Yvonne Elliman as Mary Magdalene. The production, which includes a sizeable orchestra and even Moog, was done in Britain and is rich and exciting.

The form of "Jesus Christ Superstar" is much closer to what we define as opera than the last British effort in this direction, The Who's "Tommy."

The lyrics are light years from old King James but few will be shocked if they open themselves to this serious and devoted version.

SPEAKING OF The Who, their latest is "The Who Live at Leeds" (Decca DL 79175). The packaging is ingenious — a kraft paper folder with many different papers inserted which relate to the group's live appearances. These include such items as their contract to appear at Woodstock and an order for a case of smoke generators, the vital ingredient of the group's Grand Finale.

Who favorites such as "Magic Bus" and "My Generation" are heard in turned-on live performances as the Leeds Music Festival, but my favorite was their version of Mose Allison's "Young Man Blues."

Very good sound for "live" recording.

ONE OF THE most unusual LPs of music from India that I have heard is Decca DL 75100 "Jugalbandi Duet for Sitar and Sarangi."

Performers are Ghulamhusain Khan on sitar and Munir Khan on sarangi, which is an Indian stringed instrument played with a bow. The sarangi is usually used as an accompanying instrument to vocal performers, but can also be a solo instrument in its own right.

Jugalbandi is a strict form of duet, in this case featuring the sitar playing in vocal style with the sarangi improvising variations a split second behind the sitar. This is the first recording ever made of this combination and is tremendously exciting — as much as the sitar-violin improvisations of Ravi Shankar and Yehudi Menuhin. Tabla and drone accompaniment round out the performance of the three short ragas on this album, recorded in superb stereo in Indore, India.

BOB DYLAN has either copped out on us and gone soft or has entered an exciting new phase, depending on who one reads or talks of today.

His latest "New Morning" (Columbia KC 30290) is full of beautiful harmonies, smooth vocal treatments, soothing sounds and cheerful lyrics that certainly show a new side of Dylan. Though personally I still prefer the "Highway 66 Revisited" Dylan, I found the relaxed countrified sounds of the title tune, "One More Weekend," "If Not for You" and all the others a thoroughly enjoyable half-hour or so.

The trend away from the having-it-as-bad to the having-it-as-good should be encouraged — we can't be down-in-the-mouth all the time. Dylan shows us the way; let's get into agreement with him.

MILES DAVIS is another superb artist who has entered a new phase musically.

His double-disc album illustrates it in greatest depth with scintillating live performance recordings: "Miles Davis at Fillmore" (Columbia G 30038). The four 20- to 30-minute tracks are titled merely "Wednesday Miles, Thursday Miles, Friday Miles and Saturday Miles." Standout members of the present group are Chick Corea on electric piano, Steve Grossman on soprano sax, Keith Jarrett on organ and Jack DeJohnette on drums.

Each record side is quite different from the rest. Categorization is absolutely impossible — Miles' new music encompasses everything: classical, avant-garde, rock, jazz. And never does it fail to swing. Those of us with catholic tastes have given the avant-est garde styles of both classical and jazz music plenty of chance to move us and all too frequently have remained unmoved. A frequent come-back from the pathbreakers is that one must study and understand the new music forwards and backwards in order to get anything out of it.

Well, Miles needs no analysis or essays — just an open ear. It's far out, but it works. Try it.

A FINE ALBUM of chamber works by Aaron Copland, since Stravinsky's recent death our leading living composer, is to be heard on Columbia M 30376. This was previously released on the CBS label, now defunct.

The "Sextet for Clarinet, Piano and String Quartet" is a chamber arrangement of his rather experimental "Short Symphony" of 1933. It is full of unusual rhythmic complexities.

The "Quartet for Piano and Strings" is the more communicative Copland, with familiar open harmonies and that so-called "American" sound. The third work is "Vitebsk," a trio based on Jewish themes, for violin, cello and piano.

Copland himself is the pianist in all these performances, and the string quartet is the Juilliard (who by the way have an excellent new album of the Opus 18 Beethoven String Quartets on Columbia M3 30084).

IF YOU'D like to pick money off a tree, you'll have a circus at our storewide "Well, that's funny" Sale. Young Bros. just can't give things away at ridiculous prices for very long, so our Sale is for 9 Hours only - Saturday at Young Bros. of Novato.

A NICE young couple wanted a decorator chair but they wanted it in a black, green and white print. We ordered it for them. When it came they refused to buy it. The boss said "That's Funny", That's what they ordered and wanted.
It's a fine long wearing fabric and a very comfortable chair - so now you can have this chair for only $77.00 It was $179.95

IT REMINDED us of a couple of sofas back in the corner of the store that most people wouldn't want in a living room. One of our salesmen said "Nobody wants them". The buyer said, "That's funny". One is covered in a heavy Vectra plaid with loose pillow backs. Another sofa is covered in an orange and green quilted fabric. An individualist with gumption to be different will like one. One was $379.95 NOW $239.95. The other was $299.95 NOW $179.95. Terrific buys for a couple of individualists.

THAT started us going through Young Bros. Furniture stores and our warehouses. Our buyer looked sheepish when we found a Spanish 7 piece set that has stuck with us like glue. It is an oval table with 3 leaves, 4 side chairs and 2 arm chairs in a rich and warm pecan wood. Was $475.00 NOW A MEASLY - $349.95. Another Spanish set with large trestle table with three 12" leaves, 4 side chairs and 2 arm chairs, carved back chairs with green velvet seats and a beautiful china. Original price $775.00 NOW $599.95.

YOU KNOW your taste. Your neighbor knows hers. What you don't want, she's happy to pay. $89.95 for a glass top cocktail table with a beautiful gold iron base that's worth $119.95 . . . or a beautiful tilt down desk from Drexel in a rich pecan wood for ONLY $250.00. Was $500.00 . . . or beautiful decorator chairs with skirt and reversible seat cushions in three colors. Original price $129.95. NOW $65.00

WE WERE selecting recliners to mark down. A woman said, "Is that recliner on sale? I want two." We said, "You can have three. We can't understand why this big, man-size recliner with deep down comfort hasn't sold." She said, "That's funny. It's just what my husband and I want. Sorry, we only need two." She got hers. There's one in black and white tweed with Vinyl trim that was $109.95. Another carload purchase at $75.00. We found some other Vinyl recliners that adjust to 3 positions. These were very relaxing at $89.95. You can rob us of one for $59.95.

IT'S FUNNY how you get attached to a piece of furniture. We've had a sleep-sofa that's been ours too long. It seats three - will sleep two on a wide mattress. Looks smart in a rich brown

YOUNG BROS.

NOVATO
HWY 101 AT OLIVE

9 HOUR SALE

SATURDAY ONLY 9 AM TO 6 PM
at YOUNG BROS. of Novato

SPECIAL PRICES FOR MOTHER'S DAY

(Don't read this ad unless you're crazy for bargains!)

IF YOU'D like to pick money off a tree, you'll have a circus at our storewide "Well, that's funny" Sale. Young Bros. just can't give things away at ridiculous prices for very long, so our Sale is for 9 Hours only - Saturday at Young Bros. of Novato.

YOU'LL SAVE 30% to 50% Saturday on a grand assortment of home furnishings, TVs and Appliances at Young Bros. If you can't make it, well - that's funny - because you'll miss the buys of a lifetime Saturday! Shop 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

A NICE young couple wanted a decorator chair but they wanted it in a black, green and white print. We ordered it for them. When it came they refused to buy it. The boss said "That's Funny", That's what they ordered and wanted.
It's a fine long wearing fabric and a very comfortable chair - so now you can have this chair for only $77.00 It was $179.95

IT REMINDED us of a couple of sofas back in the corner of the store that most people wouldn't want in a living room. One of our salesmen said "Nobody wants them". The buyer said, "That's funny". One is covered in a heavy Vectra plaid with loose pillow backs. Another sofa is covered in an orange and green quilted fabric. An individualist with gumption to be different will like one. One was $379.95 NOW $239.95. The other was $299.95 NOW $179.95. Terrific buys for a couple of individualists.

THAT started us going through Young Bros. Furniture stores and our warehouses. Our buyer looked sheepish when we found a Spanish 7 piece set that has stuck with us like glue. It is an oval table with 3 leaves, 4 side chairs and 2 arm chairs in a rich and warm pecan wood. Was $475.00 NOW A MEASLY - $349.95. Another Spanish set with large trestle table with three 12" leaves, 4 side chairs and 2 arm chairs, carved back chairs with green velvet seats and a beautiful china. Original price $775.00 NOW $599.95.

YOU KNOW your taste. Your neighbor knows hers. What you don't want, she's happy to pay. $89.95 for a glass top cocktail table with a beautiful gold iron base that's worth $119.95 . . . or a beautiful tilt down desk from Drexel in a rich pecan wood for ONLY $250.00. Was $500.00 . . . or beautiful decorator chairs with skirt and reversible seat cushions in three colors. Original price $129.95. NOW $65.00

WE WERE selecting recliners to mark down. A woman said, "Is that recliner on sale? I want two." We said, "You can have three. We can't understand why this big, man-size recliner with deep down comfort hasn't sold." She said, "That's funny. It's just what my husband and I want. Sorry, we only need two." She got hers. There's one in black and white tweed with Vinyl trim that was $109.95. Another carload purchase at $75.00. We found some other Vinyl recliners that adjust to 3 positions. These were very relaxing at $89.95. You can rob us of one for $59.95.

IT'S FUNNY how you get attached to a piece of furniture. We've had a sleep-sofa that's been ours too long. It seats three - will sleep two on a wide mattress. Looks smart in a rich brown tweed. It's been hanging around at $249.95. IT'S YOURS FOR $175.00. More old friends are corner groups - 2 boxes - 2 mattresses - 2 coverletts - 2 bolsters and a corner table with Formica top. Three colors to choose from. Each make twin beds, and were $239.95. HAVE A 9 PC. SET FOR ONLY $179.95.

TASTE is funny. We thought a dinette with walnut tone Formica 35 x 47 x 71 table and 8 chairs with green tone on tone Vinyl was a smart 9 pc. set for $199.95. It can tickle your taste buds for ONLY $119.95. Another oddball is a round Kroehler game table only with Formica top. Worth $149.95 NOW $75.00. If it sounds dull spark it with a red swivel bean bag $119.95. NOW $59.95. We have a wild collection of pictures, plaques and mirrors were $19.95 to $179.95. NOW 30% OFF. Lamps that started out as matched pairs are singles and UP TO 40% OFF the usual $39.95 to $99.95.

SOME WOMEN have funny ideas about appliances. They think they should be WHITE. That's why a Philco 15 cubic foot custom deluxe refrigerator worth $319.95 is a super-buy at $259.95 - if you like green or copper. If you won't settle for anything but GOLD we've got a General Electric No-Frost 16 cu. ft. refrigerator-freezer, with bottom freezer that was $359.95. IT'S A DAZZLING BARGAIN AT $288. We think women are funny; but some of our warehouse men are hilarious. Imagine a 11 cu. ft. refrigerator that regularly sells for $199.95 for only $139.95 in green. The Simmons sleep sets they covered up have quilt top mattress and box spring. Each 2 pc. set should have sold for $129.95. FOR $88, A SET is the best buy since hay was 27¢ a bale.

ALMOST FORGOT to mention an RCA stereo console. A husband said, "We'll buy". His wife vetoed him. The man had 'sound' judgment. This set has 50 watts with 100 peak watts and 6 speakers in a rich Spanish oak wood. Well worth $499.95. HAVE IT FOR $349.95. You can listen to it stretched out on a Kroehler sofa and love seat in a rich gold and beige quilted fabric marked down from $520.00 to $399.95 FOR BOTH PIECES.

THERE ARE TOO MANY bargains at Young Bros. to mention here. Come, see them Saturday. You'll find them wearing big tags with small prices. Come prepared to save money as easy as picking greenbacks off a tree. Grab off some bargains this Saturday at Young Bros. You won't think the savings of 30% to 50% are "funny".

TV NOTES

By JACK GAVER

The first new episodes of "Gunsmoke" on CBS next fall will have Pat Hingle playing the Dodge City doctor, filling in for veteran Milburn Stone, who recently underwent heart surgery. Stone is scheduled to return to the series, but he must have a long period of convalescence, and the program's 1971-72 product will be before the cameras well before he is ready.

Danny Thomas, whose return in a weekly series for ABC lasted only for the 1970-71 season, will do two one-hour variety specials for that network during 1971-72.

ABC's 1971 telecasts of National College Athletic Association football games begin Sept. 11 with the Grambling-Morgan State contest in New York City. There will be a total of 36 games, one more than in 1970. Twelve will be telecast nationally, and 24 will be on a regional basis. The opening game and two others will be aired at night.

Better have two sets in the house Sept. 11 because the night football game mentioned above will conflict part of the evening with the NBC telecast of the finals of the Miss America Pageant at Atlantic City. It goes on the air at 10 p.m. A break for football widows — if a second set is available.

Real Street Gangs For Movie Rumble

By DOUG ANDERSON

Don Murray faced that problem in making the picture "The Cross and the Switchblade" in the Manhattan and Brooklyn slums where the film's real-life hero, Rev. David Wilkerson, does his work.

Already established as an actor and writer, Murray made his debut as a director on this picture with Pat Boone as the star. Murray had written, produced and starred in "The Hoodlum Priest," a similar story, and did not want to seem to be repeating himself.

Wilkerson, who wrote the book on which the picture is based, founded a center for the rehabilitation of street kids. It is this achievement that the picture records.

"WE DIDN'T use actors for the street gangs," Murray said. "We went to the Youth Authority and got real streetgang kids for the two gangs required by the script. Then the problem became one of getting a realistic fight on film without anyone really getting hurt."

He began by pairing off his teen-age warriors, assigning each one a specific opponent to fight. Then he got them all together.

"There are rules for acting, just as for anything else," Murray told them. "In basketball, you can't just tuck the ball under your arm and run down the court. You have to dribble.

"When you fight for the camera, you have to make it look good without hurting the other guy. So if the fellow you're fighting gets hurt, we'll know you're a lousy actor."

THE SYSTEM worked. Except for a couple of accidental falls, there were no injuries and no trouble — until it was time to shoot a scene in which the two gangs join forces to fight helmeted riot police who had them cornered in an alley.

The "policemen" were actors, but their costumes were realistic. When the gangs saw the "cops" closing in on them, their reactions were very convincing.

"Fortunately, their 'weapons' — clubs and bicycle chains — were plastic and they couldn't really injure anybody, but that doesn't mean they didn't hurt," Murray said.

"It was a terrific fight. When I had what I wanted, I called out, 'Okay, fellow, that's great. Cut! . . . Cut!! . . . Cut!!!'

"Eventually, I had to go in there and pull them apart. We got that fight in one take."

TV NOTES

By JACK GAVER

The first new episodes of "Gunsmoke" on CBS next fall will have Pat Hingle playing the Dodge City doctor, filling in for veteran Milburn Stone, who recently underwent heart surgery. Stone is scheduled to return to the series, but he must have a long period of convalescence, and the program's 1971-72 product will be before the cameras well before he is ready.

Danny Thomas, whose return in a weekly series for ABC lasted only for the 1970-71 season, will do two one-hour variety specials for that network during 1971-72.

ABC's 1971 telecasts of National College Athletic Association football games begin Sept. 11 with the Grambling-Morgan State contest in New York City. There will be a total of 36 games, one more than in 1970. Twelve will be telecast nationally, and 24 will be on a regional basis. The opening game and two others will be aired at night.

Better have two sets in the house Sept. 11 because the night football game mentioned above will conflict part of the evening with the NBC telecast of the finals of the Miss America Pageant at Atlantic City. It goes on the air at 10 p.m. A break for football widows — if a second set is available.

Real Street Gangs For Movie Rumble

By DOUG ANDERSON

Don Murray faced that problem in making the picture "The Cross and the Switchblade" in the Manhattan and Brooklyn slums where the film's real-life hero, Rev. David Wilkerson, does his work.

Already established as an actor and writer, Murray made his debut as a director on this picture with Pat Boone as the star. Murray had written, produced and starred in "The Hoodlum Priest," a similar story, and did not want to seem to be repeating himself.

Wilkerson, who wrote the book on which the picture is based, founded a center for the rehabilitation of street kids. It is this achievement that the picture records.

"WE DIDN'T use actors for the street gangs," Murray said. "We went to the Youth Authority and got real streetgang kids for the two gangs required by the script. Then the problem became one of getting a realistic fight on film without anyone really getting hurt."

He began by pairing off his teen-age warriors, assigning each one a specific opponent to fight. Then he got them all together.

"There are rules for acting, just as for anything else," Murray told them. "In basketball, you can't just tuck the ball under your arm and run down the court. You have to dribble.

"When you fight for the camera, you have to make it look good without hurting the other guy. So if the fellow you're fighting gets hurt, we'll know you're a lousy actor."

THE SYSTEM worked. Except for a couple of accidental falls, there were no injuries and no trouble — until it was time to shoot a scene in which the two gangs join forces to fight helmeted riot police who had them cornered in an alley.

The "policemen" were actors, but their costumes were realistic. When the gangs saw the "cops" closing in on them, their reactions were very convincing.

"Fortunately, their 'weapons' — clubs and bicycle chains — were plastic and they couldn't really injure anybody, but that doesn't mean they didn't hurt," Murray said.

"It was a terrific fight. When I had what I wanted, I called out, 'Okay, fellow, that's great. Cut! . . . Cut!! . . . Cut!!!'

"Eventually, I had to go in there and pull them apart. We got that fight in one take."

TRIBUTE TO A MOTHER

With your beautiful silver hair,
With your pink peaches and cream complexion,
With your sparkling brown eyes—
But yet,
Your sweetness and goodness
Overpower even your beauty;
Your, oh, so thoughtful ways,
Your kind tenderness that
Comes from your heart—
I do believe that no one
Was ever as fortunate as I,
To have such a wonderful
Woman for my mother.

NOVATO — LOIS LOUELLE CLINE

Red Skelton says...
"I bought the BALDWIN WonderChord just for fun."

Red gets a kick out of playing the WonderChord with just one finger. "I can do more tricks with WonderChord than a monkey can with a yard of rope," is the way he puts it.
You may not become a television star, but you'll be a big hit in your living room.

Soviets Continue Space Feats With Eight Launchings

Cosmos Sputniks Soar Beyond Orbital Track Of Space Station

MOSCOW (UPI)—The Soviet Union hurled eight unmanned sputniks high into earth orbit on a single rocket yesterday in a record equalling shotgun launch, the Tass news agency said today.

The Cosmos sputniks soared far beyond the orbital track the Soviets have been using in the Soyuz- Salute space station project and popped into orbit about 900 miles up.

There they joined eight other sputniks, also launched aboard one rocket in April 1970, in what the Soviets describe only as "exploration of outer space."

As usual, Tass did not say exactly what mission was involved. Western intelligence theorized the Cosmos craft include everything from orbiting bombs and spy satellites to weather watchers and communications stations.

"On May 7, eight satellites of the Cosmos series were launched in the Soviet Union, all aboard one booster rocket," Tass said.

Meanwhile U.S. space agency officials set their sights on Mars and the moon today, readying a television robot for launch tonight from Cape Kenney and the moving of the Apollo 15 spaceship to its rocket flight to the moon in July.

Western scientific sources in Moscow said it appeared the 16 high-flying sputniks would be too far out in space to function efficiently as orbital bombs, which are designed to fire nuclear missiles on earth at an electronic signal.

The also said the angle of orbit to the equator was so sharp—74 degrees—that it put the sputniks on the margin of what is considered effective for spy satellites.

The sources said, however, there could be military lessons to be drawn from the strength of the rocket used to life the eight craft aloft—probably a version of the SS-9 intercontinental ballistic missile.

"If it can carry eight sputniks, it can carry eight something elses," the source said.

The sputniks launched Friday were designated Cosmos 411 to 418, Tass said. Those launched a year ago were designated Cosmos 336 to 343.

Exact dimensions of orbit for the new sputniks, as for the old, were 845 to 918 miles above earth at an angle of 74.5 degrees to the equator. One orbit took 115 minutes.

Tito Sets Purge Of His Party

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia — President Tito announced today his regime would carry out purges within the Communist party leadership in the near future. He warned enemies both at home and abroad he has a loaded "rifle" for them.

Tito, addressing the closing session of the four-day congress of Yugoslav "self-managers" said, "We must reorganize the Communist Party and all those who do not deserve being its members should go out from it.

"We shall have a party conference very soon to make order within the party leadership," Tito said. The 280-member conference — scheduled to meet at least once annually — is the highest body of the party between two congresses being held every four years.

The congress of self-managers today approved a resolution demanding that Tito, who turns 79 May 25, be elected President of Yugoslavia for life.

Tito urged some 2,300 delegates from factories, firms and institutions throughout the country to "strengthen self-management as the system on which socialist Yugoslavia is based." In June 1950, the Yugoslav Federal Parliament passed a law on self-management giving workers the decision-taking and profit-sharing rights.

"Outside Yugoslavia and here at home some people say everything will be just as before, Tito only threatens, its an empty rifle," Tito told the congress. "No, this time it will not be an empty rifle, it is loaded, this time we have a lot of ammunition. You should be convinced we shall know how to prevent those who trouble our socialism."

"There are opponents, enemies of our system, inside and outside enemies who oppose our self-managing system. There can be no democracy for them," he said to deafening ovation.

Referring to a Communist party presidium session held in the seculsion of the northern Adriatic Brioni Island April 28-30, Tito said, "We have not revealed everything we discussed at the session. "There was sharp discussion, but finally we reached agreement."

The Brioni meeting of top Communist leaders discussed the serious political and economic situation in which this multinational country finds itself.

It's an ordinary spanner wrench but for Corte Madera fireman Stanley Saulenas it works the same magic in gaining the attention of about 70 kindergarteners from San Francisco. The youngsters, students at Commodore Stockton School, were brought to the fire house yesterday by their teacher, Altamyra Thompson of Corte Madera. The visit was also a test run of the open house planned today by the department, as well as others in Marin County, in recognition of Fire Service Recognition Day.

Withdrawal Of Dollar Help Asked

BRUSSELS (UPI) — West Germany urged its five partners in the European Common Market today to stop supporting the U.S. dollar under speculative pressure and to float all their currencies along with the Deutschmark.

West German Economics Minister Karl Schiller, meeting with his Common Market counterparts in the Charlemagne Building, said the currencies should be allowed to find their own natural level against the dollar.

Economics and finance ministers of West Germany, France, Italy, the Netherlands, Belgium and Luxemburg met to decide whether to let the German mark float free, as the West Germans are reported to be urging, or to officially set new rates that would in effect devalue the dollar, as the French are demanding.

While the argument raged, American tourists who found themselves having trouble cashing their greenbacks and travelers' checks when when the storm broke last Wednesday were finding the going much easier today—though sometimes more expensive.

Some travelers in West Germany were able to trade their dollars freely for Deutschmarks—but at a more costly rate. Before last Wednesday a dollar would buy 3.66 marks; in some places today it would buy only 3.55 marks or less.

The traditionally polite Spaniards, according to reports from the Costa del Sol along the Mediterranean, were accepting dollars and travelers' checks at the old official rate— but only in limited amounts. They did not specify what the limit was.

When the dollar dropped it reflected the increasing U.S. balance of trade, now standing at more than $10 billion, as well as doubts of foreign investors about the condition of the American economy in the light of unemployment and the Vietnam war.

Viet Cong Breaks The Buddha Truce

SAIGON (UPI)—Communist troops ambushed South Vietnamese infantrymen and detonated a remote-controlled mine against American paratroopers today during a brief truce announced by both sides in the Vietnam War in honor of Buddha's birthday, the U.S. command said.

Two Americans were killed and three wounded at 1:30 p.m. Saigon time—six and a half hours after the Viet Cong said its truce would start—when a mine detonated by radio signal went off while they were on patrol in the northern Central Highlands 300 miles north of Saigon.

The South Vietnamese command reported that a company of the 25th Army of the Republic of South Vietnam (ARVN) was ambushed at 9:15 a.m., 75 minutes after the Communist timetable for the truce had taken effect — 30 miles northeast of Saigon. Two ARVN soldiers were killed and five wounded.

Though it was the 2,515th anniversary of the birth of Buddha, the war went on in the neighboring Buddhist countries of Laos and Cambodia. The truce, proclaimed for 48 hours by the Viet Cong and for 24 hours by the allies, followed a day of heavy aerial activity.

U.S. Air Force F4 Phantom jets swept over North Vietnam three times Friday to strafe Communist antiaircraft guns which had fired on them as they flew over Laos, bringing to 35 the number of U.S. "protective reaction" strikes into North Vietnam this year.

The 48-hour Viet Cong truce began at 7 a.m. today and the 24-hour allied truce at noon.

Three formations of B52 bombers dropped at least 270 tons of bombs onto the Communist supply trail complex within three miles south of the Demilitarized Zone and two miles

Truman Plans Quiet Day For His 87th Birthday

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (UPI)—Former President Harry S Truman planned to celebrate his 87th birthday today quietly at home, unaware there would be a surprise visitor at his doorstep to say, "Happy birthday, Mr. President."

Only Mrs. Truman and a handful of friends knew who was coming. But they didn't tell the man he came to see.

While Truman stayed home, about 300 lifetime friends gathered for a birthday luncheon party in nearby Kansas City. Postmaster General Winton M. Blount was here too, to issue America's first 8-cent commemorative postage stamp at the Truman Library, eight blocks from the Truman home.

There were thousands of birthday cards, letters and telegrams.

Industrialist Henry Talge, 80, of Kansas City has sponsored the Truman birthday parties each year since Truman left the White House in 1953. Truman, though, hasn't attended since 1966.

"He gets tired out in large crowds, meeting and greeting everybody," Talge said. "It would be too much of a strain on him."

Each luncheon guest today took home a registered program containing a portrait of Truman. It also pictured Truman with five other presidents—Roosevelt, Eisenhower, Kennedy, Johnson and Nixon. There was a quote too from the late Winston Churchill, who wrote Truman, "you, more

Concludes Meeting In Israel

ROME (UPI)—U.S. Secretary of State William P. Rogers flew here from Tel Aviv after a one-week peace-seeking mission to the Middle East which he said had helped bring "a narrowing of the gap" between Egypt and Israel.

He said Joseph C. Sisco, assistant secretary of state for Near Eastern Affairs who accompanied him on the trip, will fly to Cairo tonight for further consultations with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

Rogers left Tel Aviv with at least one reported Israeli concession: diplomatic sources said Israel has agreed to permit an Egyptian "presence" on the east bank of the Suez Canal once there is agreement for an Israeli troop pullback and a reopening of the waterway.

A western diplomatic source in Cairo said Sisco's visit "raises our hopes a great deal." He said he assumed Sisco was bringing "meaningful clarifications" on Israel's position regarding the reopening of the Suez Canal as a possible prelude to an overall peace settlement.

U.S. officials said Sisco would present no papers or documents to Sadat or Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad. Rather they said he would discuss Israel's position as outlined to Rogers during his talks in Israel.

The American officials said that among other things Rogers accomplished in Israel was to have impressed Prime Minister Golda Meir and other leaders of the urgency with which the United States views a Middle East settlement.

They said Rogers assured the Israelis of continued U.S. political support in the event of an Egyptian violation of any interim accord to reopen the Suez Canal. It was not clear whether this meant the Nixon administration would commit military power to Israel in the event of direct Soviet involvement in an accord violation.

Rogers left Tel Aviv shortly after 9 a.m. Israeli time and arrived in Rome two hours later for meetings with Pope Paul VI and President Giuseppe Saragat.

The reported key Israeli concession on permitting an Egyptian "presence" across the Suez Canal could lead to fruitful negotiations on reopening the waterway.

The term was left vague for negotiating purposes. Up to now, Egypt has maintained that it must garrison both sides of the canal before it can be reopened to world shipping. Israel has maintained that there must be no Egyptian troops on the east bank of the canal even if Israeli troops leave.

The diplomatic sources said Israel had ruled out the word "troops" but had agreed to some sort of Egyptian "military force"—a term that could include policemen or border guards.

Five Sentenced On Bomb Plots

NEW YORK (UPI) — Four-year prison terms, the maximum sentences, were ordered Friday for three members of the Weathermen who admitted plotting bombings.

State Supreme Court Justice Harold Birns ordered the four-year terms for Richard Robin Palmer, 40, described as the leader of the group, Sharon Krebs, 33, and Martin Lewis, 25.

Claudia Conine and Joyce Plecha, also Weathermen members, were sentenced to three years.

'Patriots' Gather For Capital Rally

The demonstration for a military victory over the Communists in Vietnam was called to counter the 18 days of antiwar protests which came to an end Thursday.

Police estimated that about 1,000 persons assembled to march down Pennsylvania Avenue with McIntire at noontime, but officials said the crowd was growing gradually. A rally on the Washington Monument grounds was planned for the afternoon.

McIntire said his group hoped to outdraw an April 24 antiwar demonstration which attracted a crowd estimated at 175,000 by police. He declined to predict how many would take part in today's event, except to comment: "It's time the patriots outdid the hippies."

The weather bureau forecast scattered showers throughout the day.

McIntire, shortly before the parade, told newsmen that the rain and "fear of the hippies" prevented a larger turnout.

"This rain has definitely hurt us," he said. "A number of our people turned back because of it."

He said he plans bigger marches in the future.

"We're going to fire up the whole country," McIntire predicted. "It will be the religious emphasis on God that will save this country."

Washington police added about 300 men for duty today, most of them assigned to the parade route for traffic control.

The crowd was made up of an assortment of war veterans, the elderly, laborers, and families, many with young children. Most of the participants came by charter bus from suburban Maryland and Virginia communities.

They carried placards reading "Stop Red China," "Faith is the Victory," "Victory Now," and "Free Calley." American and confederate flags were abundantly in evidence. Some of the marchers carried "Better Dead Than Red" posters.

Strikes Turn Rome Into Paralyzed City

ROME (UPI)—An epidemic of strikes and shutdowns left Rome a city without marriages, funerals or parking tickets today and 1.3 million Romans went without water.

Much of the normal life of the eternal city, now jammed with tourists, was paralyzed or disrupted by a continuing strike by 23,350 municipal workers seeking more money and reforms in the promotion system.

Walkouts now in their fourth day by grave diggers again prevented burial of the 60 to 70 persons who die every day in Rome. Marriages, tax collections and other official business requiring documents were suspended because of a city clerks strike.

Garbage was piled higher than cars in some streets because of a sanitation strike and motorists enjoyed a ticket free day because of a strike by 450 municipal police.

But perhaps most disrupting of all was a four-day water shutdown in one-half of the city beginning at 11 a.m. Officials closed water supplies to allow for connection of a new aqueduct from the Peschiera river to the central city reservoir. It is the longest such shutdown in Rome since World War II.

Stores reported record sales of bottle mineral water and throwaway paper plates and cups and authorities sent tank trucks cruising the streets with emergency water supplies.

More strikes were scheduled to start Sunday by hotel workers in Rome and elswwhere, a particularly hard blow for tourists pouring into Rome for the summer season.

The strike, called over money and working hours, meant patrons of even such well known hotels as the Grand, Excelsior and Hilton, where U.S. Secretary of State William P. Rogers was staying, would go without room service or bellboys for the next 48 hours. The strike also involved telephone operators, doormen and desk clerks.

Also hurting the rich tourist trade was a series of strikes by ground crews at Leonardo Da Vinci airport. The dispute there led Kuwait airlines to halt its flights into the airport Friday with 60 other international carriers threatening to follow suit.

McGovern's Plan To Generate Jobs

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Sen. George McGovern Friday proposed an "economic reconstruction" by first cutting military spending in half so the country can deal in life rather than the "destructiveness of war."

The South Dakota senator, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for president said his proposal would generate jobs for 5 million Americans.

To Visit France

MOSCOW (UPI)—Leonid I. Brezhnev will visit France this October in his first venture outside the Soviet bloc since he assumed leadership of the Soviet Communist party in 1964, diplomatic sources said.

Satchmo Home

Mrs. Armstrong reported Friday her husband was released Thursday from Beth Israel Hospital after a sevenweek stay with a heart condition and a lung ailment. At one point, Armstrong, 70, was on the critical list.

Trial In Fall

SEATTLE (UPI)—The trial of San Francisco Mayor Joseph L. Alioto and three former Washington State officials on bribery charges will probably not get under way until next fall.

This became clear Friday when U.S. District Court Judge William Beeks announced that the pretrial conference has been postponed a week until May 21.

'Real Cost' Of Food Drops To A New Low

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The "real cost" of food to American consumers dropped to another new low early this year as income gains outpaced rises in food prices, an Agriculture Department report showed yesterday.

The "real cost" is the percentage of total consumer income spent to pay grocery and restaurant food bills.

A "food situation" summary published by department economists noted that despite sharp increases for some food products, including fish and fats and oils early this year, retail prices for all foods in the January-March quarter were up only 0.8 per cent from a year earlier.

At the same time, the report said, after-tax personal incomes rose 2.5 per cent over the fourth quarter of 1970 and were 7.5 per cent above the first quarter of last year.

Candy Beads Are Recalled

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Candy "love beads" reportedly causing illness in children who eat them have been recalled by the Federal Food and Drug Administration.

The distributor voluntarily agreed to stop sale of the produce pending analysis by Federal laboratories, said Dr. Gerald A. Heidbrder, County health officer.

The multi-colored sugar necklaces manufactured in Hong Kong apparently made four children in Los Angeles and another 10 in Springfield, Ill., sick.

Mother Of Year

NEW YORK (UPI)—Betty Anthony Zahn of Oklahoma City Friday was named American mother of the year which was not a surprise to her four children.

One son, Anthony, 31, an Oklahoma City attorney, said "It just confirmed what we always thought."

Mrs. Zahn's children had nominated their mother, but did not know she had won until it was announced at a luncheon of the American Mothers Committee at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. She was "deeply grateful and very humble."

Cheer Queen

VANCOUVER, B.C. (UPI)—Thousands of British Columbians cheered Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip Friday as they toured Vancouver, Burnaby and New Westminster setting a hectic pace in the near-80 degree weather that belied the stateliness of the visit.

While Princess Anne stayed aboard the Royal Yacht Brittania, suffering from a stomach ailment, the 45-year-old monarch on the fifth day of a 10-day tour of the province greeted newly sworn-in Canadian citizens and took a royal salute from the Ancient and Honorable Hyack Anvil Battery.

Al Capp Charged In Morals Case

EAU CLAIRE, Wis. (UPI)—Cartoonist Al Capp, creator of "L'il Abner" has been named in an arrest warrant charging he violated moral laws in an alleged incident involving an Eau Claire State University coed last month.

Capp says the charges against him are "entirely untrue" and another attempt by the "revolutionary left" to prevent him from speaking out on campuses.

Eau Claire County District Attorney Lawrence Durning, a Republican, obtained the warrant from Judge Thomas H. Barland Friday. It charged Alfred Gerald Kaplin, 61, better known as Al Capp, with sodomy, attempted adultery and indecent exposure. The charges were brought by a 20-year-old married coed.

Durning's office said extradition proceedings will be started to return Capp to Wisconsin to face the charges.

The incidents allegedly occurred April 1 when Capp, who has become a popular college lecturer, appeared at Eau Claire State to speak.

Capp's attorney, Alvin Hochberg, said in Boston the cartoonist entered Peter Bent Brigham Hospital Friday morning. Hochberg issued a statement from Capp which read:

"The allegations are entirely untrue. I have been warned for some time now the revolutionary left would try to stop me by any means from speaking out on campuses. My home has been vandalized and I have been physically threatened. This is a part of their campaign to stop me. Those who have faith in me know that I will not be stopped."

Capp, who lives in Cambridge, Mass., returned Thursday from Harrison, Ark., where his son, Kim, lives. Capp was relased from Boone County Hospital in Harrison Wednesday after four days of treatment for exhaustion.

'Dump Nixon' Strategy Session Set

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A group of liberal Republican plans to meet in Washington May 16 to lay the groundwork for a national "Dump Nixon" organization, UPI learned today.

Charles Goodell, the former New York senator, and Reps. Donald W. Riegle Jr. of Michigan and Paul N. McCloskey Jr. of California are the leaders of the group. They called the meeting.

Other Republican congressmen, major GOP contributors and state party leaders dissatisfied with Nixon administration policies are expected to attend the closed-door strategy session.

PRIVATE HOME

One of the group's leaders told UPI persons from around the country will attend the afternoon meeting, to be held in a Washington home.

"A lot of prominent republicans will be attending the meeting, which will be a fairly national representation of the party," the source said. "A few party leaders will send representatives in their place."

The conference has been in the planning stages for more than a month. Goodell told a news conference in March that Republicans opposed to Nixon's domestic and Vietnam policies should begin making preparations to oppose him in next year's primaries.

SEEK SUPPORT

Since then, Goodell, McCloskey and Riegle have been seeking national support for their insurgent effort. All have been harsh critics of the Nixon Vietnam policy.

Goodell was given the cold shoulder by the President last fall when the administration tacitly endorsed Conservative James L. Buckley, who won the election in a three-way race.

McCloskey has repeatedly expressed his intentions, much the way Sen. Eugene McCarthy did before his bid against Lyndon Johnson, to challenge Nixon in the New Hampshire primary next March unless a better known Republican comes forward to oppose the President.

McCloskey has said New York Mayor John V. Lindsay would be an ideal candidate.

Fears Growing For Row Boat Pair; No Contact

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—John Fairfax and Sylvia Cook haven't been heard from since they started rowing across the Pacific for Australia 13 days ago —and their radio contact on shore is getting worried.

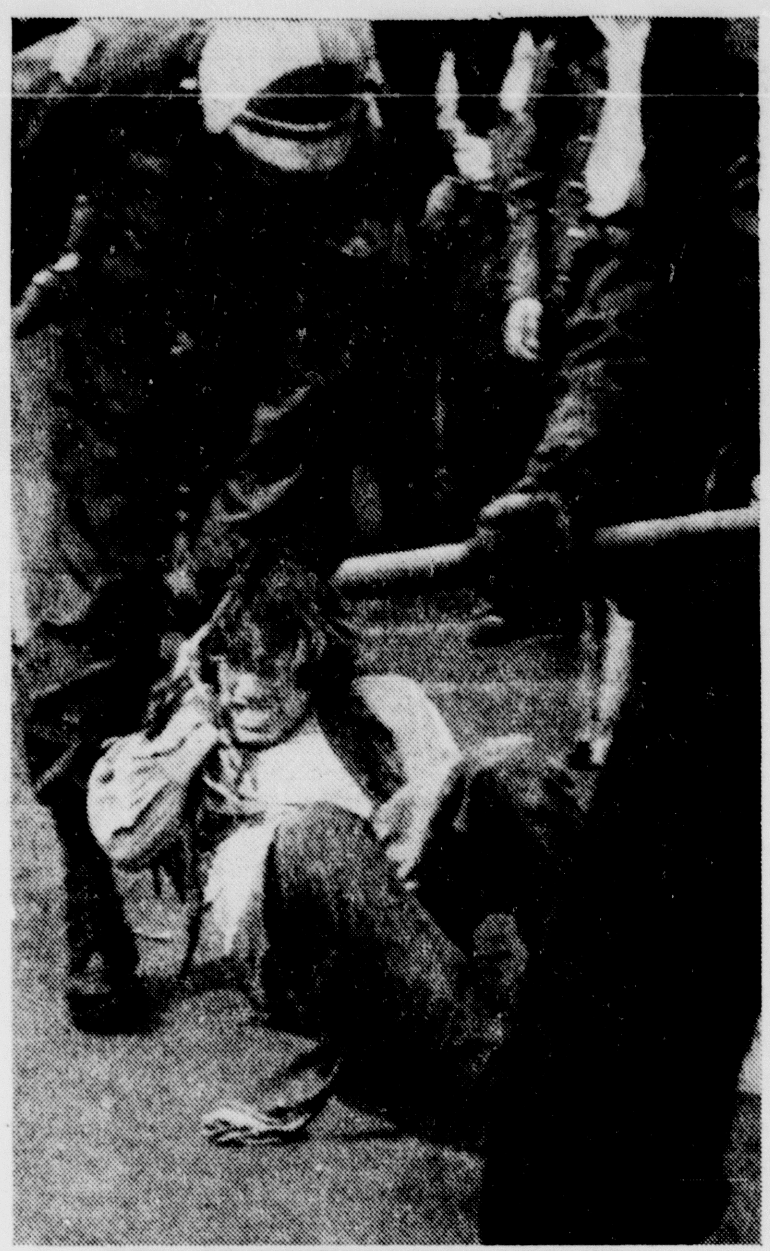
Ivan Sharpe, a free lance writer, said Friday Fairfax has missed three scheduled radio transmissions since leaving San Francisco Bay April 26 on an 8,000-mile, 10-month trip to Sydney.

"I think there's only two possibilities," Sharpe said. "Either they have drowned, or their radio is out of order. I'm inclined to think it's radio trouble."

Meets The Press

PHNOM PENH (UPI)—Cambodia's ailing premier Lon Nol met the press today in a rare public appearance that dispelled persistent rumors he had suffered a relapse of his Feb. 8 stroke.

Although he walked with the aid of a cane, was unable to lift his left arm and occasionally showed a facial tic, Lon Nol spoke clearly and in a normal voice.



POLICE RESTRAIN PROTESTER

A young antiwar demonstrator is restrained by a Seattle policeman during a protest march in Seattle by some 1,200 on behalf of activist Leslie Bacon of Atherton, Calif., who is being retained as a "material witness" in the bombing of the U.S. Capitol. The protest started out peacefully yesterday but police broke up the crowd when it threatened to disrupt rush hour traffic. In related action a federal judge says he will rule early next week on a move to have Miss Bacon freed on grounds of illegal electronic surveillance by the government.

'Selling Of The Pentagon' Wins Top Emmy Award

NEW YORK (UPI) — "The Selling of the Pentagon," CBS' controversial television documentary blasted by government officials from the vice president down, won the 1971 Emmy award yesterday for outstanding achievement in news-documentary programming.

The award, television's highest honor, was one of several Emmys announced in New York and Los Angeles. Many of Friday's awards dealt with television journalism and daytime programming.

Most of the entertainment awards will be presented tomorrow on nationally televised ceremonies.

Sales Report Is Brighter Once Again

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Nixon administration hails a commerce department report that retail sales increased in March for the fourth consecutive month as a sign consumers are gaining confidence in the economy.

But the report came Friday but a few hours after the Labor Department announced unemployment edged up to 6.1 per cent of the labor force during April.

The increase of one-tenth of 1 cent was the second consecutive monthly rise, and another blow to President Nixon's hopes of ridding himself of a damaging political issue before next year's presidential election.

At Hot Springs, Va., a panel of economic consultants to the Business Council, an organization of leading corporation executives, predicted unemployment would remain higher than 5 per cent for most of the election year. Nixon's goal is to reduce the jobless rate to 4.5 per cent by mid-1972.

More To Hike Price Of Steel

PITTSBURGH (UPI)—Bethlehem Steel Corp., Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., and Granite City (Ill.) Steel Corp. have joined four other major steel producers in price increases set two days ago by U.S. Steel Corp. on big volume flat steel products.

The three firms announced their increases Friday.

The increases, ranging from $8.50 to $13 per ton, will take effect June 16 and July 1, and will raise manufacturing costs for automobiles, appliances, buildings and some industrial products.

Other firms adopting the increases were Reupublic, Jones & Laughlin, and Armco.

'Backlash' Seen In Reagan Tax Leak

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) —California Republican leaders expressed confidence today that Gov. Ronald Reagan's income tax episode won't damage him politically. One forecast a "sympathy backlash."

Republicans in the Legislature and top statewide GOP officials declared support for the governor. The state Franchis Tax Board opened an investigation to discover who leaked his confidenital tax-free status.

"I definitely think there will be a backlash of sympathy for this week's political attacks by Democrats on the governor," predicted state GOP Chairman Putnam Livermore. "It's ridiculous, all this crying over one year's tax."

Meanwhile Sen. Dennis E. Carpenter of Newport Beach, immediate past chairman of the state Republican party, sent a letter to Attorney General Evelle J. Younger urging him to investigate the case.

In the legislature, Assemblyman Robert Monagan, Assembly Republican leader, said, "once people wade through the chaff the Democrats are putting out and get to the facts they'll see that the governor acted okay."

In Fresno, a group of college students announced plans to collect canned food and rummage clothing for Reagan because he had "fallen on hard times."

The Fresno-based "Tax Rebellion Committee" offered the governor an honorary membership, calling him "a true tax rebel."

The student broadcaster who first publicly announced that Reagan paid no state income tax for 1970 refused to reveal her sources of information and rejected a state investigator's request for a personal interview.

"I will not jeopardize my credibility as a journalist in the future by disclosing the source of my information," said Rosemarie King, a Sacramento State College government journalism major.

Mrs. King broadcast over the college radio station April 30 a rumor that Reagan hadn't paid any state tax on his 1970 income. She is a part-time, unsalaried intern for the Senate Democratic caucus.

Reagan at first said he couldn't remember whether he paid a tax but later his office announced he did not because of investment losses. He reluctantly announced Thursday he had paid $91,128 in state income taxes since becoming governor and also paid a federal tax for last year. He refused to make public his investment "reverses."

What are your ideas about the so-called generation gap?

presents
"RAP SESSION
with
Youth & the Over-Thirties"

CONTEST ☆$800.00 in cash prizes

For the best letters on how "you" think Youth and the Over-Thirties may reach a better understanding of one another.

This I-J contest is your opportunity to give your candid opinion about the relationship between youth and older people today . . . the conflicts, the life styles, the differences in values, the areas of agreement. And most essentially, to present your ideas on how a better rapport between youth and the over-thirties may best be reached.

Actually it is 4 contests for 4 separate age groups. Letters will be judged not for literary merit but for content . . . for ideas which offer constructive solutions. Put your creative thinking cap on, read the rules, and write a letter. Ideas are now in session.

4 SEPARATE CONTESTS FOR 4 SEPARATE AGE GROUPS
Select your age group, at right, Prizes are the same for each group. Final judging will be by an independent jury.

GOLDEN HINDE TO SAIL AGAIN

This replica of Sir Francis Drake's fabled ship which anchored at Drake's Bay in June 1579 on its voyage around the globe, is expected to sail into San Francisco Bay in the spring of 1973. The Golden Hinde II, designed by San Rafael architect Loring C. Norgaard, will weigh 100 tons and measure 102 feet in length. Its two decks will be lined with 18 cannons. Work on the replica is to begin immediately in England, Albert Elledge of Harbor Tours has announced.

Fund Set Up For Arrested Draft Foes

The governing board of the Associated Students of the College of Marin voted yesterday to contribute $200 in a defense fund being established for 37 anti-war demonstrators arrested Wednesday at the San Rafael office of the Selective Service.

Student Body President Steven C. Banks yesterday confirmed the action but declined to discuss it in detail. "The Independent-Journal doesn't write things the way we like," he said "You leave out words."

Other sources at the college said the board voted 8 to 3 in favor of contributing student funds for the demonstrators.

The protesters were arrested Wednesday afternoon for unlawful assembly after a peaceful three hour sit-in at the draft board.

All were released on their promise to appear next week in Marin Municipal Court.

Sentencing Set After Guilty Plea In Theft

Terry Lee Grinner, 19, of Marin City, has pleaded guilty in Marin Superior Court to a charge of burglarizing an Almonte residence on Dec. 1. 1969.

Following his plea, a charge of conspiracy against him was dismissed by Judge E. Warren McGuire at the request of the district attorney's office. Grinner is to be sentenced June 21.

He and three other Marin City youths were arrested after sheriff's deputies staked out a house which had been burglarized earlier in the day. They were nabbed when they came back to the house, apparently to pick up hidden loot.

The other youths were sentenced earlier for their parts in the burglary.

Shoreline Trustees To Discuss Budget

Shoreline Unified School District trustees, meeting at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the district administration office, will discuss a tentative $1.196 million budget for the coming school year.

The proposed budget does not include pay hikes requested by teachers whose salaries will also come before the board for discussion and possible approval. Teachers are asking for raises from 10 to 13 per cent over current salaries.

Supt. Charles A. McCully said the tentative budget includes step increases for teachers but not the pay hikes requested. The budget also includes $15,000 to start a homemaking class at Tomales High School, Cully said.

Cully said a contract will be awarded to Barnum, Mau and Folsom of Sacramento for architectural planning of elementary school facilities. The 267 elementary students now attend classes in three permanent classrooms and eight portable classes.

The architectural firm is expected to provide alternative plans for additions to the current facilities as well as plans for a new building, Cully said.

Cully said that if plans are later approved by the board, a bond election will be held to finance construction. The architects would then receive 8 per cent of construction costs, he said. If the project is dropped, Cully said, the firm will receive up to $1,500 for its work.

McGrath To Preside At Discussion

Dr. Thomas H. McGrath, president of Sonoma State College, will preside Monday over a discussion among students, faculty and the public on development of the area surrounding the Rohnert Park campus.

The meeting will be at 11 a.m. in Room 119 of Ives Hall.

Taking part besides McGrath will be Raymond Varley, vice chancellor at the University of California at Santa Barbara; Mel Pedersen of the Sonoma County Planning Department; James W. Rogers, a real estate man and a Rohnert Park city councilman; Paul W. Selfen, Cotati City manager; Charles Rinehart of the college faculty; Steve Moore, a student at Sonoma State, and Nore Thiesfeld of the executive dean's office at the college.

Royal Prankster Tricks Airmen With Shoe Gag

A spokesman at the Royal Air Force college here, where the heir to the British throne is in training, said Thursday that on April 1, the Prince had a message read over the public address system requesting anyone with a particular make of exclusive shoes to turn them in for inspection of possible heel defects.

No manufacturer's representative ever turned up, but those who complied went without their shoes for three days.

Dagger Duel Is Fatal To Woman

CHILPANCINGO, Mexico (UPI) — Marina Marino, 38, settled a feud with sister-in-law Irene Nava, 40, by knifing her to death in a duel with daggers, Guerrero state police said yesterday.

"Frankly, I couldn't stand my sister-in-law," Mrs. Marino told police. "When I saw her washing clothes at the village well, I challenged her to a duel without seconds or witnesses."

Mrs. Marino said Mrs. Nava selected the weapons —curved daggers —and the place for Thursday's encounter, a field about 12 miles north of this state capital.

Police said Mrs. Nava was knifed eleven times. Mrs. Marino, wounded twice, was charged with homicide.

Cigarette, Highway Tax Split

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — Cigarette tax and highway users taxes portioned out to Marin County, its cities and Southern Sonoma County cities for April have been reported by State Controller Houston I. Flournoy.

Marin County's share of the cigarette tax apportionment was $4,838.37. The cities received: San Rafael, $16,560.38; Novato, $7,166.17; Corte Madera, $3,587.01; Mill Valley, $3,281.67; San Anselmo, $3,072.90; Larkspur, $2,546.87; Sausalito, $2,505.37; Fairfax, $1,526.17; Tiburon, $1,513.45; Ross, $476.48, and Belvedere, $467.82.

Petaluma received $7,239.46; Rohnert Park, $1,337.13, and Cotati, $437.86.

Marin County received $127,580.46 in the April distribution of highway user revenues. The cities received: San Rafael, $26,191; Novato, $20,916.61; San Anselmo, $9,022.59; Mill Valley, $8,963.70; Larkspur, $7,339.23; Corte Madera, $6,119.72; Fairfax, $5,469.27; Tiburon, $4,508.48; Sausalito, $4,474.74; Ross, $2,214.38, and Belvedere, $2,119.76.

Petaluma received $18,450.97; Rohnert Park, $4,523.15 and Rohnert Park, $1,319.69.

Job Description To Be Discussed

A job description for the proposed administrative position of director of research and development in the Tamalpais High School District will be considered Monday at 8 p.m. by the district board meeting in the Redwood High School faculty lounge.

The position, which consolidates the duties of three of the four administrative positions eliminated by the board on Monday, is part of a test of district reorganization.

The board refused to authorize the new position when it scrapped the others because no job description had been presented.

The board also will discuss the proposed state-wide property tax and the financial trends of the district.

Teachers, Parents Support Librarian

Teachers and parents yesterday rallied to the defense of a Larkspur School District librarian who received a termination notice two months ago, just before she was to get tenure.

Judith Ann Houck, librarian at Henry C. Hall and San Clemente schools is fighting the dismissal before Paul A. Winton, a hearing officer from the State Office of Administrative Procedure.

Rae L. Anderson, Miss Houck's attorney, declared he has affidavits from the entire faculty at Henry C. Hall School and from 80 per cent of the faculty at San Clemente School, supporting Miss Houck as a competent librarian serving the schools efficiently.

Assistant County Counsel Richard V. Godino, representing the school district, yesterday called three witnesses who charged that Miss Houck was tardy with making reports, made errors in card cataloguing, and did not use enough initiative and aggressiveness to promote the library's services.

The witnesses were Supt. Milton S. Cohen; Robert Johnson, principal of San Clemente School, and Barbara Dillon, district librarian who was hired on Aug. 1, 1968, the same time that Miss Houck was hired.

Mrs. Dillon testified that Miss Houck did not devote enough time cataloguing and reviewing books, her card files were sometimes out of sequence, and she did not use initiative to "sell" library programs and services to teachers.

Under cross-examination, Mrs. Dillon acknowledged that criticism of Miss Houck came from San Clemente School, not Henry C. Hall. Principal Mervin Gootherts of Hall School wrote favorable evaluation reports on Miss Houck, said Mrs. Dillon.

"Why would she fail at San Clemente and not at Hall?" asked attorney Anderson. "I don't know," said Mrs. Dillon. "She indicated to me she couldn't get with it at San Clemente."

A parade of witnesses began refuting those charges late yesterday, but only four got on the stand before the hearing was recessed until 10 a.m. May 18 in the planning commission chambers.

The first teacher to defend Miss Houck was Gene Ng of San Clemente School. He testified that Miss Houck was a capable librarian who used initiative to present valuable programs for his sixth graders.

Three library clerks also testified that Miss Houck was competent and innovative.

Attorney Anderson said he has about six more witnesses and about 40 affidavits to present, all attesting to Miss Houck's competence.

than any other man, have saved Western civilization."

Talge says Truman is in good health, his mind alert and he still retains all the candor that gave him his nickname of "give-em hell, Harry."

Only this week Truman turned down an honor he once said he would have rather had than to have served as president —the Congressional Medal of Honor.

Congress had planned to present Truman the medal today. But the former President wrote his congressman Thursday saying, in part: "I do not consider that I have done anything which should be the reason for any award, congressional or otherwise.

Store Shop Plans Will Be Studied

A plan to turn an old furniture store in Mill Valley into a department store with 15 shops will be discussed by the Mill Valley Planning Commission when it meets at 8 p.m. Monday at city hall.

Owner W. W. Kirsch is asking the commission for a variance to install 30 parking spaces where 118 are required by the zoning ordinance.

The department store would be located in the old Brown's Furniture Store at 38 Miller Avenue, where plans for a 400-seat restaurant-bar were squelched by the city council last year.

Also on the agenda is a request by Humphrey O'Driscoll, of 35 Locke Lane, to have a carport built to the side property line where a five-foot setback is required.

O'Driscoll, who already has built the carport without city permission, either must obtain a variance or demolish the structure.

10:55 p.m., San Anselmo — False alarm at Thomas Wade School.

Three Drunken Driving Sentences

Three persons have been sentenced in Marin Municipal Court for drunken driving.

Sentenced Wednesday were:

Teofanes Murillo Lopez, 28, of Richmond, arrested March 27 on Highway 101, who was placed on probation for six months and fined $302.

Sidney William Eloto III, 35, of 737 Francisco Boulevard, San Rafael, arrested Feb. 20, 1970, on Highway 101, who was placed on probation for three years, fined $302 and given 14 days in jail.

Nicholas Korpintinos, 35, of San Francisco, arrested April 26 on Highway 101, who was placed on probation for six months and fined $302.

Driver Hurt; Blacks Out

A Greenbrae man was injured yesterday when he blacked out while driving on the Richardson Bay Bridge, the California Highway Patrol reported.

Claude K. Powers, 61, of 51 Corte Toluca was taken to Kaiser Foundation Hospital in San Rafael, where he was treated for a cut forehead.

LAW IN ACTION

From the State Bar Of California

Beware Of Phone Sales

The government prosecuted Randy Ruggs for mail fraud. He had sold cheap carpets at high prices. Once a customer had bought a carpet, andy told him he could get it free by referring others to Randy for a "commission."

By displaying his new carpet, a customer could get his friends to buy similar carpets, or so Randy said.

The court sentenced Randy to jail. Under the law a scheme for a "geometric progression" of sales is fraudulent. It would be impossible for every customer to get a free rug by such a scheme. If he could, the company would go broke. "In a scheme like this, time alone will show that the company is not profitable — unless it does not keep its promises," said the court.

In 1968 the California legislature banned "referral" commissions on car sales. No seller can lawfully get or attempt to get someone to buy a car at a discount or commission based on some future event, like someone else buying another car. Salesmen had abused this way of getting the buyer to tip them off about new buyers.

Later, the law banned this sales method for all installment sales. It forbids all so-called rebates, discounts, commissions, and the like based on the buyer's sales, or tips leading to the seller making a sale.

Beware of sales handled by mail or telephone if the seller is to deliver the contract later, especially if the purchase calls for installments over a period of time.

California closely regulates installment contract sales. Such an agreement must set forth all the terms, and the buyer has a right to a complete copy without any blanks when he completes his purchase. The contract is invalid if it violates this act.

Out-of-state salesmen often negotiate by mail or telephone. Purchases made through out-of-state credit card companies may involve the laws of several states.

While federal laws may provide some consumer protection if money is paid out, this protection is only as good as the solvency of the seller. (Note: California lawyers offer this column so you may know about our laws.)

from the border with Laos Friday and Saturday.

Another formation of B52s struck Communist storage areas, truck park bunkers and antiaircraft sites 12 miles south of the abandoned U.S. base at Khe Sanh.

Other Thailand-based superfortresses bombed the Ho Chi Minh Trail in Laos and Communist positions in Cambodia in support of South Vietnamese efforts to clear Highway 7.

The allies specified that their truce period would not apply to operations in the two other nations of Indochina, Laos and Cambodia. The Communists made no reference to Laos or Cambodia in their truce announcement, but neither they nor the North Vietnamese have ever admitted having any troops there.

Allied troops in South Vietnam were under orders not to fire unless fired upon during the truce. But with aircraft freed from missions in Vietnam, the air war in Laos and Cambodia might actually stepped up, military sources said.

Today's truce was the 20th to be proclaimed in the 10 years of the Vietnam War. All previous truces have been marked by claims of numerous violations on both sides.

75 Courses On Summer School Slate

The Novato Unified School District's 1971 secondary summer school program will offer 75 courses ranging from motorcycle training to star gazing to basic courses.

The program will operate from June 21 through July 30 for students from the seventh through 12th grades, reported Edward J. Kraft, program director.

By combining the junior and senior high school students, a more extensive and flexible program has been created, Kraft said.

Kraft is scheduled to present the program at every public and private school in the district during the next two weeks.

The elementary summer school, under the direction of Richard C. Melendy, will be from June 21 through July 23, at Rancho School with the hours to be 8 a.m. to 12:15 p.m.

Session On Housing Set

The Corte Madera citizens' housing committee will meet with the Ecumenical Council Association for Housing in Marin Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at the Co-op meeting room at 71 Tamal Vista Boulevard.

Discussion will include housing opportunities in Corte Madera and the citizen's role in creating more.

Following the joint meeting, the housing committee will continue with its planning of a housing element for the town's general plan.

Plea From Commercial Fishermen

Clayton Lewis, Tomales Bay artist and commercial fisherman, asked the association to oppose a bill by Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael which would ban commercial fishing on the bay.

Lewis, according to association president Howard Waite, told the group that those with economic interests in the bay are in a better position to be effective in watching over its welfare because their livelihood relies on it.

"We were not impressed," Waite said today of the arguments for fishing in the bay. He said fishermen were "netting fish indiscriminately" and "waiting for the government to take care of pollution and stock the bay."

However, Waite said, the group still has not taken a stand for or against commercial fishing. He said the association will seek further information from the University of the Pacific Marin Laboratory at Dillon Beach.

For the first time in three years, Waite reported, the association again is looking into the feasibility of joining the North Marin Water District. Point Reyes and Inverness Park recently joined, and Waite said Inverness residents are dissatisfied with current rates and service. The town will also look into setting up its own water system, Waite said.

Boulevard Alignment On Agenda

The alignment of Tiburon Boulevard, subject of three months of committee meetings and many public hearings, will come once more before the Tiburon City Council, meeting at 7:30 p.m. Monday at city hall.

The council will decide if it supports the findings of the joint balanced transportation committee, which recommended a four-lane highway from Reed Ranch Road to Avenida Miraflores and a two-lane parkway from that point to downtown Tiburon.

Some residents have objected to the proposal, saying the road will block access to Richardson Bay.

Also on the agenda is consideration of a resolution urging a statewide ban on non-returnable bottles, a progress report on the improving the Richardson Bay pathway and yet another hearing — perhaps the last — on a controversial house at 6 Rolling Hills Road, built by developer Ralph C. Noah.

Scattered through the earth's 300 million cubic miles of seawater are an estimated 20 billion tons of uranium, says National Geographic.

BUFFALO ROMANCE

U. S. Ambassador Plays Matchmaker

NEW DELHI (UPI) —Benjy, the VIB (Very Important Buffalo), traveled 15,000 miles from South Dakota to New Delhi to join a lonely female of his species.

Benjy, 10 months old, weighs only 600 pounds now. But when fully grown, the shaggy groom will weigh about 2,000 pounds and sport a long, black beard, just as did his ancestors which once roamed America's Wild West in huge numbers.

The average life span of a buffalo in the wild is from 15 to 20 years, but the prospective newlyweds can look forward to as many as 30 years together in their protected environment at New Delhi's zoo, considered to be one of the best in the world today.

Benjy's already grown-up consort, Jessie, became a widow a few years ago when she lost her mate in the local zoo.

"I do not normally act as a go-between for prospective mates of non-human species," Keating said, "but it was disturbing to learn that Jessie was living alone so many miles away from home."

The matchmaking called into action the U.S. State Department, the National Zoo in Washington, D.C., the Great Plains Zoo in Sioux Falls, S.D., and the Indian government.

"Everyone played a magnificent role in bringing this match to consummation," Ambassador Keating said. "There were moments when we were ready to give up."

At first, Keating recalled, there was difficulty in finding a specimen worthy of the Delhi Zoo. "But the State Department was intrepid," he said. "It was one of the Department's finest hours when it cabled me that it had found young Benjy."

Then came the problem of shipment. Bison, for sensible reasons, aren't permitted to fly on commercial airlines.

But that's when someone recalled the sheep shipment. The Indian government had chartered a jet cargoliner to transport sheep from Texas to Delhi. With permission from the Indian government, Benjy found a berth in the New Delhi-bound aircraft.

The Benjy-Jessie formal wedding took place on Feb. 18, when Ambassador Keating opened the trap-door of a cage to let Benjy charge out and say howdy to Jessie.

"Both look overwhelmed, and Jessie is busy showing Benjy round," Delhi's Zoo Director C.L. Bhatia said.

OBITURIES

Lewis G. Pepper Dies At 81

Lewis G. Pepper, son of earlyday Bolinas residents who lived all his life in the small West Marin town, died yesterday in a local hospital after a long illness. He was 81.

Pepper was born in Bolinas and attended elementary school there, the only schooling he received. Like his father, he was a building contractor, operating the firm L. G. Pepper and Sons, now run by one of his sons.

Pepper and his wife, the late Marin W. Pepper, reared eight children in the family home in the Esten Terrace area.

Mrs. Pepper, an author, died seven months ago.

Pepper is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Hazel Evans of Bolinas, Mrs. Doris King of Santa Cruz and Mrs. Marin Atkinson of San Jose; four sons Frank, Charles and John Pepper, all of Bolinas, and Miles Pepper of Denver, Colo., 19 grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

Private funeral will be held tomorrow.

The family prefers contributions to the American Cancer Society.

MRS. HIATT

Katherine E. Hiatt, a former Marin County resident, died yesterday at a Leawood, Kan. hospital after a long illness. She was 67.

A native of Seattle, Wash., Mrs. Hiatt moved to California in 1925.

She lived both in Marin and San Francisco from 1927 to 1969, when she and her husband, William G. Hiatt, a retired banker, moved to Kansas.

In addition to her husband she is survived by a son, Dr. S. W. Hiatt of Leawood, and a daughter, Susan C. Thompson of South San Francisco.

Private funeral will be held Monday in Leawood.

MRS. BARTHOLOW

Funeral arrangements are pending for Emma Bartholow, 52, of San Rafael who died late Thursday at a local hospital following a long illness.

A native of Eastern Washington, Mrs. Bartholow had lived at 520 Third Street, San Rafael with her husband Jack for the past 25-years. He is employed by the Rafael Theater. She worked for many years at Hamilton Air Force Base.

Survivors include her mother and several brothers and sisters, all in the Seattle, Wash. area.

Arrangements will be made by Chapel of the Hills in San Anselmo.

MRS. ARNOW

Keith Craig, coroner's investigator, said Mrs. Arnow, 55, of San Francisco, was found about 1:30 p.m. in a sleeping position at the beach. Knitting lay in a bag nearby and there was a book beside her head, Craig reported.

Cause of death was not known, according to Craig who said further tests will be made.

Arnow, a reporter for station KPIX, spent a year with his family in Ankara, Turkey, on a Fulbright Fellowship in 1969.

Arrangements are pending at Bayview Chapels in South San Francisco.

EMANUEL WEBER

Keith C. Craig, coroner's investigator, said death apparently was due to a self-inflicted gunshot wound of the head. Weber's body was found in a basement room of the house by a neighbor who was called by his wife, Edna, when she found a note at 8:30 a.m., Craig said. He added that Weber had been despondent over ill health.

A native of Washington, Weber joined the original PayLess chain in 1931 in Spokane after graduation from the University of Washington. He was transferred to Bremerton and later to Oakland before moving to San Rafael in 1940.

He was a member of the Marin Rod and Gun Club and the Elks Lodge.

In addition to his wife, he is survived by two sons, Donald W. of Sacramento and Robert A. Weber of Grass Valley; three brothers, Edwin of Seattle, Alvin of San Bruno and William Weber of Arizona; a sister, Esther Stemm of Spokane and three grandchildren.

The funeral will be at 1 p.m. Tuesday at Keaton's Mortuary in San Rafael. Inurnment will be private at Mount Tamalpais Cemetery.

Fonda's Pills Were Vitamins, Report Claims

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Pills seized from actress Jane Fonda when she was arrested Nov. 3 at Cleveland Hopkins International Airport on drug smuggling charges have been found to be the vitamins she claimed they were, according to a Cleveland Press report.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Edward F. Marek, however, declined to confirm or deny the report Thursday.

Miss Fonda, 32, was detained by customs agents at the airport as she arrived from Toronto, Canada. A search of her luggage turned up 105 vials, each containing 40 pills.

She was charged with bringing illegal drugs into the country, and the case was referred to a federal grand jury, where it still stands. Marek said a decision on whether to continue will be made "in a month or so."

DEATH NOTICE

WEBER — In San Rafael, May 7, 1971, Emanuel Weber; husband of Edna F. Weber; father of Robert A. and Donald W. Weber; brother of Mrs. Esther Stemm, Alvin, Edwin and William Weber; grandfather of three grandchildren; a native of Washington; aged 65 years; a member of B.P.O. Elks No. 1108, San Rafael; and Marin Rod & Gun Club.

Friends are invited to attend the funeral Tuesday, May 11, 1971, at 1 p.m. at KEATON'S MORTUARY, 1022 E. St., San Rafael. Community Center Eyed

The old and the young are joining forces in Santa Venetia to work for a community center, possibly in the old Littleman Market building which was vacated last year.

About 40 residents met at the Presbyterian Church on Adrian Way Thursday night and formed a committee to drum up support and funding.

The meeting was sponsored jointly by the Gallinas Village Community Services District and Marin's Juvenile Delinquency Prevention Commission.

Youth Coordinator L. Charles Smith, who presided, said six adults including himself and five teen-agers volunteered to form a committee to work for the center. The committee will meet again at 8 p.m. on May 20 at the church.

The former Littleman's Market building has 18,000-square-feet of floor space, renting at five cents per square foot which means a $900 per month rental.

About a dozen teen-agers decided they would have their own meeting next week at the home of Rebecca Prebil to get youth backing for the center.

Women Drive More On a Set Of Tires

AKRON, Ohio (UPI)—Women get the last laugh when it comes to their driving habits.

Goodyear Tire and Rubber reports that a study of women behind the wheel showed they average 10,000 miles more on a set of tires than men do.

Symposium On Parks Needs Announced

That will be the theme of an all-day symposium on "parks, people, and open space" to be held at the College of Marin's Olney Hall next Saturday, from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The Marin County Parks and Recreation Commission will sponsor the symposium to get public comments on what they want and need in county parks.

County Supervisor Arnold M. Baptiste will open the free public meeting. Alfred E. Heller, president of a conservation group, California Tomorrow, will be keynote speaker. County Counsel Douglas J. Maloney will be master of ceremonies.

A highlight of the town-meeting-type symposium will be a multiscreen show of color slides illustrating Marin's unique geographic and recreational areas. The show, produced by Pacific Gas and Electric Co. as a public service, was prepared by Lewis (Skip) Stewart, San Anselmo city councilman.

Afternoon discussion sessions will consider the creation of a regional park district for Marin; the county' role in nature education; need for specialized recreational facilities, and various priorities such as active recreational areas or open spaces, which must be considered.

Moderators for panel discussions include John Hart of San Rafael, free-lance conservation writer; George Barnwell, Novato editor; George Draper, San Francisco writer; Dean N. Meyer, Golden Gate Bridge Director, and Albert J. Boro, chairman of the Marin County Parks and Recreation Commission.

Study Set On Antidrug Center

The Petaluma City Council, meeting in another of its so-called study sessions will discuss Monday night a bid by a youth group known as Third Way House to establish an antidrug center for teen-agers.

Third Way House has undertaken a fund campaign for the center and is seeking council endorsement.

The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. at city hall.

Exchange Plan To Be Explained

Student exchange programs will be explained to parents and students at 3:15 p.m. Tuesday in the little theater at Redwood High School.

Mrs. Ross Ashley, student selection chairman of Redwood International Student Exchange, said American Field Service, Experiment in International Living, Youth for Understanding and Redwood's exchange programs in Blandford, England, Preetz, Germany and Highland Park, N.J. will be discussed.

Applications for the programs may be made in September.

Mill Valley Board Will Eye Budget

The Mill Valley School District board, meeting at 8 p.m. Monday at Park School, will hear a progress report on a preliminary 1971-72 study budget of $3,450,265, a $192,810 increase over this year.

Director of Business Services Carroll D. Killingsworth said the spending program includes a $50,160 increase over this year for normal step increases for teachers but makes no provision for cost-of-living or other salary raises.

He emphasized, however, that the budget is preliminary and probably will be modified by the board before it is adopted in August.

Also on the agenda is approval of the sale of the 5.13-acre Alice Eastwood School site in Tamalpais Valley to the Tamalpais Community Services District for $66,500, conditional on acceptance by the services district board.

Chamber Supports Tax Increase

The Rohnert Park Chamber of Commerce has passed resolutions supporting the June 1 tax increase election in the Cotati School District and the Golden Gate Bridge District's bid before the legislature to continue transit planning in the Golden Gate corridor.

Chamber secretary Sue Limoli said the chamber action was taken Wednesday.

Marin Women

A MONEY tree, always a useful gift, is one of the things to be presented to the William Burgers of Woodacre at a reception tomorrow honoring their 50th wedding anniversary. They moved to Woodacre six years ago after living in San Rafael for 20 years. They were married in Ft. Bragg on April 30, 1921.

FULTZ QUADS

Sophisticated Life As Models

NEW YORK (UPI)—They were headliners nearly 25 years ago when they were born. Now they're aiming for fame anew in the career world.

They're the Fultz quadruplets—Mary Ann, Mary Alice, Mary Louise and Mary Catherine—believed by those connected with their lives to be the only living Negro girl quads in the world.

Today, they live a sophisticated life in northern Westchester County, New York, their eyes on careers in music, as models and also in medicine.

The lives of these quads, now willowy, handsome and fashion-wise, began May 23, 1946, in the Annie Penn Memorial Hospital in Reidsville, N.C., when Dr. Fred Klenner, a general practitioner, delivered four babies who altogether weighed 12 pounds. They were a celebrated four-some in their early days and were written up in newspapers and magazines, photographed even with Presidents. Sponsors who wanted the quads to lend their names to products were plentiful. And a national milk firm made what Charles and Elma Saylor, who became their legal guardians and ultimately adoptive parents, considered the best offer — milk, comfortable home and other needs until the quads turned 18.

As the girls grew, those steering their future noticed their musical talents. Mrs. Saylor, a registered nurse who helped to deliver the babies, said that at the early age of three she would notice their developing talents as they recited nursery rhymes.

Ultimately the girls dropped from the national scene and went through secondary schools and on to two years at Betheune-Cookman College, Daytona Beach, Fla.

Mrs. Saylor and her husband, a graduate of Tuskegee Institute, cared for the quads almost from the beginning and adopted them when they were 10. During an interview, Mrs. Saylor said that numbers of professionals tested the four's abilities and it was just generally agreed that they need special training to develop their talents.

Accordingly, the Saylors and quads moved to Peekskill, N.Y., where as Mrs. Saylor said "the girls could be near a big city but not have to live in it." Peekskill is an integrated suburban community.

Mrs. Saylor was reluctant to talk of the quads' mother and father except to mention that the mother was handicapped, that to give the quads the "special training needed and to travel with them" would have been impossible.

The quadruplets recently were graduated from the Barbizon School of Modeling, now are registered with the school's modeling agency, and are modeling either separately or as a unit. They all are five feet seven and one-half inches tall, and wear size 8½ and 9 shoes so that their personal wardrobes always are being exchanged.

Medically, they're listed as identical. Their birthright shows in their reactions to questions. "What musical instrument do you play?" I asked.

"The organ," the four answered as one. It turns out though that among them they also play piano, violin, cello and viola and sing, both classical and rock music. They're studying at Lakeland Music Center Conservatory in Peekskill and holding nursing jobs while they wait out modeling and music engagements.

It's confusing talking with four girls all named Mary. Mrs. Saylor explained that it was to honor the Virgin—"their family doctor was a Catholic."

HAPPY MOTHERS' DAY

Louis Brunanchon offers Mothers' Day greetings and a floral arrangement to Mrs. Marie Bene, at the Marin Manor Rest Home in San Rafael. Louis attends Forest Meadows Development Center, also in San Rafael, where students made the bouquets. The exchange between the women and the children, who are mentally handicapped, was arranged because it is important for the children to go out and share with other people, according to Thelma Quintana, an aide at the center.

MRS. GORDON Walker of Marin Country Club Estates in Novato will be installed as chairman of the Oleander Chapter, Marin Foundation, Friends of Arequipa, at its meeting at the home of Mrs. Alvin Haag in Belvedere Wednesday at 10 a.m.

Mrs. Haag has invited all members to a luncheon at her home following the meeting. Mrs. S. Ross Cox Jr. will be the co-hostess.

THE SONOMA Valley Woman's Club is having a house and garden tour Wednesday beginning at 12:30 p.m. at the Blue Wing Complex in Sonoma, where wine and cheese will be served.

Reservations chairman for the tour of eight homes, many more than 100 years old, is Mrs. Louie Minelli of Sonoma. Tickets can also be purchased at the beginning fo the tour.

AN OPPORTUNITY to make an organic garden in exchange for weeding and pruning existing plants is one of the new jobs offered this week by the Volunteer Bureau of Marin.

Volunteers to fed handicapped children during the lunch hour between now and June and to teach sports to men on Tuesday mornings are also needed. Retired caseworkers or persons with master's degrees in social work are needed as volunteers.

Appointments should be made for interviews at the volunteer bureau in San Rafael.

Two Weddings In Capital June 12

Two big weddings — not one — will be held on the same day in Washington, D.C.

The most covered of the two will be that of Tricia Nixon who will be married in the White House on June 12. Scheduled also is the wedding of Theodore Milo Stans, son of Secretary of Commerce Maurice Sans to Diane Richter of New York.

Wash Hands

Wash hands with soap and water after handling raw meat and poultry and before touching other foods.

Couple's 50 Years Together

Pauline Cummings became the bride of William Burger 50 years ago April 30 in what was described as "a quiet ceremony" in her parents' home in Fort Bragg.

Shortly after the ceremony the bride's mother told Burger, "Remember, she can always come back!" The Burgers, now residents of Woodacre, laugh about it now and Burger says, "We tied a pretty tight knot."

They lived in Fort Bragg for 17 years where he was paymaster of the Union Lumber Co., clerk of the school board, and for 10 years the city treasurer. He was also district commander of American Legion Post 96 and she was active in its auxiliary.

AFTER MOVING to San Rafael they settled in a home near Short School for 20 years. Burger was a price clerk and estimator for E. M. Hundley Hardware in San Francisco and then O'Niel and Logan Hardware in San Rafael. Mrs. Burger worked at Moore's Stationary and she has been active in Girl Scouts.

Over 150 guests honored them at a reception Sunday at the Woodacre Improvement Club including Mrs. Burger's sister Mrs. Carl Ruppert who came from Ohio.

One of their sons, John Paul Burger, lives next door to them in Woodacre and the elder Burgers enjoy daily visits from their three grandchildren Susan, 13, Bret, 11 and Linda, 10. Their other son William Burger Jr. lives in San Francisco.

BURGER IS a member of the World War I Barracks 550 in Woodacre and they are past members of the Odd Fellows and Rebekah Lodges. Mrs. Burger is a member of the Lutheran Church in San Rafael and the couple occasionally attends the Presbyterian Church in Woodacre.

The Burgers talked about some of their trips around the United States and he said "It hasn't been an idle 50 years. I'll tell you that."

Start Day Right

The day goes better when started with breakfast. You'll have more energy in the morning and less tendency to snack before lunch.

If you are tired of the ordinary-never-changing breakfast menu perhaps a toasted cheese sandwich or hamburger would perk up the breakfast routine for you.

Keep Good Company

Snacks should be selected on the basis of the company they keep. In other words, say nutritionists, choose foods that supply several important nutrients as well as food energy such as a glass of milk or fresh fruit. Avoid the "do-little-nibbles" that add calories and nothing else.

A $500 Fellowship In Member's Honor

A $500 fellowship grant in the name of Mrs. William B. Allen has been made to the American Association of University Women's Educational Fund by the Mill Valley Branch of the organization.

Mrs. Allen is the fourth member of the branch to be recognized for her contribution to AAUW by provision of a grant in her name. The others were the late Mrs. Ernest Evans, Dr. Margaret Grew and Mrs. R. S. O'Connor.

Pat Allen, who moved from Mill Valley to Sonoma in 1969, joined the branch in 1951 and soon became one of its most dedicated members. She was president in 1955-56 and has also served as vice president, membership chairman, publicity chairman, parliamentarian and head of the garden and lively arts study sections.

She wrote the scripts and lyrics for several performances of the arts study group, notably "Uncle Sugar's Follies," a satire on the United States image abroad, and "The Annual Festival of Music and Poetry of the Ladies Indoor Art Club," also a spoof.

Mrs. Allen received a degree in history from Drake University in Iowa and a master's degree in English from Radcliffe College. She was on the staff of the rare books library at Harvard University before moving with her engineer husband to California.

More than 100 graduate fellowships are provided each year by the foundation to gifted women scholars, in amounts ranging from $2,500 to $5,000. About half are awarded to Americans and half to women from other countries.

Kitchen Stove Tops Now Works Of Art

A national firm is turning tops of kitchen stoves into pieces of art and capable of temperatures up to 1,200 degrees Fahrenheit.

Available in a series of designs, the range tops are virtually pound and shatter proof.

An Apple Fluff

Season canned apple sauce with cinnamon, honey and a little lemon juice. Chill well and serve in a dessert dish. Top with a generous fluff of whipped cream and garnish with lady fingers or sticks of pound cake. Makes a great bedtime snack, too.

Teen Snacks

Faculty Bid For Women At Harvard

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI)--A special faculty committee says Harvard —the nation's oldest university —should make more room for women on the faculty and at the graduate level.

"A male bastion for more than three centuries, growing over time from a denominational men's college to a major university, Harvard has been slow to recognize changes in ideas about sex roles," the committee said. "It has tended to overlook injustices and has continued to 'do business in the usual manner.'

"But we have now reached that point which usually precedes significant change: when the injustice is so visible and the discontent so apparent that few can doubt the need for reform."

The committee, in a report on its study of the status of women in Harvard's faculty of arts and sciences said:

—Women faculty members should be hire on the basis of guidelines based on the number of women doctoral candidates at Harvard, increasing as the number of women in graduate study grow.

—Parttime teaching and graduate study positions should be made available so that women with families could routinely teach or study.

Vows Are Said In Tiburon

The Westminster Presbyterian Church in Tiburon was the setting when Mrs. Joan Lorena Stearns of San Rafael and Lt. Col. Harold Glen Young of San Francisco were married in a 7 p.m. ceremony Thursday.

The wedding was followed by a reception at the Mill Valley home of the matron of honor and best man, Mr. and Mrs. Philip R. Placier.

Mrs. Placier is the sister of the bridegroom.

On their return from a wedding trip the couple will live in San Francisco, where Young is on active duty with the U. S. Army Inspector General at Fort Mason.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Smith of Portland, Ore. Formerly a dancer, she is a member of the executive board of the Marin Civic Ballet. She has two children by a previous marriage, Susan Louise and Steven Wilson Stearns of Woodside.

The bridegroom, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack H. Young of Modesto and brother of Jack H. Young Jr. of Modesto and Gerald R. Young of Lakeport, has two children by a previous marriage. They are Sabrina Ann and Andrew Young of Washington, D.C.

John Akers And Diane Levy Engagement Told

The engagement of Diane Barbara Levy to John Stewart Akers of San Jose has been announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Myron J. Levy of Fairfax.

Diane is the sister of Linda Levy of Fairfax and Michael Levy, who attends the University of California at Davis. Her grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Harry Zimet and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Levy, all of San Francisco.

Diane, a graduate oi Sir Francis Drake High School and San Jose State College, is taking graduate studies in special education at San Francisco State College.

Mr. and Mrs. John Akers of San Jose are John's parents, and he is the brother of Mrs. Ernest LaScola, Bonnie and April Akers. He was graduated from Lincoln High School in San Jose and attends San Jose State College.

A September wedding is being planned by the couple.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

'Policeman's Kid' Urged To Open His Eyes And Ears To People

DEAR HELEN:

A while back "Policeman's Kid" said something that really made me bristle. It's great standing up for your father, and "the fuzz" need all the help they can get these days, but he ended his letter with, "Next time you're in trouble, call a hippie." (With great sarcasm).

If this kid would open his eyes and ears, he'd see things such as I have.

A woman coming out of the market with a loaded cart of groceries hits a bump and over goes her cart. Three or four men walk past, then a car that is pulling away stops and two guys with shoulder-length hair and "funny" clothes jump out to help her. And they won't accept a tip . . . she'd embarrass them by offering.

My sister-in-law, who locks her door at the mention of a hippie (doper?), was in a local shopping center parking lot, too pregnant to close her car trunk. Guess who came to the rescue? Not a "straight" man.

I read an article not too long ago about a young boy who, while walking over a frozen lake with friends, found some unfriendly ice, and fell through. It was a "doper" to the rescue.

Out in California, the hippies saved oil-drenched birds from San Francisco Bay, and earlier saved many homes from being destroyed by forest fires by their quick action and volunteer work.

I could go on and on, and I'm sure Policeman's Kid could too, but PLEASE let's set the record straight. There are good and bad; helpers and passers-by in every group of people. Let's don't set one group against the other.

SARDI

DEAR HELEN:

I've ready so many letters from kids who refer to their parents as "my old man" or "my old lady."

I'll bet these kids would hit the fan if their folks called them "our little brats."

I don't always agree with my mother or father, but I think they deserve respect.

Doesn't anyone agree with me that "old man" and "old lady" should be shelved (the words, I mean)?

OTTO

DEAR OTTO:

For starters, I Do!

H.

DEAR HELEN:

I know you've had lots of "Big Brother" descriptions, but please would you print mine? It would have been his birthday last month.

A big brother is the one who brings home his friends and tells you not to talk to them.

He's the one who tells you Mom and Dad felt sorry for you cause you were the ugliest one at the orphanage, so they adopted you.

He also tells you the Salvation Army brought you, and he picks on you and teases you just 'cause you're younger.

He's the one who, on your birthday, joins the Navy though he's only 17. And then when he is discharged, calls long distance to wish his 16-year-old sister a Happy Birthday, though he's coming home the next day.

He's the one who one night goes out riding with friends and gets killed, and that's the day my whole world fell apart.

Out of all the pain and trouble you go through with a big brother, he's the one you love the best — and life will never be the same without him.

HIS LITTLEST SISTER

Some Good News About Steak Cuts

Beef research just completed indicates that only half of the fat in beef cuts is saturated, which should be good news to steak-loving Americans concerned about weight and heart conditions. Studies at three universities indicate that 95 per cent of the beef cuts now on the market meet the medical profession's saturated fat limitations.

The research was announced by the California Beef Council, which has been working on evaluations of beef's fat content with heart specialists, animal scientists and beef industry leaders around the country, through the University of California at Davis. Additionally, fat composition studies took place at the Universities of Wisconsin and Arizona.

THE STUDIES are being made available to the medical profession for further research and evaluation, as well as to nutritionists, dieticians, home economists, animal scientists and the press.

Representatives from a number of these industry groups have welcomed the new information, for beef has traditionally been well accepted by individuals on restricted diets, due to its taste and nutritional values.

Walter H. Rodman, immediate past manager of the California Beef Council and industry pioneer in the field, said that his organization decided to bring the research to light "because everyone knew the nutritional value of beef, but did not recognize that most fat-trimmed beef products met the safe dietary standards of the health profession."

The California study began following a 1968 conference at Davis of animal scientists, physicians, food technologists, nutritionists and California beef industry leaders. At the conference, physicians involved in cardiovascular disorders indicated that meats below a five per cent saturated fat content would be acceptable for inclusion in the diets of their patients.

The study analyzed 360 samples from 72 carcasses, with Dr. William Garrett of the Davis campus supervising the work through a grant from the California Beef Council.

RESULTS SHOWED that many lean cuts such as the round, rump, and tenderloin fall well below the 5 per cent fat content which is acceptable to individuals on a low-fat diet, and research at Arizona and Wisconsin pointed up that half of all intramuscle fat was saturated.

Dr. Garrett, professor of Animal Science at Davis, worked with two meat graders from the U.S. Department of Agriculture in the sample selection. Unsaturated fats, which have not been indicated as causing problems in heart patients, were included in total fat contents, which ranged from 3.8 to 4.8 per cent for the recommended cuts.

All outside fat was trimmed. This corresponds to the original cooking methods of the first beef fat analyses done by Ruth M. Leverton, although there appears to be a substantial reductions in beef's fat content in the decade since her studies.

The beef samples were selected from six Northern California meat packers in equal factors of sex, quality, marbling score and yield. Protein, fat and water content were analyzed at the Davis meat laboratory. The research process' mirrored the normal distribution channels so that the beef corresponds to meat at the store level.

PRESS GUIDE IS AVAILABLE

A guide for press chairmen of organizations interested in getting news to the Marin Women's Section of the Independent-Journal is available at the San Rafael main office and the Novato, Mill Valley and Southern Sonoma I-J offices.

The booklet, "Getting News Into Your Newspaper," is issued as a service of the Independent-Journal Women's Section to assist press chairmen for women's organizations.

The booklets at the San Rafael office may be obtained from the switchboard on the main floor.

Tam P-TA Leader Is Real Native

Mrs. George Kirkland, new president of the Tamalpais Valley Parent-Teacher Association, is not only a native of Tamalpais Valley but she still lives in the house where she was born.

A member of the organization four years, she says her most important objective for the coming year will be to increase the working membership.

Katherine Kirkland is a past president of the Star of the Sea Parlor, Native Daughters of the Golden West, and is active in the Star of the Sea Church in Sausalito and the Mill Valley Council of the Portuguese Protective Union of California.

Mrs. Kirkland is a graduate of Tamalpais High School. She and her husband, who is a securities trader with the firm of McDonald, Shobar and Miller in San Francisco, have three children, Kenneth, 8; Karen, 5 and Kristie, 4.

Katherine enjoys sewing and makes all of her own and the children's clothes. She also likes crafts work.

Other officers to be installed with the new president this month are Mmes. Richard Drever Jr., first vice president; R. H. Glenn, second vice president; Douglas Noren, recording secretary; Jesse Grove, corresponding secretary, and Vaughn Phillips, treasurer.

Therapy For Wife Alone Held Failure

Sex researchers Dr. William Masters and Virginia Johnson advise the thousands of American women with sexually troubled marriages who seek professional help without their husbands that they are probably wasting their time and their money.

"Therapy for the wife alone will not only fail to solve the problem but will probably make it worse," the famous team wrote in the May issue of Redbook magazine.

"When a marriage is jeopardized by sexual conflicts, in the vast majority of cases it's the wife who seeks counseling," Masters and Johnson said. The assumption that it is always the wife who needs help is so widespread that it goes unquestioned by most women who "all too often accept — or even volunteer for —the role of scapegoat."

But "a wife cannot be treated for a malady that afflicts the marriage relationship itself, any more than she can go for lessons by herself to learn how to dance with her husband — who isn't very graceful, can't keep time and has never enjoyed dancing," they argued.

Emphasizing the "destructiveness" of individual therapy, Masters and Johnson said that its failure "further erodes her (the wife's) self-esteem (and) consequently there is less chance than ever that she and her husband can overcome their sexual disharmony."

Iodine's Source

Sea foods and plants grown on soil near seas are important sources of the nutrient, iodine. Table salt is often fortified with this mineral. Iodine helps control the rate at which the body uses energy, say nutrition consultants.

SEW SIMPLE

Side Seams For The Waist Area

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR EUNICE:

My shoulders are narrow, and I have a very small bust, but I still need a size 20½ size pattern. Please tell me how to reduce the size of the darts in the bust area?

MRS. S.A.F.

DEAR MRS. S.A.F.,

It sounds as if you are using a size that is too large for you, especially when you tell me your shoulders are very narrow. It is best to find a pattern that fits the upper part of your body, it is a simple matter to add to the side seams to enlarge the waist and hip area.

If you still fell you are using the correct size, be sure to fold a narrow dart out of the shoulder, tapering to nothing about 6 inches below the shoulder, to correct the shoulder width. To reduce the shaping caused by the large bust darts, perhaps you only need half the width of the dart. Just draw a new line for your dart. If the dart is at the underarm of your dress, this will cause the bodice to become slightly longer at the sides. Perhaps there is too much length as it is. After you have changed the size of the darts, try the dress on, tie a string tightly around the waist, allow for a slight amount of ease and mark the correct waistline length.

MRS. MARIE Zobel, Watertown, N.Y., is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her sewing suggestion:

"The finishing touch that really makes an impression when you have made a personalized neck tie for someone special is to use your own personalized name label in back of the tie instead of just a piece of grosgrain ribbon. This is a necessary part of the tie because it keeps the under section of the tie in place. I'm sure that whether the tie is from a wife, sweetheart, girl friend or mother, your man will wear his very special tie with pride and accept it gratefully."

DEAR EUNICE,

When I press my fortrel fabrics hard enough to get the finished look I want, you can always see the seam on the right side, also the marks from facings and hems. Am I using too hot an iron or what is my problem?

MRS. S.V.

DEAR MRS. S.V.,

The seams will tend to make a permanent indentation since you probably haven't underlined the garment. The easiest way to press and be assured this won't happen, is to slide a peice of fairly heavy brown paper under the seam allowance, the hem or the facings and then press. Of course, all your pressing must be done on the wrong side of your fabric. When pressing the hem, I find it works best to baste the hem just above the finished length, slide the paper under the extension of the hem and press. After pressing, you can complete the hem with your slip stitching done by hand.

It sounds as if you are referring to knits. Whether they are polyester, fortrel or wool, the sponginess of the knits will permit them to be pressed. It is important not to overpress fabrics that will leave a sharp crease because it will make them look inexpensive. The soft, rolled look of the hem looks the most professional.

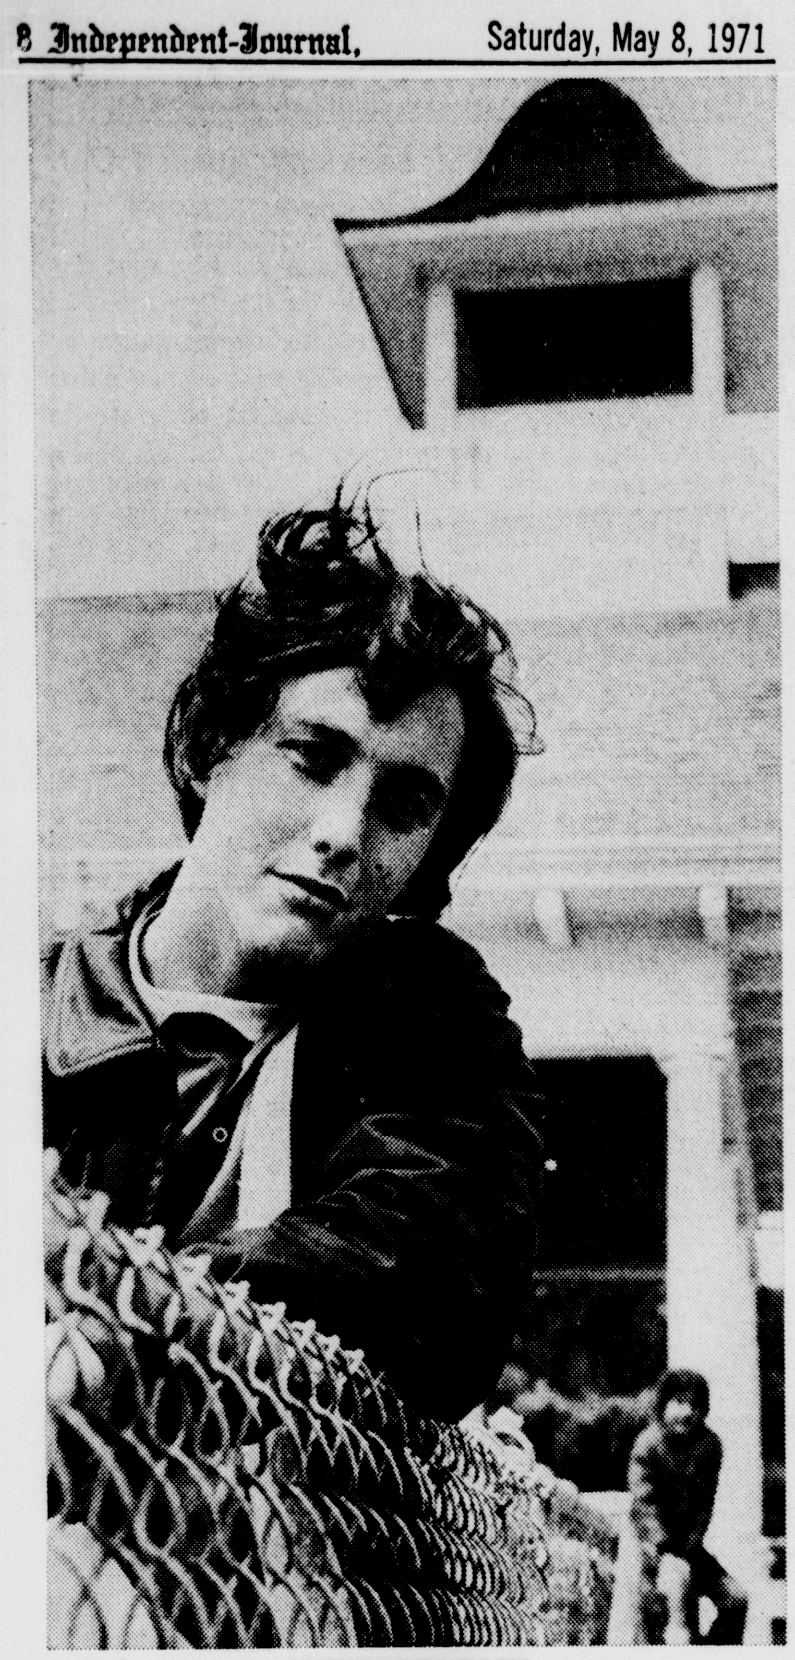
RAP SESSION

Not Unpleased By His Elders

By PAT ANGLE
(12th in a series of 24 raps)



CURTIS SPURLIN
'Deplores Institutionalized racism'
(Independent-Journal photo)

Curtis Spurlin believes the young have surpassed their elders and taken over the lead in creative thought and reform movements in this country.

But the 23-year-old teacher at Bolinas School is also convinced young people owe a great deal to those who were here before them. "We have learned everything we know from older people," Spurlin said. "They have taught us how the system works, how to keep it running and how to work within it for the changes we want."

Although many of his contemporaries feel the young should simply forget about the old and wait for them to die off and get out of the way, Spurlin disagrees. He does not think people should be judged by age — or appearance — and said both age groups are guilty of making such snap judgements.

"Because I have long hair, some people won't really listen to what I have to say," he said. "In the same way, I tend to pick up hitchhikers who have long hair."

He said most persons over 30 still aspire to many American ideals, such as freedom and equality and "they are very sincere, just as we are." But young people grow up with a rosy picture of an America where all is well and good, he said, a picture encouraged by the schools. "Then young people find out what is really happening and they get turned off," he added.

Spurlin said the young should not forget than many older people have known depression and war in their lifetimes and "are tremendously pleased with what they have now, their little home in suburbia, their peaceful existence." By the same token, he feels the old should not become so angry at the young people who seek changes and view them as threats to their way of life.

The only way to bridge the chasm created by such superficial stereotyping, according to the teacher, is for the young and old to make a real effort to get better acquainted. "I would like to work with older people and show them what I can do and learn what they can do," he said. "And, by sharing, perhaps we can get together and solve some of our mutual problems."

Although Spurlin has chosen to work within the system, he is deeply distressed by many of the things he sees happening in this country.

He deplores what he termed "institutionalized racism," keeping the country's "institutions (such as schools) geared for the white middle class to the exclusion of minorities and the poor." Also disturbing to Spurlin is the lack of respect he finds many Americans have for other cultures, particularly the black culture.

This racism, he believes, creates the largest gap in America today, the gap between "people who have had all the material things and the people who don't have them and still aspire to have what the haves have."

Changing the things that are wrong with the country will be a long, hard task, the teacher believes. "Getting angry doesn't do any good because you just get stepped on and people don't listen to you when you are angry," he said. "And, if you keep asking and asking for reforms and demanding changes, people get tired of your asking and demanding and they don't listen to you either."

He added: "If you use violence you lose too, because the Establishment has more power."

Spurlin feels he can help by exposing his students, who live far removed from the ghetto and its problems, to other cultures and different kinds of people. "Through education, I see my children waking up to many facts and problems which their parents never laid on them," he said with satisfaction.

"It's not enough to go around saying 'Peace and Love, brother," Spurlin feels. "You have to realize your survival is at stake and really starting doing something about it."

Firemen Praised For Rescue Work

Two neighbors and a fireman who risked their lives to save a Terra Linda housewife trapped in her blazing home April 30, have been sent letters of commendation by Terra Linda Fire Chief George A. Walser.

Walser said the letters were written in behalf of the Terra Linda Community Services District to Ronald Tatum of 512 Whitewood Drive; Michael Alaimo of 528 Whitewood Drive, and Marinwood volunteer fireman Mitchell Lang of 2790 Heatherstone Drive.

The fire chief said the men helped rescue and revive Cornelia Regalia when flames broke out in her home at 515 Whitewood Drive, at 11:48 p.m. April 30.

Walser, who lives half a block from the Regalia home, raced to the scene when the alarm sounded in his own home. He arrived two minutes ahead of the first fire trucks, the chief said.

Mario Regalia, who had severely cut himself taking a daughter to safety through a window, told Walser Mrs. Regalia must still be inside, though he had thought she was following him.

Walser and neighbor Tatum entered the smoke-filled house to search, though they had no masks. They took turns groping through the hallway and kitchen, then going outside for fresh air. Alaimo also joined the search.

Walser and the firemen who had arrived by then "tried to knock the fire back into the kitchen" with hoses, to aid the search.

Tatum finally found Mrs. Regalia on the master bedroom floor and dragged her to another bedroom farther from the flames, Walser said. Alaimo found Tatum nearly overcome by smoke, and helped him remove Mrs. Regalia, the chief said.

Mrs. Regalia was not breathing and had no heartbeat. Lang, a passerby, applied mouth-to-mouth resuscitation and chest massage until Terra Linda fireman James Alvarado, brought the department's portable resuscitator unit into use. She was revived after about four minutes, Walser said, and rushed by ambulance to Marin General Hospital.

Mrs. Regalia's husband and two daughters, Sally and Patty were treated for cuts, Walser said. Sally, who had been staying overnight at a neighbor's home, was injured trying to get into the blazing house to help hunt for her mother.

Chief Walser said the fire may have smoldered 24 hours or longer inside the structure. It started behind a faulty fireplace lining, he said. Heaviest damage was to the living room and kitchen; Walser said the damage was estimated at $25,000 to the home and $15,000 to its contents. A car in the carpot could not be moved because of antitheft devices and also was damaged, Walser said.

Marinite To Prison In LSD Case

I-J Special Report

UKIAH — The last Marin man to be sentenced in connection with a huge LSD raid in Fort Bragg last June yesterday was sent to state prison.

Judge Kenneth M. Eyemann of Sonoma County sitting in Mendocino Superior Court sentenced Michael B. Alwyn, 23, of San Rafael, to a term of one to 10 years for possessing the illegal drug.

Alwyn had also been found guilty by a jury in March of conspiracy to make LSD and attempting to manufacture it, but the judge suspended sentences on those two counts while the case is appealed.

Also sent to prison earlier were Craig B. Champie, 21, of Fairfax, and Timothy Wayne Buler, 24, of Forest Knolls. John Rene Rodigou, 22, of San Rafael, was sent to the California Rehabilitation Center for drug addiction treatment.

The men were arrested June 16 along with three other persons in what police described as a $3 million LSD ring raid.

Supermarkets Stock Over 6,000 Items

NEW YORK (UPI)—The average supermarket is bulging with 6,000 to 8,000 food items.

Of the thousands of items in the grocery, 60 per cent have been introduced since World War II. More than 5,000 new items come along annually.

45 S. Sonoma Seniors Awarded Scholarships

Forty-five Southern Sonoma High School students and two from Marin have been awarded Frank P. and Polly O'Meara Doyle scholarships for the 1971-72 year at Santa Rosa Junior College.

The awards, which went to a total of 320 students, range from $100 to $1,000, based on scholastic ability and financial need.

Southern Sonoma recipients are:

Petaluma High School — David Arnett, Donna Bergstedt, Michael Blote, Kathleen Brians, Joyce Bynum, Dianne Deckert, John Digiusto, Wendy Dragoo, Nanci Dunbar, Karen Feiling, Michael Fornaciari, Debra Guidet, Kathleen Kameoka, Daniel Keller, Deborah Lubbers, Linda Mossi, Christing Nelson, Scott Nelson, Debra Pereira, Shepard Porter, Jane Ringstad, Craig Sunada, Norman Sweeney, David Thomas, Lois Toavs, Nancy Turner, Diane Vlastos, Bruce Wedan, Kenneth West.

St. Vincent High School, Petaluma — Angela Leoni and Patricia Dettling.

Tomales High School — Daniel Furlong and Valentina Vera Aktsinov.

A Paper Memo Used To Report Growing Files

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Deputy Defense Secretary David Packard said Thursday the Pentagon was being inundated with paper and that something had to be done about it.

So he ordered an immediate campaign to clean out overstuffed files —he cited a figure of 12 million cubic feet of records in Defense Department offices —and halted further purchases of new filing equipment until the end of 1973.

"We are accumulating more records than we get rid of by retirement or destruction," Packard told Pentagon employees. "This has created a requirement for purchasing new filing equipment each year just to satisfy the increase. We cannot afford to let this trend continue."

Packard's remarks were circulated to Pentagon employees by a paper memo.

Burglary Count Arraignment

Ronald Berg Goodrich, 21, of Larkspur, was arraigned yesterday in Marin Municipal Court on a charge of burglary.

A preliminary hearing was set for June 1.

Goodrich was arrested Wednesday after he and another man were reported seen leaving a Corte Madera home, police said.

The other man escaped, but in Goodrich's pocket were several half dollars believed stolen from another Corte Madera residence early Wednesday, according to police.

Marin Fifth In Property Tax Rate

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — Marin County had the fifth highest average property tax rate of any California county, the 16th highest assessed valuation, and taxed its property owners the 12th highest for 1970-71, State Board of Equalization member William M. Bennett of Kentfield reported yesterday.

Marin's total property taxes during the 1970-71 fiscal year amounted to $68.3 million, or $328.52 per person. The average property tax rate in the county came to 11.31 per $100 assessed valuation, up 60 cents from fiscal 1969-70, Bennett reported. Statewide, the average county's tax rate rose 93 cents to $10.85 per $100 assessed valuation.

The per captita tax burden rose from $248 to $284 statewide.

In only seven California counties did school districts get a larger share of the property tax dollar. In Marin County, schools got 61 cents of each property tax dollar; statewide the average was 52 cents.

Marin's property tax dollar was split to give the county government 24 cents, cities 8 cents and special districts 7 cents. All of the shares except special district and schools were below statewide norms.

Of the total property tax collected in Marin, the schools got $41.7 million, the cities $5.7 million, the county $16.4 million and special districts $4.5 million, Bennett reported.

Chamber Group At Dominican Slates Concert

The Dominican College Chamber Orchestra conducted by Richard Anastasio will present the second concert of the academic year at 8 p.m. Friday in Angelico Hall on the San Rafael campus.

The program will include Mozart's Concerto No. 3, K.V. 216, with violinist Noriko Sano as guest soloist; Prokofieff's Classical Symphony, Opus, 25; Mendelssohn's Concerto In E Minor, Opus 64, with violinist Mark Jordan as soloist, and Mozart's Symphony No. 41.

The 36-member orchestra includes adult musicians and students from Dominican's Preparatory School of Music.

Anastasio is a cellist with the Oakland Symphony Orchestra and a graduate of the Juilliard School of Music in New York.

Pollution Control Aide To Speak

Paul Brand, an enforcement officer with the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District, will speak at a meeting of the Sonoma County Mayors' and Councilmen's Association Thursday in Petaluma.

The southern portion of the county is to join the district July 1.

The meeting, at Sonoma Joe's restaurant, will begin with cocktails at 6:30 p.m., followed by a 7 p.m. dinner.

DRAMA REVIEW

Dunn's Collegians Reach New Heights In A World Premiere

By JAMES E. WILLIAMS

The College of Marin drama department reached a new height last night in its already illustrious career with the world premiere of Joel Schwartz's "Psalms of Two Davids."

It is without a doubt the most interesting evening of theater that I have encountered this season and chalks up another star by the side of director James Dunn's name.

Presented under the auspices of the Rockefeller Foundation's Office for Advance Drama Research, it gives the chance for a look at a highly promising young New York playwright.

Stated simply it was a first rate job. No better theater can be found in the Bay Area, even overshadowing the few excellent presentations this season by the American Conservatory Theater of San Francisco.

Those are big words, but to see is to believe.

The playwright — in what he terms his first "historical" drama — uses the Old Testament as the primary source, tracing the development of David, the young shepherd-king of Israel from his youth in King Saul's court to his maturity and his spiritual crisis.

David's plight seems familiar to modern man and Schwartz's dialogue is highly imaginative and becomes more refined as the play progresses. It's very seldom that I find myself so immersed in a production that I hate to see it end — but 'David" does just that.

In a design to keep the pace of the play at a constant peak and not lose the impact of Schwartz's line, Dunn and his production team hit upon a brilliant idea — the use of the economical Kabuki Theater style where a principal set is used, thus giving a chance for greater development of the play's inner qualities.

As David in his reign, Mark Rasmussen had an inner quality that I have not seen in his acting before. The struggle of this Godly man, torn between love, duty and divine guidance is a tapestry of Rasmussen's talent in diction, understanding and movement.

Joel Blum, who is David as a young man in Part One of the play, is on equal footing with Rasmussen. His vocal training paid off handsomely in his songs to Saul and his graceful stage manner produced the serenity needed.

Joining the pair for another brava performance was Gregory Norgaard, as the aging and insane King Saul. His lamentations were almost perfect.

John Evans as both Jonathan, son of Saul, and as David's son Absalom was also a present surprise as well as was Pamela Contos as Saul's daughter Michal and David's ill-fated daughter Tamar. Robin Williams as Amnon was pitifully correct and Reynold Acevedo carried off the roles of the prophets Samuel and Nathan very well.

The supporting characters, who remain on the stage throughout the performance, add greatly to the innovative style of short sequences — the major key to the play's swiftness.

Again Alonso D. Gonzalez's settings and costumes are of the highest quality backed by restful lighting by Ronald Kermpetz and stylized music by Thomas Buckner. Also Edward K. Schoon's technical and stage construction assistance was clearly evident.

I stronly urge serious theater patrons to make an effort to see this engrossing play. It will be presented again today at 8 o'clock in the college's Fine Arts Building Theater and next Tuesday through Saturday at the same time.

"PSALMS OF TWO DAVIDS" — Play in two parts by Joel Schwartz; directed by James Dunn; settings and costumes by Alonso D. Gonzalez; lighting by Ronald Krempertz; music by Thomas Buckner. The cast: Part One: Samuel, Reynold Acevedo; King Saul, Gregory Norgaard; Jonatnan, John Evans, Michal, Pamela Contos, and David (as a young man), Joel Blum. Part Two: Nathan, Reynold Acevedo; King David, Mark Rasmussen' Absalom, John Evans; Tamar, Pamela Contos, and Amnon, Robin Williams. Chorus: Rick Casorla, J. W. Harper, Shelly Lipkin, Howard McMaster, Denise Orr, Alice Rorvik, H. J. Susser, Roxanne Wilkinson; soldiers; John Chapot, Alan Monroe, Todd Norris, Louis Parnell, Ernie Shelton, Reg Woods; musician, Wayne Burke and property men, Alan Kernan, Bruce Swenson.

Drug Case To Superior Court

Three men arrested in a 1969 raid on a Tamalpais Valley motel have been bound over to Marin Superior Court on dope charges.

Ordered to appear in superior court May 24 were David Stuart King, 26, of Billings, Mont.; Jeffrey David Wyard, 26, of Missoula, Mont., and George S. Garr, 23, of no known address.

They were arrested in a Dec. 16, 1969, raid on the Fountain Motel in which narcotics agents said they seized more than $24,000 worth of hashish.

King and Wyard are charged with possessing the drug for sale, and Garr is accused of possessing it.

Inverness-Point Reyes—1943

INVERNESS-POINT REYES LAND CO., INC.

663-1400

Spectacular, large, 3 bedroom, 2 bath home with fully equipped kitchen, dishwasher, garbage disposal, etc. Located on one acre which runs from Portola Road, Inverness, through to Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, overlooking thousands of acres of pasture on the valley floor and to Black Mountain. The house has a unique setting among a large grove of beautiful mature trees. The basement could be developed into many more rooms very easily. An outstanding buy for only $36,500.

Inverness Ridge retreat, one acre plus, among the pines with a full panoramic view over Limantour Spit, Drakes Bay, Point Reyes headlands, Farallon Islands and the whole Pacific, and that's just one view from the southwest side of the house. Looking the other way, you're looking right down on the National Seashore headquarters, Bear Valley Road and the old town of Olema with a glimpse on clear days of San Francisco. You can enjoy all this while living in a well-built, 2 bedroom, 1 bath home, all rooms generous in size with living room, dining room extra large. Large, attached double garage. Lots of fruit trees and pine trees with most of the acre almost level. There are very few locations along the Inverness Ridge that command the vista of this home. Well-priced for only $42,500.

Inverness mesa 3-story chalet set high among the Bishop pines with beautiful wood paneling throughout, open-beam ceilings, generous decks. This older home nearly completely remodeled recently, taking full advantage of all the charm of the unique older Inverness cabins. First floor, 1 bedroom; second floor, large living room plus 2 bedrooms, bath and kitchen with beautiful sundecks; third floor, private outside entrance, quite lovely attic loft sleeping room. Gets lots of sun all day. $31,500. Shown by appointment only.

We are looking for someone who appreciates and loves Shell Beach and whose children will use this unique semi-private beach that was originally set up for the enjoyment and use of Inverness residents. Also, this person or persons will have to have always wanted a beautiful building lot that is quite close to Shell Beach and has a giant oak that needs climbing and a good place for a tree house. Also, this lot should have other woods, but not too many, a nice meadow area for the house that will have a beautiful view down over Chicken Ranch Beach of Tomales Bay. Naturally, all this must have sun all day long till late into the afternoon. If all of this fits any of your fantasies, give us a call, because we have a beautiful lot that meets all of the above requirements. For only $12,500.

Perfect home or weekend retreat on Inverness ridge, 2 bedrooms, large living room-dining room, nice fireplace, lots of glass, full decks, all set on an acre plus overlooking Mt. Wittenburg, Bear Valley, Drakes Bay, Farallon Islands and Point Reyes. There is an additional area downstairs over half the size of the whole house partially finished with all the rough plumbing in, windows and floors finished; it would take very little effort to finish off two more bedrooms with an additional bathroom and laundry room. Priced well under its true value. For only $32,000.

BAYSIDE ESTATE

Approach this enchanting property on your own private road. This fine older home has the warmth and beauty that blends with a wooded acre of land and a magnificent marine view. Located at beautiful Bayside Acres. Flagstone paths wander thru the property — one leading to a secluded filterej pool and patio. This gracious home is in excellent condition and includes 5 bdrms. and 4 baths. The huge living room, formal dining room and family room all capture a magnificent unobstructed bay view. The charming kitchen includes a breakfast room and pantry. Wandering over the landscaped grounds, lawns and patios, and living on this property, will give you the feeling of being on a constant vacation. A social hall big enough for a pool table and a ping pong table complete this country estate. Offered at $79,500.

Round On Agriculture Lot Sizes

Should the minimum lot size on county land now zoned agricultural be increased to half acre, to two acres, or somewhere in between?

That question will be discussed by the Marin County Planning Commissioners Monday morning at their regular meeting at the Civic Center.

At present, agricultural land can be divided into lots of 7,500 square feet. County Planning Director Werner Von Gundell recommended that the minimum be raised to two acres, but commissioners rejected that by a 4 to 3 vote on April 26. They decided to discuss the question again tomorrow to see if they can agree on a size somewhere between a half acre and two acres.

Other items on the commission agenda include:

NICASIO SUBDIVISION — A request by Cirilo Gonzales to rezone his ranch on the south side of Lucas Valley Road, east of Nicasio. He wants 164 acres zoned for minimum five-acre lots, and agreed to a minimum lot size of 20 acres on 220 acres of his property.

APARTMENTS — Transcalifornia Financial Corporation wants to build 66 units of apartments in Los Ranchitos, on the east side of Los Ranchitos Road at Glenside Way. Residents have filed protest.

WATER TANK — Allan-Marin Co., developer of Marinview subdivision in Tennessee Valley, wants to build a 20-foot high water tank with a capacity of 150,000 gallons on Countyview Drive in Marinview unit 3-A.

RANCHITOS ESTATES — San Rafael developer Paul H. Debes will submit a tentative subdivision map for six lots on 6.3 acres at the corner of Ranch Road and Ranchitos Road in Los Ranchitos.

OLIVE AVE. IMPROVEMENT-PROJECT NO. 083
SIR FRANCIS DRAKE BLVD. (LAGUNITAS) PROJECT NO. 070
RESURFACING OF VARIOUS ROADS-PROJECT NO. 074

MARIN COUNTY DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WORKS
SAN RAFAEL, CALIFORNIA
NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS INVITING SEALED PROPOSALS OR BIDS

Sealed Proposals shall be filed with George H. Gnoss, Clerk of the Board of Supervisors, Room 315, Marin County Civic Center, San Rafael, California, until 11:00 A.M., May 24, 1971, for:

Roadway improvement and resurfacing of various roads or portions of roads in Marin County, involving earth excavation and embankment, drainage facilities, asphalt concrete base and surface, adjusting manholes and inlets to grade, installing guard railings and marker posts, and other related items of work.

The work shall be done in accordance with official plans and specifications prepared in reference thereto which may be inspected at the office of the Department of Public Works, County of Marin, Room 304, Civic Center, San Rafael, California, and may be purchased for $3.00 per set (non-refundable). Mailed requests shall be addressed to the Department of Public Works, County of Marin, P.O. Box 4186, Civic Center, San Rafael, California, 94903. Checks should be made payable to the County of Marin.

Proposals will be opened and read at 11:00 A.M., in Room No. 332, Marin County Civic Center, on the day specified above.

The award of the contract, if it be awarded, will be to the lowest responsible bidder whose proposal complies with the requirements prescribed. The award, if made, will be made within thirty (30) days after the opening of the proposals.

The Board of Supervisors has made a determination of the prevailing rate of hourly wages applicable to the work to be performed. Copies of this determination are on file in the office of the County Clerk, Civic Center, Room 315, San Rafael, California, and are available to any interested party upon request. Copies may be obtained from the Department of Public Works, Room, 304, Civic Center.

The Board of Supervisors of the County of Marin reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

Magic Show Opens Tonight

Medieval magic will fill Vallecito School during the next two weekends as students and staff create a 600-year-old setting, including a musical fairy tale, "Once Upon a Mattress."

The show will be at 8 p.m. today, May 14 and 15 and at 7 p.m. May 16 at the school on 50 Nova Albion Way in San Rafael. Preceding the show for an hour is an old-time "faire" with strolling musicians, story tellers, arts, crafts, games, booths and a dancing bear.

Large Window At Shop Is Broken

A large window at Kabbalah, a shop located at 918 B Street in San Rafael, was broken yesterday, police reported.

They said the window was broken at 1 a.m. by William W. Fearn, 21, of 23 Vallejo Way, who was taken to Marin General Hospital with a badly cut hand. Fearn, according to police, said he was a former mental patient. He was not held and told police he could not explain why he broke the window.

Deadline Near On GI Bill Education Cards

Marin veterans attending school under the GI bill must return their certification of attendance cards to the veterans administration by the end of this month.

James V. Burdick, director of Marin's Veterans Services, said the certification of attendance cards will be sent to veterans along with the check for the month of May. That card must be filled out and returned to the V.A.

Failure to comply will stop payments on future monthly benefits, said Burdick. If neglected, the administration cannot prepare a final check for the current semester, and the student cannot automatically be enrolled under the program for the upcoming summer or fall semesters.

Tam High Students Have Art Exhibit

The art can be seen from 3 to 5 and 7 to 9 p.m. weekdays and from 2 to 5 p.m. Saturday.

WENDY PORTRAYS HER FAMILY

An artist known only as "Wendy" is among the pupils from West End School whose pictures are on display this week at the San Rafael Library. Wendy has apparently not included herself in her drawing of "My Family," in which the ages of her mother, father, little brother and sister are carefully lettered above each one's head.

Turns Down Subsidizing Attendance

The Fairfax City Council in a 15-minute meeting last night voted 3-to-2 against subsidizing any council attendance at next week's League of California Cities legislative seminar in Sacramento.

Mayor Cornelis Van Vliet reported today that the councilmen with very little discussion defeated two motions: one which would have appropriated $240 to send three councilmen to Sacramento; one which would have appropriated $84 to pay the $28-per-person seminar fee.

Councilmen Robert R. Sousa and Lee Nelder, who had been designated to attend the seminar, joined Francis J. O'Connell to defeat the subsidy. Frank J. Egger was the third councilman designated to go.

No other matter was discussed at the brief special meeting, according to Mayor Van Vliet.

Agnew Aide Sees Protests Led By Trotskyite Reds

CINCINNATI (UPI)—An assistant to Vice President Spiro T. Agnew said Thursday the antiwar demonstrations in Washington were "Communist organized and led."

David Keene, 26, an assistant to the vice president on political affairs, told a Women's republican club the leaders of the demonstrations "are not pacifists, but are consciously doing Hanoi's work and are dedicated to the destruction of this country."

The National Peace Action Council, one of the organizing groups, "is almost completely dominated by Trotskyite-Communists dedicated to violent revolution at home," Keene said.

Flood Zone Budget Set At $318,300

A $318,300 budget for 1971-72, cut by $10,000 with the elimination of funds for study of a creek, has been approved by the Mill Valley Flood Control Zone Advisory board.

The budget, which will require about the same tax rate as this year's 23 cents per $100 assessed valuation, will be forwarded to the Marin County Board of Supervisors for final approval.

Lewis E. Fredrickson, County Flood Control engineer, said the advisory board Thursday agreed on the spending program recommended by the staff, minus $10,000 to study Ryan Creek drainage problems.

Fredrickson said sufficient studies of the creek have been made and further ones are no longer necessary.

Major items in the budget include: Coyote Creek dredging, $100,000; Scott Valley flood control bypass, $60,000; Patricia Lane box culvert, $50,000, and Camino Alto bridge $30,000.

Of the budget total, $173,200 will come from carryover funds from the current fiscal year, Fredrickson said, leaving $145,100 to be raised by property taxes.

The board set another meeting for 8 p.m. May 27 at Mill Valley City Hall to discuss a number of matters including the Sutton Manor drainage plan, a policy resolution on which creeks should be maintained with zone funds and the Alto bypass.

Four East Bay Men In Robbery

Four East Bay men were booked at the Marin County jail yesterday in connection with a $7,000 armed robbery Monday in San Rafael.

Booked on suspicion of armed robbery, possession of stolen property and car theft were:

Bail was set at $12,500 each and they were scheduled to appear in Marin Municipal Court Monday.

Judy Sherman, 23, of Martinez, was arrested along with the four men, but wasn't booked at the Marin County jail.

The four men were arrested yesterday in Martinez in connection with the robbery at the home apartment of James Emery Olah of 16 Ross Street.

San Rafael police said Olah was held at gunpoint and then bound and a pillowcase put over his head while two men wearing ski masks over their faces ransacked his apartment for four hours.

Stereo equipment valued at $4,000 and Olah's car, valued at $3,000 were taken, police reported. The arrests were made after Martinez police received a tip that the stolen car was in the garage at the Martinez home.

The car and about $1,500 worth of stereo equipment was recovered, police said.

Five Are Inducted In April

Five men were inducted into the armed forces in April by the Marin Selective Service Board, executive secretary Joy M. Kinzer reported yesterday.

She said 60 men had been ordered to report during the month, but 22 failed to report, five refused induction and five were rejected.

Orders for three of the inductees were canceled; six were classified 1-SC (student deferment); six transferred to other boards; two given new orders to report in May and three postponed indefinitely, and three were awaiting completion of their physical examinations, Mrs. Kinzer said.

Two others enlisted in the military services.

The names of the five who refused induction and the 22 who failed to report were withheld pending possible judicial action.

The five inducted were Barry H. Witman of Santa Rosa, Brian S. Telford and James B. Hill of Novato, Michael C. Beaver of Mill Valley and Coleman M. Shew of Larkspur.

Orders have gone to 37 Marin men to report this month, Mrs. Kinzer said. She said she did not yet know the draft lottery number for June.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Today The Headache Is Too Vague Because Of Many Manifestations

Headache made aspirin a household word 100 years ago. Nowadays headache is tovague a diagnosis because there are many causes for the manifestation. Unless the origin of the pain is known, even the best drugs are worthless. Books have been written on all types of headache. The pain may originate within the brain or from outside the skull, such as from scalp muscles or sinuses. Though most headaches are of vascular origin, they may be caused by a brain tumor or infection, dental disorder, or neuralgia, such as tic douloureux. Distress may last moments or hours. In some conditions, pain is persistent.

RELIEF OBVIOUSLY depends upon eliminating the cause. Common tension headaches, for example, usually are traced to job tensions stemming from repressed hostilities. Learning how to 'roll with the punches' or relax is most helpful. Tic douloureux frequently responds to anticonvulsants, among which are carbamazepine, diphenylhydantoin and chlorphenesin.

MIGRAINE IS a periodic disorder that usually develops on one side of the head. Irritability, nausea and photophobia may also ensue. The bout may be preceded by visual defects, flushing of the face, or weakness of an arm or leg. The pain is throbbing in nature and caused by an intense stretching of the cerebral vessels. Ergotamine, alone or in combination with caffeine, is the best remedy.

SEVERAL YEARS ago a relationship was established between migraine and the hormone, serotonin. This led to the development of methysergide, a product with antiserotonin properties. It and related drugs are used to prevent attacks of migraine. The chemical is not effective once the distress begins. Side effects include muscle pains and cramps, coldness of the limbs, nausea, and abdominal discomfort. Pregnant women and those with liver, kidney and heart trouble should not use methysergide.

FOODS AND BONES

S. L. writes: Are there any special foods that will help healing of a broken bone?

REPLY

None, assuming you are eating a variety of foods including those containing calcium. Delay in the healing of a fractured bone is more common in older persons with poor circulation. Other deterrents to the healing process include a poor job of setting the fracture, or of immobilizing the broken ends, and when tissues or other materials get caught between the bone ends.

QUIT NAGGING

N. W. J. writes: Please write something about people who eat too fast. My wife takes a bite of meat, chews once or twice, and swallows. I have told her that the habit is giving her headaches. Please advise.

REPLY

I doubt if this is causing your wife's headaches, unless of course, they stem from the agitation brought on by your constant nagging.

DIABETES

R. T. writes: My diabetes is controlled by diet but whenever I have even a slight indisposition, the sugar level goes up and I have to take insulin. Why does this happen?

REPLY

Diabetes is aggravated by many illnesses, accidents and operations. Adjustments in therapy are needed during times of stress.

Today's Health Hint—A simple, balanced diet is best.

History Of Communes Is Traced

Ordinances defining a family as blood-related persons are seen as westernized "Jim Crow" laws by Albert Solnit, chief of advance planning in the Marin County Planning Department, in an article in the April 26 issue of the Nation.

Solnit is author of "Wear and Tear in the Communes" in the nationally circulated weekly. It traces the history of the "commune" type of living, quotes from U.S. Judge Albert C. Wollenberg's decision in a Palo Alto case upholding a zoning law definition of family and recites the difficulties encountered by one unmarried couple in a Mill Valley "commune." It concludes:

"Thoughtful people began to wonder if the Old South's Jim Crow had been resurrected as the totem of law and order in the West. As the polarization and social alienation between long-haired youth and the straight community grows, should the long hairs be relegated to a ghetto of their own? Will they then burn their way toward equal rights as the blacks did in Watts, or does someone in power have a better idea?"

Absentee Voters Can Get Ballots Starting Monday

Absentee ballots for the June 8 Petaluma municipal election will be available beginning Monday from the Santa Rosa office of Eugene D. Williams, county clerk and registrar of voters.

June 1 is the last day absentee ballot applications will be taken, Williams said. Voters may apply by mail or at Williams's office in the county Hall of Justice.

Mail applications must contain a voter's registered address, the address to which the ballot should be mailed and must be signed and dated, officials said.

Undercover Agent Enters Pot Plea

Michael G. Edmond, a San Francisco undercover narcotics agent, pleaded innocent yesterday in Marin Municipal Court to charges of possessing and cultivating marijuana and possessing narcotics paraphernalia.

Edmond, 23, of Sausalito, is to return to court Monday for setting of a date for hearing of defense motions and for a preliminary hearing.

Two roommates of Edmond were arraigned on the same charges Wednesday. They were set to plead May 26, but that date will probably be changed because Edmond yesterday refused to waive his right to a speedy trial.

Edmond's roommates were arrested Sunday when Sausalito police went to their apartment after complaint by neighbors of loud music.

The suspected pot and equipment were found in the apartment, police said.

Edmond was not at home Sunday but turned himself into authorities on a warrant Tuesday.

Contrary to an earlier story in the Independent-Journal, Edmond has not been suspended from his duties, a spokesman for San Francisco Police Chief Alfred J. Nelder said yesterday.

The officer is still working, the spokesman said.

Man Believed Bridge Jumper

A Belmont man apparently jumped to his death from the Golden Gate Bridge early today, the California Highway Patrol reported.

Patrolmen said two witnesses reported seeing a northbound car whose driver was later identified as Kevin Vincent McCarthy, 22, stop on the bridge shortly after midnight. The witnesses said the man ran from the car to the east rail. Their description of the man was later confirmed by his mother, patrolmen said.

Pleads Innocent To Two Counts

Alexnader A. Ziburtovicz, 23, of San Anselmo, pleaded innocent yesterday in Marin Municipal Court to misdemeanor charges of indecent exposure and soliciting lewd conduct.

He is to return to court next Friday for setting of a trial date.

ANNA JARVIS'
BIRTHPLACE
Anna Jarvis was born here 5-1-1864. Through her efforts President Wilson designated in 1914 the second Sunday in May as Mother's Day. She died 11-24-1948 and was buried in West Laurel Hill Cemetery, Bala-Cynwyd, Pennsylvania.

HISTORIC SITE—A nonprofit organization has been formed to raise funds to turn Andrews Methodist Church (right) at Grafton, W. Va., — where Mother's Day began May 12, 1907 — into an international shrine. At left is a roadside historical marker on U.S. routes 119-250, locating the birthplace of Anna Jarvis, the spinster "mother" of the national observance.

MOTHER'S DAY CHURCH

Shrine Is Being Planned

GRAFTON, W. Va. (UPI)—Services are held only once a year in the 98-year-old Andrews Methodist Church —on Mother's Day.

Andrews' former congregation outgrew the old building and moved to new quarters, but the church never will outlive its contribution to history as the "Mother Church of Mother's Day."

A nonprofit organization has been formed to raise funds to turn the church where Mother's Day which will be observed tomorrow, began into an international shrine that will pay homage not only to the mothers of the world but also to Anna Jarvis, the spinster "mother" of the national Mother's Day observance.

Miss Jarvis grew up in Grafton, and the family moved to Philadelphia in 1902 after her father died. Miss Jarvis' mother died in 1905. It was shortly after Mrs. Jarvis' death that her daughter began her crusade to have one day a year set aside for honoring the mothers of the world. She was aided by the support of wealthy Philadelphia merchant John Wanamaker.

The first observance of Mother's Day was held in Andrews Methodist Church in Grafton on May 12, 1907, the Sunday closest to the anniversary of Mrs. Jarvis' death.

The tradition of wearing carnations on the day also began with Miss Jarvis, who sent some 500 white carnations to her home church on that first observance.

Through letters and personal appeals and unflagging perseverance, Miss Jarvis eventually persuaded President Woodrow Wilson in 1914 to declare the second Sunday in May as Mother's Day. Wilson ordered the flag to be displayed on all U.S. government buildings on that day and an Alabama congressman commented:

It was in a 1952 session of the General Conference of the Methodist Church that Andrews was formally recognized as the "Mother Church of Mother's Day," with the recommendation it become a shrine. Ten years later a nonprofit corporation was chartered by the State of West Virginia to acquire ownership and control of the "Mother Church of Mother's Day Shrine."

To date two city blocks have been acquired and cleared, restoration of the church is under way and plans include landscaping the grounds and planting floral gardens. Members of the West Virginia Florists Association are contemplating assuming responsibility for planting and maintaining the two block area that surrounds the church.

Since the corporation was formed between $2,000 and $3,000 a year has been raised to restore and maintain the church, but local residents are disappointed there has not been more widespread interest in the project.

The church is open to the public daily, which would have pleased Miss Jarvis. She died in 1948, and in the last years of her life vigorously opposed commercial exploitation of Mother's Day.

Couple To Be Feted At Dinner

The Marin Jewish Community will honor Mr. and Mrs. William Rubin of Greenbrae at a dinner next Sunday at 7 p.m. at Congregation Rodef Sholom, 170 North San Pedro Road, San Rafael.

The couple, longtime residents of Marin County, have been active in building Congregation Rodef Sholom and the Jewish Community Center.

Rubin has served as chairman many years for Jewish Welfare Federation campaign in Marin.

Mrs. Rubin has been a leader in Hadassah as well as a member of the women's board of governors of the Israel Bond Drive.

Special Rites

Congregation Rodef Sholom will hold Lag B'Omer services next Sunday at 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. at its temple, 170 North San Pedro Road in San Rafael.

Silver Jubilee Of Fatima On Thursday

The silver jubilee of the crowning of Our Lady Queen of the World at Fatima by Pope XII will be observed at St. Raphael's Catholic Church on Thursday with services beginning at 9 a.m.

Opening rites will include a procession, crowning of the Pilgrim Virgin, rosary, homily and an act of consecration. The rosary will be recited throughout the day until 5 p.m.

Admission Day For New Novato Church

The newly organized Orthodox Presbyterian Church of Novato will hold admission day services at 8 p.m. Thursday in the Adventist Church building on San Marin Drive.

Organization of the church comes a year after Rev. Robert H. Graham began conducting services at the request of two couples. Graham has been voted permanent pastor and will be installed during the services.

Principal speakers will be Rev. Richard L. Lewis, pastor of the Covenant Church in Berkeley, which has been sponsor of the new church, and Rev. Robert K. Churchill of the Orthodox Presbyterian Church in Sonora. A reception will follow the services.

According to Graham, the church is committed to the historic standards of Presbyterian, namely the Bible as God's infallible word and the Westminister Confession of Faith and Catechisms.

Lutheran Layman To Unit In Jerusalem

NEW YORK (LC) — Wayne C. Frickson, a Lutheran layman from Portola Valley, Calif., has been named to the Jerusalem staff of the Department of World Service of the Lutheran World Federation.

Scheduled to assume his new duties this month, the 44-year-old investment specialist will serve as administrator of the village health program operated by the LWF on the West Bank of Jordan.

NO CONTROVERSY

Ex-Chicago Pastor To Join Seminary Staff As Lecturer

A clergyman, charged before a Senate subcommittee with allowing Black Chicago street gangs to use his church as an arsenal, will lecture during the coming school year at the San Francisco Theological Seminary at San Anselmo.

"I don't expect any controversy," seminary President Arnold B. Come said yesterday in announcing the approval of Rev. John R. Fry as a one-year lecturer.

Come said Fry is expected to arrive at the seminary at the end of June and will begin teaching a social ethics course in October.

He said Fry will spend about half his time teaching and the other half studying and writing. He currently teaches part time at the McCormick Theological Seminary in Chicago.

Fry, a 46-year-old white minister, resigned April 5 from his position as pastor of Chicago's First Presbyterian Church, one day before 23 members of a black street gang he worked with were indicted on federal charges of misappropriating funds intended for a training program for ghetto youths.

He was charged before a 1968 Senate subcommittee as having allowed the Blackstone Rangers — now known as the P. Stone Nation — to store arms in his church. Witnesses also testified that he condoned drug parties and encouraged gang members to get into the extortion racket.

All charges were labeled unfounded by the governing bodies of his church and the Presbytery of Chicago.

Come said the seminary received a grant for Fry to teach there from the Board of National Missions of the Presbyterian Church, U.S.A.

"As far as the church is concerned," Come said yesterday, "the charges were unfounded."

He said controversy surrounding Fry was "the fiction of the Senate committee and the newspapers," and had been "blown up out of nothing."

"He's coming here to teach," Come added.

Mill Valley Church Sets Special Rites

The Methodist Church of Mill Valley will observe Mother's Day with the rite of baptism and special music at its 11 a.m. service tomorrow.

Three choirs will perform according to J. Stephen Taylor, director of music. A member of Mill Valley's Church of Our Saviour, Episcopal, Taylor will feature works by Dr. S. Drummond Wolff, director of that church's choir.

Helping Taylor with the special music will be Michael T. Brown of San Anselmo, organist, who along with Taylor formed the church's musical team six months ago.

Besides selections by Taylor's chancel choir, special music will be presented by the handbell choir guided by Robert Burgan of Corte Madera and the new guitar, percussion and voice choir directed by Richard Christensen, a student at San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo.

Apostolic Study

ST. PAUL, Minn. (LC) — Apostolic succession, a traditionally thorny issue between Lutherans and Episcopalians, was explored here in mid-April by churchmen from the two communions.

Pre-School Bible Sessions Announced

A Bible school for pre-school children — 3 to 5 — will be held at Grace Lutheran Church in Novato, beginning Monday with three weekly meetings through May 28.

The sessions will be held Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m.

Theme of the programs will be "The Christian Family" with stories, worship, games, handcrafts, singing and refreshments.

Teachers for the school will be Mrs. Carol Cooper, Gretchen Beyer, Jackie Johnson, Joleen Ordt and Delores Sickles.

A slight fee will be charged and registration can be made at the opening session.

The church is located at 1787 Grant Avenue.

A Slight Dip In Benevolence Giving

MINNEAPOLIS UPI — A slight dip is reported in general benevolence receipts of the American Lutheran Church for the fiscal year ended Jan. 31. Offerings totaled $20,964,459. 54, a decline of $115,744.87 — less than 1 per cent — from the previous year's total of $21,080,194.41.

Dr. George S. Schultz, executive secretary of the denomination's Board of Trustees said the decrease was more than compensated for in the total giving by the church's 2.5 million members of $582,485.57 for "Project Neighbor," a fund drive started in 1970 to finance special causes.

10,000 To Join In Mission Program

SPRINGFIELD, MO. UPI — More than 10,000 Assemblies of God young people, ages 16-24, will take part in the denomination's sixth annual Ambassadors in Mission (AIM) program, a gospel witnessing effort, this year.

Pro Cage Leagues Ask Congress To Approve Merger

NEW YORK (UPI)—The National and American Basketball Associations Friday authorized their merger committees to engage counsel to represent both circuits in Washington and institute immediate action to bring a consolidation of the NBA and ABA before Congress.

The two leagues also agreed to allow their teams to meet each other in pre-season games if they so desire.

The alignments of both leagues would remain the same, the present 17 team setup in the NBA and the 11 clubs in the ABA.

The indemnity each ABA club will play for the privilege of joining the NBA will be $1.2 million, except for the case of the Virginia Squires which vacated the Washington area territory to prevent a conflict with the Baltimore franchise.

The New York Nets, however, are allowed to co-exist with the Knicks.

A necessary 13 votes was obtained from the NBA Board of Governors to resume joint action with the ABA in seeking Congressional approval for creation of a single basketball league.

In June 1970, when both leagues had first agreed in principle to a merger, the amalgamation hinged on the ABA dismissing an anti-trust suit against the NBA.

"When, in November 1970, the suit had not been dismissed," said NBA commissioner Walter Kennedy, "the NBA announced it was discontinuing joint efforts for a merger with the ABA."

Kennedy said that the merger committees of both leagues had been meeting for the past month in an attempt to resolve all issues. The principal items were the dismissal of the law suit, which the ABA agreed to do, and a resolution of the problem of multiple signings.

"No total resolution was obtained for NBA players who have signed ABA contracts," Kennedy explained, "and they remain at a status quo where litigation prevails."

There are six players involved in "jumpings" from the NBA to the ABA, with only three players actually making the switch—Rick Barry from the San Francisco Warriors to the New York Nets, Zelmo Beaty from San Francisco to the Utah Stars, and Joe Caldwell from the Atlanta Hawks to the Carolina Cougars.

Billy Cunningham of the Philadelphia 76ers had signed a contract with Carolina but canceled the agreement when he said the Cougars reneged on paying him a proper amount. Cunningham subsequently signed a new contract with Philadelphia for approximately a half-million dollars.

Dave Bing of the Detroit Pistons had planned to move to the Virginia Squires, but also renegotiated a contract with Detroit and will remain in the NBA. The sixth player, Otto Moore, was traded from Detroit to Phoenix, but also had a pact with Virginia team of the ABA.

One remaining problem to be negotiated is the NBA Players Associations threatened law suit against the leagues, claiming a merger would be in violation of the anti-trust laws because it would eliminate competitive bidding for the players' services.

ABA Commissioner Jack Dolph said he was pleased the merger situation was "back on the track. We've been this far forward before, but I'm confident we can go all the way now.

"This agreement is far more reaching than we've had previously and we're all looking forward to working with our new partners."

MARIN LEAGUE BASEBALL

Redwood Sophs Sparkle In Extra-Inning Battle

By PAUL CANE

Two sophomore sensations combined to give the Redwood High School Giants a hard-fought 1-0 extra-inning win over the San Marin Mustangs in Larkspur yesterday, in one of the best played baseball games seen in the Marin County Athletic League this year.

Second year men Mike Connor and Gene Frey were the heroes for the Giants, who won their sixth MCAL game against three losses and a tie to remain in second place in the county.

In other MCAL games yesterday, Terra Linda bombed Drake, 10-3, Novato clubbed Tamalpais 6-0, and Marin Catholic took San Rafael 7-2.

With two out and two on in top of the seventh with a scoreless tie in Larkspur, Len Hoffman of San Marin blasted a long fly to deep right-center field, which looked as if it would bring in the two go-ahead runs. But not so. Center fielder Connor raced back and dragged the ball down to put down a possible game winning rally.

Neither team seriously threatened again until the bottom of the eighth, the first extra inning. Frey, who went all the way on the mound for Redwood, unloaded a 400-foot home run to left field which was good enough for the winning run.

Mustang hurler Ken Siler got the loss, despite giving up only two hits.

Terra Linda broke open a 2-2 tie with five runs in the bottom of the fourth against Drake to give pitcher Mike Sabel his third victory in as many decisions. A run scoring double by Bill Sherbert and a two run single by Jeff Allen highlighted the big rally, which did away with Pirate starter Lex Rzepelia.

Sabel went the distance, allowing six hits and single runs in the second, fourth and fifth innings. The Pirates got on the scoreboard first, but Jerry Seefeldt put the Trojans ahead with a two run home run to left in the bottom of the second.

Allen and Sherbert led Terra Linda with two hits apiece, while catcher Mike Bauman and rightfielder Tom Odetto did likewise for Drake.

Novato High increased its streak of defensive scoreless innings to 20 in the shutout over Tam. The Hornets' mound corps appears to be unstoppable, as Dave Judnick picked up his third victory without a defeat. Judnick is joined by Mike Lamb in comprising the league's leading pitching duo.

The Hornets put the game on ice in the beginning, with four runs in the very first frame. Judnick helped himself with a two-run double. The Novato hurler later added a second base hit to pace Hornet hitters, too.

In contrast to the remarkable perfection of the Redwood-San Marin game, there was Marin Catholic's win over San Rafael under the lights at Albert Park last night. Where the Giants and Mustangs did not commit an error in the eight inning contest, the Bulldogs and Wildcats made six errors, walked 11, had four passed balls, two batters hit by pitchers, and a wild pitch to boot.

Behind all this shabbiness, two Marin Catholic pitchers combined for a no-hit game. Mickey Simmons and Jim Petray did not allow a safety in between all the erros, with Petray coming off with the win.

Catcher Paul Riccardi took the hitting honors for the day, with two singles and a double for the Wildcats. He was joined by Petray, who smacked a long left field home run in fourth to climax Wildcat scoring.

FIVE-MAN TRADE

A's Get Ex-Cal Slugger Epstein

BALTIMORE (UPI) —Lefthanded pitcher Darold Knowles and hart-hitting first baseman Mike Epstein now play for the Oakland A's following several telephone conversations between Charles O. Finley and Bob Short on a rainy day.

The trade between the A's and Washington Senators was finalized late Friday night after the Oakland-Baltimore game was rained out.

Oakland gave up first baseman Don Mincher, catcher Frank Fernandez and lefthanded reliever Paul Lindblad. Knowles and Epstein are expected to join the A's today in Baltimore.

Epstein became a minor league home run terror after leaving the University of California at Berkeley. But he was unable to crack Baltimore's lineup and was traded to Washington in 1968 after much ballyhoo.

He hit 50 home runs in the last two seasons for the Senators but was unhappy at being platooned by manager Ted Williams. Epstein is hitting .250 with one home run this season.

"This makes it easier for us to get Frank Howard on first base," said Williams after the rade. Short, owner of the Senators, said he had discussed trading Epstein with Detroit, New York, Kansas City and Milwaukee but was unable to reach agreement.

However things began to develop when Finley, owner of the A's, got Short on the telephone.

Mincher, a much-traveled veteran, was batting .239 for the A's and off to a slow start with two homers and eight runs batted in. He hit 27 homers, his best production mark in the majors, and drove in 74 runs for Oakland last year.

But the real key, at least in the estimation of A's manager Dick Williams, was the acquisition of Knowles, a hardthrowing relief pitcher who Williams hopes will plug a big hole in the bullpen.

Knowles, one of the top relievers in the American League two seasons ago, slumped from 9-2 to 2-14 last season.

But Dick Williams notes that Knowles had 27 saves and a 2.04 earned-run average for the last-place Senators in 1970.

Williams also was unhappy with the performance of his three lefthanded relief pitchers —Lindblad, Rob Gardner and Jim Roland. Lindblad was 8-2 with the Athletics last season but had no decision this season.

Fernandez, who has seen little action behind Dave Duncan this season, was purchased by the A's from the New York Yankees two years ago. He hit 15 home runs and drove in 44 runs as a parttime performer for Oakland last year.

Back at the Orioles ballpark, Jim Hunter chases his fifth straight victory tonight against lefty Mike Cuellar (2-0) of the Orioles.

Novato Star Leads Arizona Golf Play

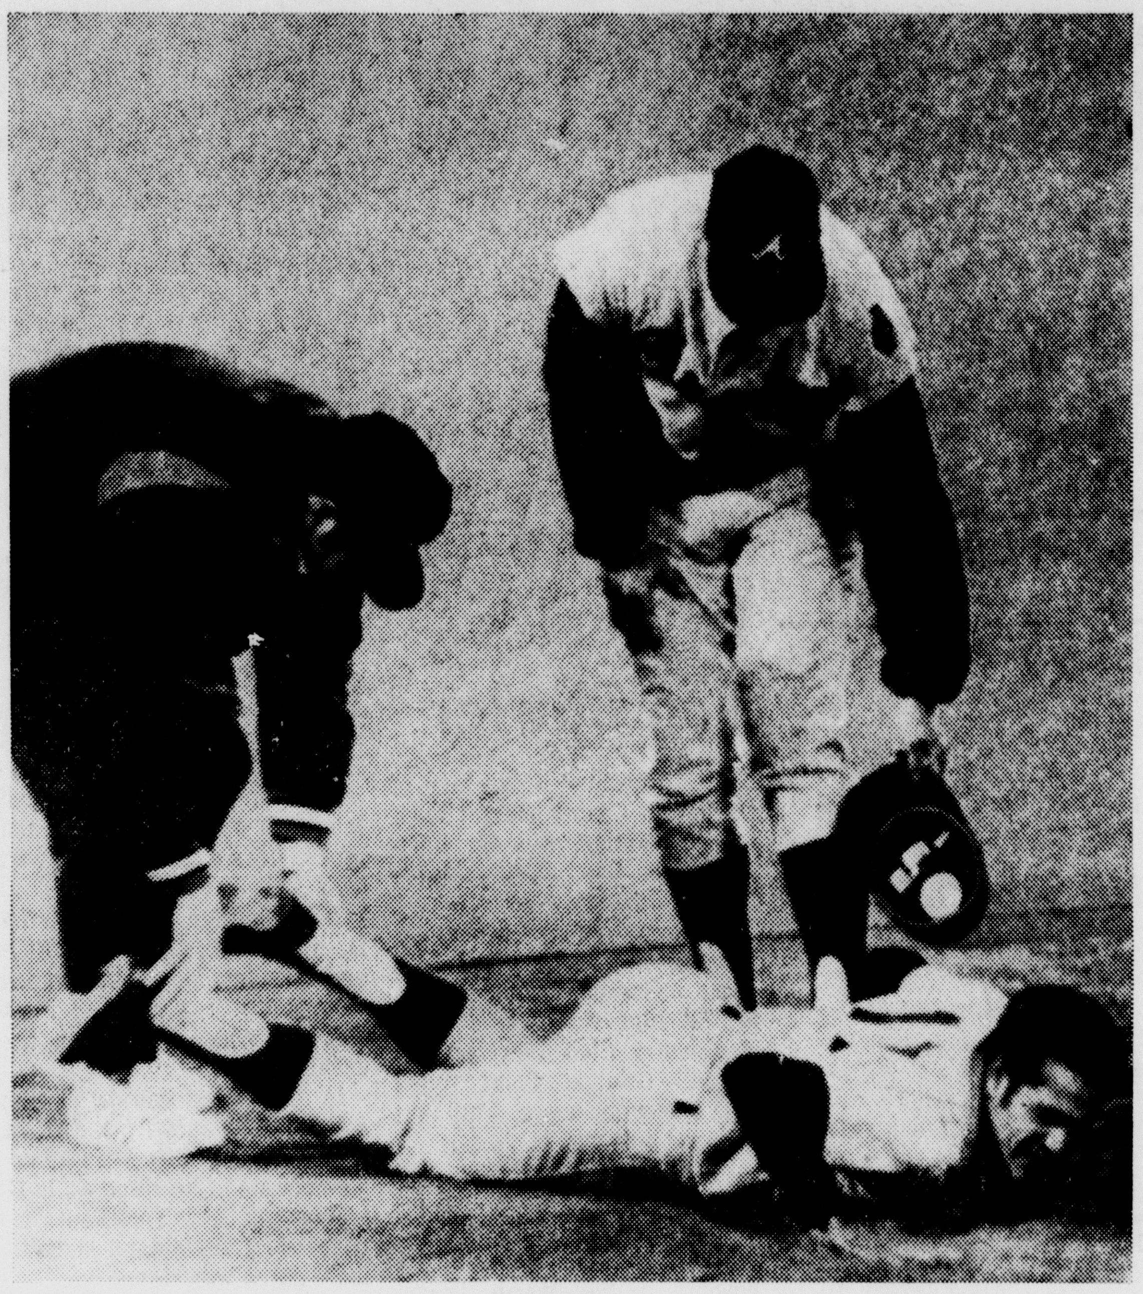
TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — Former Novato High School superstar Ray Leach fired a two-under-par 70 yesterday to lead Brigham Young University in hot pursuit of Arizona State in the Arizona Invitational Golf Tournament.

Leach, a junior and second team All-American in 1970, went into today's final round six strokes ahead of his nearest competitors in the race for medalist honors. His score for the opening round was 68, giving him a two-day total of 138.

Leach and his teammates from Brigham Young piled up 585 strokes to trail ASU by three and led third place New Mexico by four after yesterday's round. Paul Simpson of New Mexico shot a five-under 67 to take second round honors.

Simpson's hot round moved him into a tie for second place in individual scoring with ASU's Howard Twitty. Both had 144s.

In fourth place in the team standings was ASU's No. 2 team with 594 strokes. Next in order came host Arizona at 597, Miami of Florida 603, Arizona's No. 2 team 611 and the Air Force Academy 621.



FALLEN BRAVE — Felix Millan of the Atlanta Braves suffered a badly sprained ankle while sliding into second with a stolen base in the sixth inning last night at Candlestick Park. Braves' trainer Dave Pursley checked the injury while coach Jim Busby looked on. Millan was carried from the field, and San Francisco won, 4-3.

Warriors Obtain Russell; Trade Lucas To New York

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The San Francisco Warriors today traded veteran forward Jerry Lucas to the New York Knickerbockers for Cazzie Russell in a straight player swap.

The 6-8 Lucas, 31, has eight seasons in the National Basketball Association. He came to the Warriors from the Cincinnati Royals in 1969.

Russell, who will be 27 next month, stands 6-5 1-2 and has averaged 13.3 points a game during fve NBA seasons. He was the Knicks' No. 1 draft choice in 1966 after a brilliant collegiate career at the University of Michigan.

Cazzie was the sixth man for the Knicks during their championship season of 1969-70. He broke a wrist midway through last season and was used only sparingly after he returned.

This upset the health foods faddist who loves to lift weights. He mentioned it a few times to Knicks coach Red Holzman without avail.

Both Holzman and Warriors coach Al Attles were pleased by the trade. Holzman said he would use Lucas, former All America from Ohio State, at forward and to spell center Willis Reed.

"We hated to give up anyone with the ability of Cazzie Russell," said Holzman. "But in order to get a player of Lucas' stature, you have to be ready to give up someone of equal ability.

Cazzie is one of the finest shooters in the league and was instrumental in our club winning the championship last year and in our rise to a contender."

Attles figures the acquisition of Russell and Jim Barnett from the Portland Trail Blazers on April 1 will give the Warriors more speed.

"Cazzie is one of the most spectacular shooters in basketball," said Attles. "He is not the rebounder Lucas is, but Russell if younger and faster.

"The addition of Russell and Barnett gives us much more speed than we had last season."

Russell's best game in the NBA was against Detroit in 1968 when he scored 42 points.

Lucas has been one of the premier rebounders in the NBA, topping the 10,000 mark in career caroms last season. He came to the Warriors for Jim King and Billy Turner after six seasons with Cincinnati when newly appointed Royals coach Bob Cousy said Lucas wouldn't fit into the team's fast-break offense.

Lucas was the Royals' No. 1 draft choice while he was still in high school at Middletown, Ohio.

Ron Cerrudo Chases Masters King Coody

DALLAS (UPI) — Showing his best form since being sidelined by a back injury a year ago, Ron Cerrudo of Napa carded a one-under-par 69 yesterday and gained a tie for the sixth lowest score at the halfway point of the Byron Nelson Golf Classic.

Tall Texan Charles Coody, the hottest thing going in professional golf since he won the Masters tournament last month, took a two shot lead by ripping off a 66 to go with his first round score of 69. Five players including Chi Chi Rodriguez were tied for second place at 137, and Lee Trevino was alone at 138.

Cerrudo, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Cerrudo of San Rafael had a 72 on Thursday giving him a two-day total of 141. He was tied with seven other golfers, including such notables as Arnold Palmer, Bruce Crampton, Bobby Nichols and Ray Floyd. Palmer shot a 71 yesterday, as did Jack Nicklaus, who stood with seven others at 140.

Coody, whose blazing putter has brought him $43,000 since the Masters in Augusta, made seven putts of a dozen feet or better yesterday as he tamed the 7,031 Preston Trail Golf Club layout. First prize in the tourney is $25,000.

Marin Ace Lee Hurls Red Sox To 5-4 Victory

Bill Lee, former ace lefthander at Terra Linda High School, pitched masterfully for two and a third innings in relief yesterday and was rewarded with the win as the Boston Red Sox took their fifth straight victory, a 5-4 decision over the Brewers in Milwaukee.

Lee, a graduate of University of Southern California now in his second big league season, ran his 1971 record to 3-1 as he allowed only one hit and struck out three during his stint, which began in the seventh. He needed ninth inning help from Sparky Lyle, but was the pitcher of record when Billy Conigliaro scored the winning run after doubling in the eighth.

Chip Oliver Arrested On Dope Charge

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Chip Oliver, who quit as linebacker of the Oakland Raiders in 1970 to join a Mill Valley commune, is being held by St. Louis police on a charge ofillegal possession of narcotics paraphernalia.

Police said they found a pipe believed to contain marijuana residue in one of his pockets when they stopped his station wagon for improper passing Thursday.

Magistrate Milton A. Saitz issued a warrant on the charge and Oliver was being held in lieu of $3,500 bond, returnable next Wednesday.

Stargell Named Player Of Month

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Willie Stargell of Pittsburgh has been named National League player of the month by sportswriters and broadcasters for clubbing a record 11 home runs during April.

He received 58 of the 60 votes by the panel in the monthly poll conducted by the office of National League president Charles Feeney.

Atlanta's Ralph Garr, who hit .411 in April, and New York Mets pitcher Tom Seaver, 4-0 with a 1.38 ERA last month, received one vote apiece.

Giants And Mays Are Having A Ball

Willie, who celebrated his 40th birthday Thursday, suffers, as might be expected of a man his age, from aches and pains and needs a rubdown almost every time he plays.

This time, though, he wore a wide grin on his face. Not a smug one at all. Just a warm smile befitting a man who had just helped the San Francisco Giants score a 4-3 10th inning victory Friday night over the Atlanta Braves.

It was Mays' third hit of the game, a long drive which glanced off the base of the right field fence with two on and none out, and it won the game for the giants and increased their lead in the National League West to seven full games.

During his birthday party Thursday night Mays said playing baseball has become fun again for him after a couple of seasons when he felt it was just this side of drudgery.

"When you are winning it's always fun to be playing," he said.

It sure is, for Mays and all the Giants this year.

The three hits increased Mays' batting average to .383 second best in the N L behind Ralph Garr's .402. Garr went two for five for Atlanta Friday, scoring a run and driving in one to keep the Braves close.

It all went for naught, though, as Atlanta slipped 7-1-2 games behind the Giants, who now have won 21 games and lost only seven. The Los Angeles Dodgers and Houston Astros, both at .500, are closest to the Giants.

Gaylord Perry, winless since April 17, was one out away from his fourth victory when he served up Rookie Earl Williams' fifth homer to send the game into extra frames.

George Stone, the Atlanta starter and loser (0-1), and Sonny Jackson hit back-to-back singles after one out in the top of the 10th and Giants manager Charlie Fox replaced Perry with Jerry Johnson.

Johnson retired Garr and Hank Aaron on rollers to short to get out of the inning and then received credit for his fourth victory without a loss on Mays' winning blow in the bottom of the 10th.

Bobby bonds started the rally with a double into the left field corner and went to third on a sacrifice by Chris Speier. Speier wound up with a base hit when Stone was late fielding his bunt down ths third base line and then didn't have a play.

Cecil Upshaw, Atlanta's ace reliever, replaced Stone. He went to a full count before Mays lined a high outside fastball for the game winning hit. It was Willie's sixth game winning blow of the year and boosted his RBI total to 20.

Ken Henderson also figured prominently in the victory. It was his sixth inning bases-loaded single that drove in a pair and pushed the Giants into a 3-2 lead.

A Tough Question For Official Scorer

Three strikes and a batter is out. Right? Maybe. Baseball rules are provocative. Three strikes and the batter is out if the third strike is caught by the catcher. Three strikes are out even if the third one is not caught by the catcher when there is a runner on first and before two are out.

However, even if first base is occupied and a batter strikes out on a wild pitch or passed ball when there are two out, the batter may run safely to first base while the catcher is retrieving the ball. It happens frequently.

JOHNNY BENCH is an All-Star catcher. In fact, he was the National League's Most Valuable Player in 1970. He knows the rules. Yet, Bench momentarily forgot them last Sunday during a 13-inning game between the Giants and Refs.

It was the eighth inning and the score was tied 2-2. Bobby Bonds drew a one-out walk. Gary Nolan then struck out Chris Speier, rookie shortstop of the Giants who is a hustling ball player, the kind who runs to first base on walks.

THE STRIKEOUT pitch to Speier was a wild one in the dirt that skipped past Bench. Bonds was running with the pitch and properly was credited with a stolen base. Speier also ran to first when he saw the pitch get by Bench. The rookie may or may not have realized he automatically was out, that he didn't have the option of running for first since the bag had been occupied with only one out.

In any event, the rookie's run to first decoyed Bench into a throw to the Red first baseman. Bonds advanced to third on it, scoring a few moments later with a 3-2 go-ahead run when Willie Mays lined a single into center.

THE OFFICIAL scorer was confronted with a problem. There was no question about the stolen base for Bonds. Baseball rules are quite clear about stolen bases even on pitches that are wild ones. If the runner takes off for second with the pitch, he is credited with a stolen base even though the pitch winds up in the dirt behind the catcher.

But what about Bonds' advance to third? It's not unusual for a runner to steal second and continue to third on a wild pitch. In this case, however, it wasn't the pitch in the dirt that permitted Bonds to take an extra base. It was Bench's throw to first to make sure Speier was out, an entirely unnecessary precaution. Speier already was out.

SO HOW DID the scorer resolve the problem? He accounted for Bonds' advance to third on a fielder's choice throw by Bench to the Red first baseman. It was a logical solution except for the fact that the definition of a fielder's choice didn't fit Bench's act.

A fielder's choice is the act of a fielder who handles a fair grounder and, instead of throwing to first base to put out the batter-runner, throws to another base in an attempt to put out a preceding runer.

Baseball rules cover just about everything there is to cover in a game — except momentary mental skulls.

Disaster Again Hits The West Coast Relays

FRESNO (UPI) —More than 2,000 athletes kept one eye in the heavens and the other on the track today during the West Coast Relays at damp Ratcliffe Stadium.

Rain forced a postponement of the first day of competition Friday for the first time in the event's 45-year history. And fears were the entire event may be cancelled if more rain fell today on the clay track.

Meet director Cornelius (Dutch) Warmerdam said the year that disaster struck the relays which annually attract many of the nation's best track stars along with top-flight foreign competition.

One of the features of the relays was to have been a shot at the world record of 9:33.0 in the distance medley by Villanova University and the University of Houston.

Six milers who have run under four minutes, including Chuck LaBenz, John Mason and John Lawson, were to meet in an invitational mile run. In the two-mile, George Young (8:22.0) and Frank Shorter (8:33.4) were to battle Australia's Kerry Pearce (8:33.2).

Dodger Shuffle; Two Down, Two Up

SPOKANE, Wash. (UPI) — Bobby Valentine and Charlie Hough, two Pacific Coast League stars last season who were brought up by the Los Angeles Dodgers, have been returned to Spokane.

Tolan In Cincy With Bad Ankle

CINCINNATI (UPI) —Dr. George Ballou, Cincinnati Reds' team physician, said Friday no immediate decision had been reached on the extent of the injury to outfielder Bobby Tolan after X-rays were taken and orthopedists had examined him.

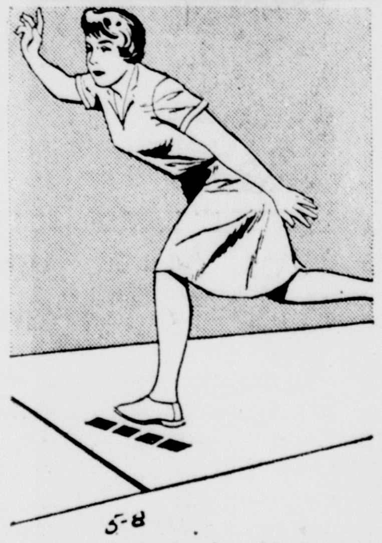
"We are reserving any decision on what to do until Saturday in order to better determine the seriousness of the injury," Dr. Ballou said.

Tolan reinjured his right ankle Thursday night after working out of Los Angeles. He was walking to the dugout when he felt a sharp blow, as though he had been hit by a baseball. Tolan flew here Friday morning for medical examination.

Tolan underwent ankle surgery in January and has been on the disabled list since then.

BOWLING TIPS

By MARION LADEWIG



Some women who ride horses may wish to ride sidesaddle. The woman bowler who tries will be rewarded by poor scores. Today we see a bowler who has reached the line with her left foot pointing to the right (dotted line). This causes poor balance and a dead ball. The left foot should be perpendicular to the line at realease.

Weatherman Holds Key At Indy

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UPI) —The weatherman may hold the key to the pole position for the Indianapolis 500-mile auto race.

Mark Donohue of Media, Pa., already has eclipsed, unofficially, the existing speed records at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway and apparently is ready to shoot for the pole on the opening day of qualification next Saturday.

Six other drivers have hit 170 miles per hour or better in practice this month, but nobody has come close to Donohue's 177.901 m.p.h. recorded Thursday.

Thus, time and the weatherman become important factors with just one week left before the opening of qualifications next Saturday. Most drivers and crews still have a lot of work getting up to qualifying speeds, let alone speeds to challenge Donohue's performances, and rain is curtailing activities.

Rain limited practice Friday to 61 minutes, and chief steward Harlan Fengler shut down the track at 3 p.m., three hours before the regular quitting time. Rain Thursday kept the 2 1-2-mile oval closed five hours.

Rain today could limit the amount of practice time. Clearing conditions were forecast for later today, Sunday and Monday, but the extended forecast said more rain may show up by Monday night and Tuesday.

The pole position — inside front row—traditionally has gone to the fastest car on the first of the four days of qualifications. Although a new rule this year gives all cars a crack at trying for the pole, possibly even on the second day of trails, that spot in all likelihood still will go to the fastest first-day qualifier.

So far, only 32 cars have been on the track—one less than will start the May 29 classic. Through Friday, 58 cars had arrived at the speedway and 38 have passed technical inspection.

Three cars made it onto the track before the rains came Friday.

Denis Hulme of New Zealand has the best speedway times this year behind Donohue. Hulme has turned the course as fast as 172.944 m.p.h., which is quicker than the official one and four-lap records set in 1968 by Joe Leonard, San Jose, Calif., of 171.953 and 171.559 m.p.h.

Treadway Is Week's Top Bowler

Dick Treadway, secretary of the Marin County Men's Bowling Association, was the kingpin of the past week's league bowling in Marin County.

Treadway ripped off a 693 three-game series for high score at Greenbrae Lanes and a 671 for high three-game score at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael. Orlando Conti rolled high four-game score, a 910 that included a pair of 242 lines.

Dave Mendelsohn again led the juniors with his 648 series at Greenbrae.

Rich Epidendio shook up the bowlers in the Marin Travel League when he converted the "big four," the 4-6-7-10 split, at Country Club Bowl.

The week's honor roll:

COUNTRY CLUB BOWL

Kentucky's Hurt Star Whips Utah

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI)—Darel Carrier suffered a six-stich gash in his right eyebrow Friday night, but never lost his shooting eye as he led the Kentucky Colonels to a 116-110 victory over the Utah Stars in the American Basketball Association Finals playoff.

The win trimmed Utah's lead to 2-1 and the Colonels sought the equalizer in a nationally-televised game today. The fifth game of the best-of-seven series will be played in Salt Lake City Wednesday night.

Carrier caught an elbow above the eye late in the first period and had the cut sewed up a halftime.

"It never bothered me," he said. "It's one of those things that happen in a game and you have to shake it off."

The veteran guard wound up with 25 points and scored the basket that put the Colonels ahead for good just before the end of the third quarter.

The Stars expected a big scoring splurge from Carrier, who averaged just over 30 points against them in the first two games at Salt Lake City.

But Utah had checked Carrier's backcourt, running mate, Louie Dampier, who made only three points in the first game and 12 in the second.

Dampier broke out of his slump Friday night with 23 points, though his shooting was still not up to par with only eight of 25 field goal attempts.

Rookie Center Dan Issel, a consistent Colonels' performer in the semifinal and final playoff rounds, outshone Utah's classy veteran, Zelmo Beaty, in their pivot duel. Issel had 24 points and 17 rebounds to 13 points and 11 rebounds for Beaty, who fouled out with more than six minutes left.

Errors Beats Twins

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Tony Oliva can't do anything wrong with his bat these days but he was having problems with his glove Friday night.

The Minnesota Twins' rightfielder had his usual day at the plate, collecting two hits and driving in a run to boost his league-leading average to .367.

But with two out in the ninth inning and the score tied 5-5, he dropped a routine pop-fly in short right that gave the Washingon Senators a 6-5 victory over the Twins.

"The ball hit right in the middle of the glove and I don't know how it popped out," Oliva said after the game. "I just can't understand it."

The Twins were ahead 5-2 with two out and none on when the Senators started a rally on Tom McCraw's triple off Oliva's glove against the right field screen.

"I was certain I was going to catch McCraw's drive (which would have ended the game) but the back of my glove hit the fence and jarred the ball loose," Oliva explained.

Bernie Allen followed by singling in McCraw and Paul Casanova then hit a two-run homer that tied the game 5-5. Ray Corbin replaced Bert Blyleven and Toby Harrah greeted him with an infield single and moved to second on a wild pitch.

Dick Billings then lifted the fly to Oliva in short right field and the inning again seemed over. But Oliva dropped it as Harrah raced home with the deciding run.

In the other games, Boston downed Milwaukee 5-4, Detroit nipped Kansas City 3-1, California outlasted Cleveland 4-2 in 11 innings and New York beat Chicago 4-3. The Oakland at Baltimore game was rained out.

Boston continued its hold on the American League East lead by downing Milwaukee. Billy Conigliaro hit a three-run homer in the first inning and scored the deciding run in the eighth on Duane Josephson's sacrifice fly. Sparky Lyle got his fifth save by getting Floyd Wicker to hit into a double play with the bases-loaded and one out in the ninth.

Mickey Lolich laid down a sacrifice bunt with none out and Ed Brinkman on second in the seventh with Kansas City leading Detroit 1-0. Mike Hedlund picked up the bunt and threw to third in an attempt to force Brinkman. But he fired the ball into leftfield and both Brinkman and Lolich scored to give Detroit the victory. The next batter, Dick McAuliffe, homered off the shocked Hedlund for an insurance run.

Syd O'Brien, a fifth inning replacement for shortstop Jim Fregosi, hit a two-run homer off reliever Chuck Machemehl with one out in the 11th to hand California the victory over Cleveland. Machemehl was sent to the minors after the game. Fregosi also homered for the Angels.

NATIONAL LEAGUE ROUNDUP

Mets' Seaver Again Tops St. Louis Ace Gibson, 3-1

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The duel between Bob Gibson and Tom Seaver, a pair of Cy Young Award winners, doesn't exist. At least, according to Bob Gibson.

"You guys make too much of it," snarled the St. Louis ace Friday night after Seaver had recorded his second victory against him in little more than a week as the New York Mets beat the Cardinals 3-1.

"He's a swell pitcher but he can't take away from me anything I've done," said Gibson. "I pitched against the Mets tonight, not Tom Seaver. I pitch against a lot of good pitchers in this league —Juan Marichal, Ferguson Jenkins —I go through this every time I come to New York.

"I'd be afraid of him if he was batting .700. I didn't see him getting any hits tonight."

Gibson, who lost to Seaver and the Mets 12-2 April 26, led 1-0 in the seventh inning Friday night when Bud Harrelson tripled and scored on a wild pitch. An inning later, Ed Kranepool doubled and scored the tie-breaking run on Jerry Grote's double. Grote scored when second baseman Ted Sizemore let Seaver's ground ball skip by for an error.

"I crossed up the catcher," said Gibson in explaining the pitch that allowed the Mets to tie the score. "He signalled for a curve and I threw him a high fast ball. The hit that really hurt, though, was Grote's handle hit in the eighth. I jammed him inside with plenty on it but just nudged it into centerfield."

Elsewhere in the National League, San Francisco edged Atlanta 4-3 in 10 innings, Pittsburgh nipped Los Angeles 3-2, Houston routed Philadelphia 8-1 and Montreal downed Chicago 3-1. The Cincinnati-San Diego game was rained out.

Willie Stargell's 13th homer of the season was the margin of victory as the Pirates edged Los Angeles. Stargell smashed a 435-foot homer off Don Sutton in the sixth inning to give the Pirates a 3-0 lead.

Joe Morgan collected four hits, stole two bases, scored three times and drove in a pair of runs in leading Houston past the Phillies.

Ron Fairly led off the seventh inning with a single and Coco Laboy added a run-scoring single as Montreal downed the Cubs. After Fairly's homer, his first of the season, Ron Swoboda doubled, took third on a sacrifice and scored on Laboy's single.

Donohue Drives Javelin To Trans-Am Pole Spot

LIME ROCK, Conn. (UPI) — Mark Donohue of Media, Pa., driving a factory-backed Javelin, will drive off from the pole position today in the 200-mile Schaefer Trans-American Championship Auto Race. Donohue set a mark of 93.28 miles per hour in Friday qualifying run.

Baseball

CLEVELAND (UPI) —Righthander Archie Reynolds of Salt Lake City, the strikeout leader in the Pacific Coast League with 53, has been recalled by the parent California Angels.

Reynolds, who will join the Angels in Cleveland today, is coming off a four-hit 1-0 shutout of Spokane last Tuesday. The 62, 205-pound hurler was purchased from the Chicago Cubs last October.

CHICAGO (UPI) — Outfielder Mike Hershberger was expected to join the Chicago White Sox today after his contract was purchased from Tucson of the Pacific Coast League, where he was batting .319 in 13 games.

CHICAGO (UPI) —Outfielder Mike Hershberger was expected to join the Chicago White Sox today after his contract was purchased from Tucson of the Pacific Coast League.

In 13 games with the Toros, Hershberger, a former fly chaser for the Oakland Athletics, was batting .319.

Basketball

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UPI) — Notre Dame signed Frank McLaughlin and Dick Dibiaso as assistants to head basketball coach Dick Phelps Friday. McLaughlin was Phelps' aide at Fordham last season and Dibiaso was an assistant coach at Virginia.

Football

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Linebacker Jack Ham, the Pittsburgh Steelers' second draft choice, was signed Friday for the 1971 national football league season.

Ham starred at Penn State, where he played in only three losing games during his varsity career.

Boxing

SAN JOSE (UPI) —Kim Booker, 1967 AAU welterweight champion and unbeaten in eight pro bouts, is scheduled to fight Henry Walker of Los Angeles in a 10-rounder May 14.

In a companion 10, Ray Echavarria of San Jose goes against Mexican featherweight Joe Valdez.

Tennis

RENO (UPI) —Two South African stars on the University of Nevada tennis team are trying to play tennis for 72 straight hours.

Glenn Grisillo and Mel Baleson began their marathon Thursday and have been playing since, taking a 10-minute breather every four hours. Friday they played a 103-101 set that lasted six hours.

Both players agree that only tired limbs can stop them. But—Grisillo says his arms might give out and Baleson says it would be his legs.

Willie Big Hit At Party

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—It's a good thing Willie Mays' 40th birthday party the other night lasted as long as it did.

And for two pretty good reasons.

The first, it gave Mays, a shy man when it comes to public gatherings other than a baseball game, a chance to compose himself after showing distinct signs of emotional distress over a steady stream of plaudits being showered on him by speaker after speaker.

Willie, who preferred to sit a couple of steps behind the others at the head table so that he wouldn't have to look at the big crowd, and maybe so that they might not see him wipe away a tear or two, acknowledged the "party" was something he would never forget.

The second reason why it was a good thing the party dragged on until near midnight after starting with off-dining room libations around 6:30 p.m., was that it gave Mays time to think about all the things he wanted to say when it finally became his turn go stand before the crowd and the microphone.

What Mays had to say wasn't exactly earth-shattering news but the aging superstar who seems to have found the secret to life after 30, revealed a couple of interesting items.

"I know a lot of people wonder what my thoughts are these days about hitting home runs and how long I expect to keep on playing," Mays started off.

"Hank Aaron and I, people say, have some sort of rivalry while we chase after the record (Babe Ruth's 714-homer mark). I guess you could call it a rivalry but Hank and I are good friends. When he does well I'm happy and I know that when I do well he is happy for me.

"No one can tell how many homers we might hit or how long we can play. For myself, all I've ever wanted out of baseball is appreciation. If the fans enjoy my playing then I enjoy myself. When they stop enjoying me then maybe that will be the time to go on and do something else."

Mays also told the big crowd what it feels like to be a baseball star and have people always interested in what he is doing.

"It's like living in a bowl," he said. "I have to be one person on the ball field and someone else away from the field. That's hard to do and maybe that's why it would be tough for me to get married. Hardly any woman would appreciate a guy like that, but that's the way I am and I can't change."

Mays then interrupted himself to do what many people thought was strange for him. He introduced his best girl friend, who was sitting in the audience.

Columnists have been saying ever since the end of the 1970 season that Mays would marry again, and soon. One keyhole type even wrote Mays already was secretly married.

"I can't account for what people want to write," Mays said later. But he did acknowledge that over the years writers, sports writers that is, had been very fair with him.

Before he sat down Mays was anxious to get one more thing off his chest. Since the opportunity to speak before a big crowd was his first (by his choosing) and probably his last, Willie wanted to set the record straight so there might be no doubt where he stood.

This last thing he wanted to talk about had to do with the problems of the black man. In the past he has been accused of being an Uncle Tom and of not caring by some among the more militant in the black movement.

"If anyone really cares to find out they can, and they'll see that I have done my share," Mays said.

"Mommy! Barfy thinks you're yellin' at HIM!"

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, May 8, the 128th day of 1971 with 237 to follow.

The moon is between its first quarter and full phase. The morning stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars and Jupiter. The evening star is Saturn.

On this day in history:

In 1541 Spanish explorer Hernando de Soto discovered the Mississippi River.

In 1879 George Selden of Rochester, N.Y., filed for the first patent of an automobile. It was granted in 1895.

In 1945 President Harry S. Truman officially announced V-E day, the end of World War II in Europe.

A thought for the day: President Harry Truman said shortly before the atomic bomb was dropped on Japan in 1945,

"The force from which the sun draws its power has been loosed against those who brought war to the Far East."

National Health Plan Is Forecast

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—A national health insurance plan will be in operation within three years, the American Health Association's executive director predicts.

"It will do something about the 20 million people in the ghettos and rural areas who can't get any health services now because of lack of facilities," James R. Kimmey told a recent American Pharmaceutical Association convention.

WITH ACE

West opened the jack of clubs and declarer won in dummy with the ace. East carefully dropped the deuce to indicate his total lack of interest in the clubs.

South next led the king of diamonds to drive out the ace. Now West could see that declarer would surely take four diamonds and two hearts in the dummy and that he would almost surely take two additional club tricks in his own hand. (East might well have encouraged a club continuation if he had held as much as the queen of clubs.)

Since declarer was sure to win nine tricks as soon as he regained the lead, West had to take four more tricks on the run. Spades was the obvious suit to attack, but West had to choose the right card to lead.

UNBLOCKS

West led the nine of spades to make sure of unblocking the suit. Declarer put up dummy's ten, and East played the jack with some misgivings. When this held, East naturally returned the three of spades to West's king.

West now led the deuce of spades, and East could win two tricks with the A-7 behind dummy's Q-6. Four spade tricks and the ace of diamonds were just enough to defeat the contract.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one no-trump (16 to 18 points), and the next player passes.

You hold:
♠ - K 9 2
♥ - Q 7 3
♦ - A 7
♣ - J 10 9 8 6.
What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid three no-trump.

You have 10 points in high cards and therefore know that the combined count must be 26 to 28 points. This should be enough for game in no-trump but not enough for game in clubs.

Loses Umbrellas But Not Faith In Its Commuters

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI—The Alameda-Contra Costa Transit District is learning there's a touch of larceny in the hearts of its commuters.

Last year the company set out a bin of 50 used umbrellas in the San Francisco Depot for commuters caught in a rainstorm. The sign over the bin asked that they be returned after use.

None was returned.

AC transit tried it again this past March —this time with 150 umbrellas. They all disappeared except one. That one was broken.

But undaunted officials said Thursday, "we haven't lost all faith in our commuters. We hope to try again with another 150 umbrellas next time we have some heavy rain."

WEEK'S BUSINESS

A Dark Cloud: Money Crisis

NEW YORK (UPI)—A monetary crisis that could be the worst since World War II raised a dark cloud on the American business horizon this week.

The crisis resulted in currency speculation against the dollar in Europe so intense that five European central banks stopped supporting the dollar and the West German government seriously considered revaluing the mark upward against the dollar.

However, as the weekend neared, it appeared more likely that Chancellor Willy Brandt's government would not revalue the mark but simply would allow it to float upward against the dollar for a while. A decision was expected on Saturday.

The speculation calmed down considerably on Thursday and the free market price of gold, which had spurted to an 18 month high, fell 42 1-2 cents while the dollar improved a little in the foreign exchange markets.

Nevertheless, a British expert said bluntly that "people have lost faith in the dollar."

The semiannual meeting of the Business Council at Hot Springs, Va., revealed a feeling of unease about the economic outlook. Many of the assembled business leaders were much less optimistic than Nixon Administration spokesmen about the pace of recovery and the fight to end inflation.

WEEK'S BUSINESS

The stock market eased in reaction to the monetary crisis. The rise on retail trade slowed down in comparison with recent weeks; Dun & Bradstreet said it was only 1 to 5 per cent from a year ago on the average.

Domestic automobile sales for the final third of April were only even with last year's slow pace although sales for the whole month were up 7 per cent from a year ago. Sales of imported cars hit a record 144,000 in the month—16 per cent of the total market.

Some barometers declined: Factory orders dropped 0.7 per cent in March, the first drop in five months and March construction spending fell from the previous month—the first dip in nine months.

The pace of rising wholesale prices accelerated in April to 0.5 per cent from 0.2 per cent in March.

Bank Lauds U.S. Decision On China Trade

SAN FRANCISCO (BW) — Crocker-Citizens National Bank has lauded the U.S. Treasury Department announcement on lifting of controls on use of dollars in transactions with Communist China. In a statement the bank said:

"We believe the action is an essential ingredient in a step-by-step approach to improved relationships with the People's Republic of China.

"It is to be hoped that there will be reciprocity on the part of the People's Republic toward the desired improvement of relationships.

"Complex problems can never be solved unless there can be communications between interested parties. This is a concrete move toward establishing better rapport with the People's Republic.

"The humanitarian aspects of moves of this nature are implicit in what is being done and should call for an equally enlightened reaction from the People's Republic."

Teacher Plan

MAINZ, W. Germany — A plan to ask unemployed American science teachers to fill vacant jobs in German schools has been proposed to the Conference of State Ministers of Education, according to Bernhard Vogel, education minister for the State of Rhineland-Palatinate.

Lear Spokesman Sees Engine Ready By 1975

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A steam engine advocate has testified that antipollution standards have doomed the traditional auto engine and said research money would be better spent improving the old Stanley Steamer.

"The internal combustion engine is dead," Edward B. Uhler, marketing director for Lear Motors Corp., told the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). "It has been legislated out of existence."

Lear is developing a rankin cycle, or steam turbine, car engine and Uhler said the firm "can have a working engine in production by 1975 . . . in quantity."

He said it would easily meet the 90 per cent pollutant reductions dictated by law for 1975 and 1976 model cars.

Ah! Glorious Days Of Passenger Trains!

THE U.S. DEPARTMENT of Transportation is "loaning" the new National Railway Passenger Corp. an initial $300 million to launch Amtrak in an effort to save and revive passenger train travel.

The public declarations of Transportation Secretary Volpe and Amtrak president Lewis are most optimistic. Most of us fervently hope that the optimism is justifiable. We taxpayers hope our money is being wisely invested.

If you have seen an Amtrak train and station, however, you must have gnawing doubts.

IN THE BRIGHTLY printed booklet containing Amtrak schedules and fares, West Coast service appears an improvement over anything the private railroads ever offered. You can ride the train between San Diego and Seattle — all the way without changing trains. At about mid-point on the route is San Francisco-Oakland.

The brightly printed schedule doesn't tell you that the San Francisco-Oakland terminal is in fact the ancient, decaying Southern Pacific passenger station at the lower end of 16th street in Oakland. It is a dingy place. The big clocks on the wall haven't run for a long time and they still weren't running when the first Amtrak trains came and went this week.

"CONVENIENT TRAINS speed you to mid-town" proclaims Amtrak advertising.

The Bay Area terminal certainly isn't in mid-town of anything. The street lights in front of it still are not turned on at darkest night. There are no taxicabs awaiting arriving trains, nor is there any convenient bus to take you anywhere, except for a special Greyhound which meets San Francisco passengers and takes them to a rather poorly located terminal in San Francisco.

To put it charitably, the Oakland station is located on the wrong side of the tracks.

Furthermore, if you are trying to drive there from Marin you face considerable challenge in getting there. You take the 14th street ramp off the Nimitz freeway. Trouble is, it deposits you on 14th headed the wrong way at an intersection which allows no U-turns and no left turns. In other words, you can't get to 16th Street from there — directly. You have to go back to 13th, go over a couple of blocks, and then back-track to 14th or 16th so as to head the right way toward the station.

Signs to the station? There are none. You are on your own, in a ghetto neighborhood.

THE INSIDE of the station is grim. With a train arriving from Los Angeles and due to depart for Portland and Seattle, the huge old barn of a waiting room is occupied by only three dozen people, including aging red caps and a few curious onlookers who have come simply to see what Amtrak's first train looks like.

Behind the counter at the ticket and baggage desk there is no one under 60, and they move with the speed of people over 70.

The only bright spot in the place is the flaming red blazer of the Amtrak man whisking about with great enthusiasm and warmth. When you get close, the aroma which envelops him tells you that his enthusiasm and warmth must have been generated largely by an overly-long cocktail hour.

On the wall are the arrival and departure listings which still show all the now-defunct S.P. trains. The Amtrak arrivals and departures are listed only on a typed sheet scotch-taped to the doors where the light is poor. To add to the difficulty, the new schedules were typed with a very old ribbon. Perhaps they are readable to the under-30 set whose eyes have not yet matured.

When the first train arrived it was a somewhat different story. It arrived on time. While the crowd was scant, it was a happy group. The train carried a good dinner and good lounge (cocktail bar) cars.

Dinner in the diner was reported quite good although there were complaints about slow service in the lounge car.

"CONVENIENT TRAINS," says Amtrak advertising. But the trains between Seattle and San Diego operate only three times per week. On Monday, Thursday and Saturday they operate southbound only. On Sunday, Wednesday and Friday, they operate northbound only.

On Wednesday there is an additional southbound run from Oakland to Los Angeles, only. On Tuesday, there is an additional northbound run from Los Angeles to Oakland, only.

On Fridays and Sundays, only the Los Angeles-San Diego and Portland-Seattle links operate.

Not all of the trains carry diners, or lounge cars. Not all trains carry sleeping cars. And if you can figure out which trains carry what from the published schedules, you must have a special talent for deciphering government publications.

DREAMING OF the pleasures of train rides in earlier days, it is most pleasant to think of relaxing and resting on a train between business meetings.

But the realities of the situation are somewhat different.

Let's say you have a business meeting in Los Angeles in the middle of the day on a Friday. To go by train you must take the 8:55 a.m. train from Oakland Thursday. It will get you to Los Angeles at 7:15 p.m. From then until your meeting at midday on Friday you have time to kill. When the meeting is over Friday afternoon, you have more time to kill until the train for Oakland leaves at 10:15 a.m. Saturday. You'll be back to Oakland at 8:30 p.m. Saturday. It will consume three full days just to attend a meeting for a few hours on Friday.

Obviously, Amtrak is not going to put PSA out of business between here and Los Angeles in the near future.

Friend Resents Comment On Actress

I'm writing to you because of the statements KayKsanda made about my friend Pat Hicks which played the part of one of the characters in the play "Plaza Suite." I think she or any actor should be judged on her acting not her appearance. She works hard all day and she does acting for fun sometimes in the evenings. She does it for fun and does not get paid.

Boy Scout Questioned On Story's Placement

Last night I went in front of a board of review for my Life Scout award in scouting. One of the questions that this board asked me was if I knew why when a boy receives his Eagle award the coverage of this high honor is placed, usually, in the last section of the paper. I could not answer.

I think that since it is such a high honor bestowed upon a boy that it should have a better coverage on it. I was also wondering why, even if it is in the paper, why is it such a small article?

(We are wondering why the placement of a story in a newspaper is a question asked by a board examining a Boy Scout on his scouting accomplishments at a court of honor.

Incidentally, readership surveys have shown that a story in the I-J is seen by as many readers in one section as in another. — Editor.)

Administrator's Spot Likened To Calley's

Before the issue disappears entirely from public view I would like to make an observation about the recent events leading to the resignation of the county administrator.

During times like these when administrators of public power are given mandates by their governing bodies to cut expenses they are put in a position not unlike that of Lieutenant Calley. It is not at all remarkable, in fact, it is quite human, to concentrate one's efforts on those least likely to put up a good fight. Most of us would choose to pick on a relatively helpless victim rather than the local "tough" or a person with powerful friends.

What are we expecting from our hatchetmen in government, Crusader Rabbit?

Perhaps it is time to take a long, hard look at the odd game of political buck passing.

Agenda's Purpose Must Be Obfuscation

When a public servant has succeeded in putting "mundialization" (a word not in the dictionary) on an agenda as a one-word item, what has he really accomplished? Has he:

(a) Succeeded in displaying an intellectual (?) erudition (?) superior (?) to the citizens he is supposed to serve?

(b) Managed to obscure an item that many people are vitally interested in and thus lessen the opposition?

If the object of an agenda is to inform and notify the citizenry then any one-word item, be it "civilization" or "realization" or "idioticalization" (also not in the dictionary) would in effect flummox the public and obscure issues and lead to bad feelings.

Is it not possible to so word an agenda that at least the "who" and "what" of an item were plain to ALL who might be interested? To do less is to cheat!

ART BUCHWALD

Making It Perfectly Clear For A Happy Mother's Day

WASHINGTON — President Nixon said today in a press conference that he was for Mother's Day, providing it was a just and honorable Mother's Day in which every mother in this country could decide her own destiny.

The President told reporters that when the Democrats were in power there were 37.8 million mothers in the United States. Since his administration took office, there are now 38.7 million mothers, or an increase of almost one million mothers. "This shows," said the President, "that my game plan for producing more mothers is working."

"MR. PRESIDENT," a reporter asked, "why have you come out for mothers at this time?"

"Mr. Lisagor, I would like to make this perfectly clear — the easy way, the political way, the popular way, would be to attack motherhood in this country. But the hard way, and in my opinion the best way, not for the short term, but the long run, is to take a strong stand for mothers.

"Now, I know you're going to say not all mothers are good, and I know you're going to say mothers don't know how to raise their children, and I know you're going to say mothers are responsible for many of the problems this country faces. But I would just like to make one thing perfectly clear. The majority of mothers are not flag burners or bums. They are fine upstanding Americans, and it is for this reason that I have decided to come out for motherhood, even if it means I may be a one-term President."

"MR. PRESIDENT, now that you've declared yourself for mothers, will you also come out for mom's apple pie?"

"Mr. Kaplow, I'd like to make myself perfectly clear. As you know, my administration has been working to improve the quality of apple pie in this country. I have on my desk now the Sara Lee Commission report on mom's apple pie. Now, there are some who say the President should set a standard for apple pie. There are others who say the government should decide what goes into a mother's apple pie. There are still others who would like to do away with apple pie altogether. But as President of the United States, I believe that apple pie is a very personal thing and should be left to the states where it is made.

"This is not to say the government shouldn't step in when a mother makes a bad apple pie. But this should be a last resort. Besides, I don't think mom's apple pie will be an election issue. Miss Thomas?"

"MR. PRESIDENT, I would like to get back to Mother's Day. Vice President Agnew has made some comments about the mothers of several of the members of the news media. Does this mean that you and he are in disagreement on an overall Mother's-Day policy?"

"Miss Thomas, I would be the last one to have a vice president agree with everything I have said. But I know from talking to Mr. Agnew, and working with him, that he and I are in overall agreement that the United States should have a low profile Mother's Day policy. There may be certain mothers that I don't approve of. But when it comes down to whether Mr. Agnew supports my Mother's Day proclamation, the answer to your question is, "Why don't you ask him?"

"Mr. President, does the fact that you're coming out for motherhood mean that you will come out for God and country before the next election?"

"Mr. Rather, I'm sending my message on the 'State of God' next week, and I don't think it would be beneficial to discuss that at this time."

MARQUIS CHILDS

Communist Dissenter Ceausescu Keeps Door Open To The West

BUCHAREST — One of the charter members of a small exclusive club, "For Nixon Before '68," is the president and secretary general of the Communist Party of this eastern bloc country. Nicolae Ceausescu, a wily political operator, has demonstrated the courage of his convictions. As a dissenter in the Communist world he has stood up to the frowns of the Soviet Union, Romania's powerful neighbor on the east.

SHORTLY BEFORE the congress of world Communist parties in Moscow at the end of March, reports circulated that Ceausescu meant to return to the fold and be a good boy. He led his delegation to Moscow and on April 4 delivered a 20-minute speech, which in length, in the tradition of Communist oratory, is equivalent to clearing your throat.

In that speech he repeated what he had said before about not meddling in the affairs of other countries. It was the same declaration of independence that after the Russian invasion of Czechoslovakia threatened an invitation to a similar disaster.

In that fateful summer of 1968, when so many plans were dashed by Russian tanks rumbling through the streets of Prague, Ceausescu denounced the invasion in speeches throughout Romania. It was a chancy thing to do since there were many who believed the Russian colossus might very well turn next on Bucharest and throw out the dissenters.

CEAUSESCU SPOKE out first in 1965 when the quarrel between the Soviet Union and Communist China began to break. He contended that each Communist state should have the right to chart its own course and choose its own brand of communism. This meant a closer relationship with Peking and the beginning of a cooling off with Moscow.

That was capped by what happened in 1969. Ceausescu invited President Nixon to visit Bucharest. Two years before, when Nixon was in Eastern Europe on a world tour, calculated to build up his stature as a statesman, he got the frigid treatment in one Communist capital after another. This seemed to be on signal from Moscow, where every door was closed.

But Ceausescu received Nixon and the two shrewd politicians laid the groundwork for a continuing relationship. It was the first time since the end of World War II that an American president had paid an official visit to Eastern Europe.

JUST PRIOR to the Nixon visit Leonid Brezhnev, secretary general of the Soviet Communist Party, rated No. 1 in the hierarchy, had been scheduled to come to Bucharest to sign a treaty of trade and friendship. Brezhnev never came. It was not until early July of 1970 that Premier Alexei Kosygin showed up for the signing. And a little later Ceausescu paid a return visit to Washington, the films of which were widely shown on Romanian television.

The Ceausescu government continues to keep the door to the west open. Pan American Airways has just inaugurated a twice-weekly flight to Bucharest and an NBC television crew is traveling about the country filming various aspects of Romanian life for the "Today" program.

The significant change has come in the shift of Romania's trade. In 1965 about 80 per cent was with eastern bloc countries, 20 per cent with the rest of the world. In 1970 this shifted to 54 per cent with the bloc, and 46 per cent with the outside world.

FIRSTHAND OBSERVERS credit Ceausescu with being hardworking, austere, and determined to build an advanced industry in a country which has been largely agricultural.

Anticipating joint capital investment with the West, American and West German — Romania recognized West Germany in 1967 — the hope is to build up in electronics, computerization and other fields. Seeking membership in the General Agreements on Tariffs and Trade (GATT), the next step would be entry into the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund.

But the road ahead is long and hard. With tight controls fixed to channel development into industry, consumer goods here are scarcer than in other east European capitals. Prices are high and the average worker's wage of $100 a month covers little beyond bare necessities.

In the May Day parade are all the trappings of a Communist state — the long lines of marchers with red banners, the Young Pioneers, the huge pictures of the founding fathers, Marx and Lenin, the bands blaring "the Internationale." Yet there is a difference with a liberalized regime that abjures political trials and even allows some measure of dissent.

WINDOW ON THE WORLD

Romania's Look Of Ease Partly True, Partly False

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

BUCHAREST, Romania — Here in this capital of Communist Romania, the youth dancing the frug are just as disjointed, the music just as loud, the beat as relentless as anywhere in the west. The mini skirts are just as mini.

In the warm spring evenings, window shoppers throng the streets and at the end of a holiday, automobile headlights gleam in a seemingly endless string along the narrow highway leading across the flat plain to Bucharest from the resorts in the Transylvania mountains to the north.

It is the look of ease and relaxation, and even of prosperity.

In more than 2,000 years of history, the Romanians have learned to live with circumstances, to switch from fascism during the German occupation under Hitler to the Russian communism of Josef Stalin after World War II almost without missing a beat, just as in the past they balanced between occupations by the Slavs, the Austro-Hungarians and the Turks.

The Romanians are used to outside rule and to sacrifice.

King Carol I, a member of the Hohenzollern family, spent three times the annual national income of his day in the mid 19th century, to build his magnificent summer palace at Sinaia. Understandably, it left the Romanians poor.

TODAY'S ROMANIAN rulers have for a decade presided over a determined de-Russification program which has achieved an impressive economic growth rate and a large measure of independence.

Yet as the Romanian economy has advanced at a rate of around 6 per cent per year, the Romanian people have existed on one of the lowest standards of living within the European Communist bloc.

But as the government has pressed its campaign of independence from Moscow, it also has paid increasing attention to the problem of popular support.

IF THEY ARE WARY of expressing a political opinion, Romanians at least no longer fear to visit with an American.

For a decade there have been no political show trials and most, if not all, political prisoners long since have been released.

Police controls have become less obvious.

Shaken by events in Poland where labor unrest led to strikes and the fall of the Wladislaw Gomulka government, the Romanian regime has promised its workers a 20 per cent rise in real wages under its 1971-75 economic plan, an increase in family and other social allowances and an increased voice for labor in the management of industry.

In its drive for economic and political independence, the Romanian government has sharply increased its trade with the west. In 1965, 80 per cent of its foreign trade was inside the Communist bloc. In 1970 that figure had been reduced to 54 per cent.

WITH THE United States, its relations have seen steady improvement, although trade between the two has been limited. In 1963 it came to approximately $2 million. In 1969 it came to about $40 million.

Tourism from the United States is one of the gambits the Romanians hope will make them rich. One of the attractions they are counting on is a five course meal for $4.

I-J RAP SESSION: THE LETTERS POUR IN

The Independent-Journal today presents more 'Rap Session' contest letters discussing Youth and the Establishment. The contest will continue through May 24, with first prize of $125 and second prize of $75 offered for the best letter in each of four age groups: 14-17, 18-21, 22-30, over 30 years old. Your letters are invited.

One Goal In Life: To Achieve Happiness

Throughout the United States and the world, every man, woman and child has one main goal in life: to achieve happiness for himself and his family. When you stop to think about it, that's all a man tries to accomplish before he dies. He does this by whatever means he has been brought up, or conforming to new ideas. This is mainly describing the generation gap. The "over-30" group has been cultured differently than the "new generation," so they have a different view on achieving happiness in life than the young group. Because the younger group and older group do have this wide variance of opinion on many points, the two groups are constantly in conflict; always finding faults in the other guy's system. The older guy achieves happiness by becoming rich and retiring, and the younger guy achieves happiness by being outdoors and giving up his love for money and material wealth.

Obviously, these two ideas of happiness contradict each other, so it ultimately becomes a war between the two groups. Where to we go from there?

If more people realized that a world can't go on divided, they would open their minds more. I think the closing of the war in S.E. Asia, which I believe is coming soon, will pull the generation gap closer together, because one main goal in achieving happiness in both groups is to avoid war, and the more the war goes on, the wider the generation gap becomes. So, inversely, when the present war ends, each group will have achieved mutual happiness with the other.

Only Difference Is Frame Of Reference

The basis of the generation gap is that there is a difference between a person of say 18 and 45. But where is the difference? The 18-year-old has the same fears, pleasures and worries as anyone else including the 45-year-old. They might disagree on length of hair or preference of music but that does not make them different& If it did, nobody would be able to communicate to each other because nobody thinks exactly like anyone else.

Man is like a lump of clay, from the day he is born until the day he ceases to be willing to accept change, he is forever gathering information and developing opinions from his friends, culture and environment. A person raised in the ghetto would have a completely different outlook on life than if he were raised in Beverly Hills, even though he is the same person.

The 45-year-old that considers the Rolling Stones vulgar and obscene, if 18 today would probably be buying their albums. The 18-year-old if 18 in the '40s would probably be dancing to Glenn Miller (slow dancing that is).

Therefore, since the only difference is frame of reference, try considering the other person's views from his outlook on life. Once you do, the "generation gap" will cease.

Older People Should Try Youths' Ways

I think that the old people should try the youths' way of long hair or the way we dress. They might think all this is bad, but if they tried they might like it and learn to talk to the youths. I picked the old people to get into the younger generation because the youths are more involved in this world today. The older people see the youth striking and they put in their minds that they are all bad. But that is not true. We all should get spokesmen from their sides and the youths and sit down and talk things over. But the older generation might think we might take the generation over.

Young Must Focus Upon The Present

The generation gap is inevitable in today's changing world. Youth has inherited a confused, increasingly self-conscious society that has outgrown the past. Yet by rejecting the past they also reject their parents who still cherish the values and traditions that sustained them during the turbulence of the post-war years. This separation of values often results in alienation and mutual distrust between parent and child.

In most cases, this alienation persists because each group fails to understand the other's viewpoint.

Young people criticize the old-fasioned ideas and preoccupation with success of their elders. Too often they forget that their parents were brought up in an era of depression and world war, when getting ahead meant staying fed and clothed.

Many members of this seasoned group are also blindly critical. Frightened and bewildered by change, they misunderstand the motives of the post-war generation. They see demonstrations and protest groups as a rejection of American society, rather than as an attempt to improve it.

In the face of an uncertain future and an irrelevant past, young people are focusing on the present in their search for new values and meaning. This search takes many forms: encounter groups, travel, psychotherapy, sexual experimentation and the use of drugs. Unfortunately, many of these things, looked on with suspicion and distaste by much of the older generation, serve to increase the distance between them and their offspring.

All of us, young and old, must seek together the principles to guide human conduct. By understanding what men are, we can agree, together, to try to be what men should be.

Examine Old Values To Find Prejudices

How can youth and the over-30s reach a better understanding of one another? Is there really a happy medium between different languages, moral philosophies, value standards and life styles? The answers must be as complex as man himself.

Man differs from other animals in a sense because he has an extraordinary development of the brain and the power to articulate language — he thinks and he speaks. It would be good for us to recognize thinking and speaking as a right of all men and a means toward attempting to gain the truth. We must respect this right and tolerate one another for it.

It would be good, also, for us to recognize that man's ways of thinking and speaking change with every sunrise. Each day is a new day with new thoughts and new ways to express them. This process seems to be natural and ever-continuing.

How, then, can we connect yesterday's thoughts and speech with what we think and say today — how can we unite the old with the new? Since there is much confusion today as to what is right, we might start by reassuring ourselves of the validity of yesterday's truths. Let us not be afraid to think and speak about old truths because if we lay them all out in front of us for examination, we might be able to pick out those that may have found a base in prejudiced thinking. We just might discover that yesterday's prejudices made up yesterday's truths and that possibly we are and have been continuing to pass these prejudices off as reason.

We might all gain a better understanding of one another and ourselves regardless of our age or circumstance by turning the pointing finger away from each other and pointing it at the past and present truths by which we live. I feel it a duty, to ourselves and to our children and to the truths of tomorrow, to attempt to expose and rid ourselves of prejudice in all its forms and wherever it may be found.

OVER 30 YEARS

The letter by Margaret Myles which appeared May 5 under the headline, "Turn Down Decibels And Quit Pretending," was wrongly classified. It appeared with the 18-21 year contest entries. It should have appeared in the Over-30 classification.

Look To Future And Keep Your Faith

I am the mother of an 18-year-old son.

Sometimes he doesn't understand me, and sometimes I don't understand him. But I will say this: He knows a lot more than I did at his age.

As for this so-called "generation gap," there will always be that. I had it myself and one thing they don't want to hear is: "When I was your age we did this or that." I didn't want to hear it in my time, but we say it because we may think we can prevent the obstacles we went through, but let me tell you this, "experience is the best teacher." I tell that to my son, and his friends know more than I did at his age.

In the beginning I raised him to be self-sufficient and not to depend on anyone. That is why I have faith in him, no matter what comes.

I admit at times I am confused by it all.

I have had an opportunity to meet a lot of his friends, and whether they have long hair or not they are basically intelligent and I would venture to say, "smarter than me."

I know I depend a lot on him and often ask his advice. Not to say I worry, but what parent doesn't? I know one thing, I am proud to have a son, and when I gave birth to him I was very happy!

He has taken care of me when I was ill and done a lot for me around the house, since I work.

I say, "look to the future," and it will be not as bad as some people think. Have faith!

Immigrant Expresses Confidence In America

I been in America few years. Born in France, I have live the horrors of war, suffered misery that wars bring to people anywhere.

I will tell you in my own words what I feel about the country that I love.

Americans criticize themselves when something seems wrong to them, they fight it out very strongly. It is a sign of good health for a sick person when she is aware that she is ill.

Americans are lucky to be free people and many have taken advantage of this, channels of communication are open and arguments have become unlimited and out of hand.

I believe wealth and beauty of this land shall be cherished and tenderly protected. America is the only hope to mankind. Is no other country that can compare to the United States. Only the people have created the most efficient and modern cornucopia, with the greatest abundance the world has ever known.

I believe America have no desire to take no one else territory. America has no interest in imposing upon anyone else a particular system of government. In spite to the contrary, America is the hope of all mankind.

The time has come when young and old will have to unite to look over whatever damage has being done, with respect, love and humility piece it together; and with God, wisdom and guidance, a lasting peace will be achieved for all.

Patience, Flexibility Required Of Adults

Stop and listen is the first most important thing to help the generation gap. Our children love to express their views on politics, the establishment, the family, etc. — stop and listen to them. Then if you have a fact on your view express yourself. It cannot be hearsay or beliefs but facts; then a mutual respect develops.

Patience is hard to have at times for either group. The years change all of our thinking and what we might think today could change tomorrow.

Don't criticize either your child or his friends, his hair or his dress. He knows how you feel and is waiting to upset you. If you do not react he is disappointed. He has to be part of the crowd but hope for moderation.

Independence for the adolescent is necessary. You may have different ideas but if it is within bounds "grin and bear" it. It is pretty hard at times to let him pursue his own project such as having your driveway strewn with nuts, bolts, fenders, etc. At least he is home.

Money is most important today. Money handed out freely brings rebellion. Let them earn it. This not only teaches them the value and respect for money but also responsibility and importance and makes them a part of this society. Always be truthful.

Be adaptable to change — one of the hardest of all. Perhaps it could be expressed as Richard L. Evans, who delivers the "Spoken Word" part of the Salt Lake Tabernacle Choir and Organ broadcast, put it: "Old or young, we have to keep flexible in living life; not flexible as to principles, as to things of eternal truth, but flexible in our reactions to environment, to people and places, to the going and coming of friends and family, to changing situations and circumstances."

Adults Must Become More Open-Minded

A better understanding would prevail between the younger generation and the over-30 group, I believe, if adults would spend more time and energy trying to comprehend the problems that the young people face in our society today. Careful examination of our values and ideas, which we sometimes try to impose on young people, possibly would make us more open-minded and understanding of today's youth.

In the confusing world we live in today, it is extremely difficult for the young to establish their self-identity. In addition to being born under the threat of the bomb, they face the problems of pollution, poverty, population explosion, and a tragic war they do not support or believe in. The future must look pretty bleak to the young people of today, and they need our support and sympathy, not criticism and ostracism. We cannot afford to be apathetic and indifferent to the younger generation's views and ideas, as it is very obvious to all that many changes must be made within our society if we are to survive.

Communication between the young and adults, where each party really listens to what the other one is saying is an absolute necessity. Sometimes we tend to talk at the young instead of really listening to what they are telling us. Also, I believe that if we respect young people as individuals, and not try to inflict adult authority on them, we would have smoother relationships. We should strive to treat young people in the same manner in which we would like to be treated. Most of all, we have to create an atmosphere where feelings of either group may be expressed and respected.

I believe more interest should be expressed by adults in the areas that the young wish to share with us. In other areas, such as copying their clothing styles, where young people do not wish us to intrude, I believe we should stay out.

We have a habit of stereotyping the young, such as lumping all adolescents with long hair into the drug category. Perhaps an adult, if he really thought about it, would not take offense to matters such as the length of hair when there are so many more significant things to worry about. We have to learn to be flexible and be able to compromise with young people, and at other times, even make concessions.

If we give of ourselves to the young, love and trust them, they will respond with love and trust. We should not have to impose our values and ideas upon young people, for if we set good examples for them to follow, and if they have good feelings about us, they will want to emulate us.

Generation Gap Starts With Infancy

I believe the generation gap opens up at a very tender age with our youngsters because we parents do not treat them like little friends or little people but like something slightly sub-human called a "child." Instead of being polite and respectful to this little person, a parent interrupts him without apology, bosses him around, often without explanation of why, invades his privacy, and makes decisions for him. While constantly telling him "not to interrupt," a parent keeps on talking, never giving the little person a chance to say anything.

With the best intentions in the world, a parent makes choices for him which he himself is not too young to make. For example, a favorite TV program might be due at 5:30 p.m. and the youngster is hanging around an hour ahead of time, waiting for it. The mother tells him to run outside and she will call him for his program. When 5:30 approaches, she looks outside and sees he is having a wonderful time with his friends. She then makes a unilateral decision that he prefers to continue this good time and does not call him for his program. Can he trust her again? Not quite so much. The erosion of confidence has begun.

Family Best Place To Communicate

Hurray for the I-J! Your "Rap Session" is a brilliant idea. This so-called generation gap may not be as wide or deep as its publicity suggests, but whereever it exists the human beings involved — young or old — should bend every effort to build a bridge across it. Communication is one of the important planks needed for such a bridge.

Most people talk too little, not too much. Many lack courage or ability to express their deep convictions. In my youth it was considered bad form at a social gathering to bring up religion or politics (sex was taboo). Controversy was frowned upon. Now we speak of everything everywhere at any time but oposing opinions continue to make open discussion extremely difficult.

I believe the family home — though by no means the only place — provides the best workshop for this special art. Beginning at birth the gurgles and giggles proceeding from the nursery can develop in later years into great conversations. All that is needed for this growth is a delight in listening and a loving response.

By the time children have reached their teens they usually have discovered a few simple rules that can keep an exciting argument going or bring it to a grinding halt. C. S. Lewis wrote his own useful rule: "Agree to disagree but not to judge." Granted that becoming a pro in any field demands "know how" and lots of practice, it also offers magnificent rewards.

As communication grows the bridge across the generation gap can begin to grow, reducing the distance between, until, hopefully, we are able to reach each other. I feel sure your "Rap Session" will make a valuable contribution toward this goal.

There's No Such Thing As Fair, Impartial

We have all been brought up with the belief that there is such a thing as fair, unjust, justice or fairness or impartiality. From my point of view there is no such thing as impartial. Most behaviors are a function of learning history, fairness and words such as deserve. People get what they deserve in the end or somewhere along the line. These words are not what they appear to be; there is no absolute standard of fairness, fairness sounds like an objective term.

There is a great deal of evidence for center of gravity. There is none for emotional centers of gravity, yet when people say these together it sounds as though there are such things.

We're brought up in schools that give you a "C" because you deserved a "C," involved here is the myth of fairness. Fair is a way of controlling the behavior of young people who eventually get to be old people. It is a way of interacting with one another that has survival value or has had up until now. It is a way of controlling situations where people may tend to escalate in aggressive behavior; possibly ending up in killing one another. We may de-escalate simply by saying to the other person, "I want to be fair," or stop doing that, that's not fair.

When we say things are not fair we are controlling each other, and we are doing it with aversive stimuli, it would be better for us in the long haul, if we forego this type of control with one another and introduce another kind.

Solution To "Gap" Contradict Selves

I come away from today's (April 30) "Rap Session" somewhat less than enlightened. Judging from the letters presented, the way to produce a generation "so intelligent, so full of compassion for the oppressed, so full of enthusiasm, and so filled with idealism" is for the previous generation (their parents) to spend all their time in X-rated movies, or staggering around in an alcoholic or nicotine haze (not pot; that's a "good-guy" vice).

Or, if you prefer, to produce children who are "beautiful people, super-smart, with character and guts," their parents need only be "too busy searching for their own identity," and "gouging for that damned almighty dollar" (which, after all, only pays the bills) to give them any Tender Loving Care.

No, I don't hate the young. I have several specimens in my own home. I simply feel there's a helluva lot of nonsense being spouted about what is either a "super-generation" or a "bunch of hippie bums," depending on your bias. This generation is composed of young human beings, neither much better nor much worse than all those who have gone before. They are simply receiving far more attention. And it's about time we brought a halt to this sanctimonious downgrading of the generation which reared them. It may be fun, but it's destructive and grossly unfair.

Really Listening Greatest Contrib

To listen. The greatest contribution which my group (over-30) could make toward better understanding between younger people and ourselves is to listen. This sounds so simple at first glance that it may appear naive, but real listening means more than just the ability to keep one's mouth shut. It is a state of mind — of openness and receptivity.

Too often adults give an impression of listening while internally they have turned off because they (1) are not interested, (2) disagree with what the other person is saying, (3) have prepared themselves to reject what they are about to hear because "young people don't know what they're talking about."

It is a difficult thing to listen without passing judgment, to listen so that another person's viewpoint is honestly heard and can be verbalized in a way that lets the other person know that he has been understood. Equally important is listening with empathy. Communication of feelings is when a person is committed to identifying with another human being's inner experience. Often an adult's own feelings can interfere with his ability to hear what a younger person is saying.

Today young people are confronted by a myriad of overwhelmingly complex problems. The long-continuing war in Vietnam, the seeming impersonalization of government and industry, and the destruction of our environmental balance give young people a walled-in feeling.

In order to establish a link with younger people, we need to listen openly to their expressions of fear, frustration and concern without saying, "Yes, I know, but . . ."

By the same token, young people must approach us with equal neutrality. They must be willing to listen to our gripes about the spiraling economy and taxes, without turning a deaf ear because it does not concern them. They should be willing to discuss ideas for change without automatically turning us off because we seem too caught up in the daily struggle of making a living.

Only when we begin to listen and hear (and in this I think that adults must make the greater effort) can we begin to communicate our mutual concerns.

No Magic Antidote, But Understanding Helps

The "generation gap" is not a new phenomena. It is as old as time, and yet so many of us are looking for a magic antidote. I don't feel there's any quick, easy solution. Understanding, and that's what it's really all about, takes working at, day after day on both sides.

The words "communication" and "involvement" have been tossed around so much today, they have the ring of tired cliches, but I think they are the only effective means we have of establishing understanding between any age groups.

There is too much suspicion and prejudice on both ends of the scale. Generalization is a dangerous thing that spreads and contaminates. Every long-haired youth is not a "drug-crazed hippy," and not everyone over 30 in an "establishment robot" who will never again have an original thought.

The great progress in our world has come from the exchange of ideas. We must talk to one another, often and at length. We must keep open minds and open hearts. We must not fear involvement in each other's worlds. Most of all we should not be afraid to alter our opinions.

That old rule of judging everyone on his or her individual merits still holds true. Categorizing people into age groups is the worst form of discrimination. Young or old, I would hope we are all anti-discrimination. It's hard to "think" 18 when you're 35, and even more difficult for an 18-year-old to project himself 17 years into the future, but even the attempt fosters understanding. We can learn from each other if we'll only let the other guy talk once in a while.

To Close The Gap, Live For The Present

I am thrilled to be a woman in my early 40s — thrilled to watch and be awakened, and to finally realize that our biggest gap is talking "gaps." I can't make a hole unless I dig it. Nor can I embrace you unless I am aware of your existence. And all I know for sure is what I pen at this moment. We can only reach an understanding of one another if we live in the here and now. It begins at this moment, and if you feel a gap then you better come to terms with the void in you.

Thank God we are becoming aware of the proper moral values. I pity the woman who must drape herself in white "baby" seal skins to be "someone," or the fancy lady who sat in our capitol, and now has unborn breast of calf flown hundreds of miles for a "wee dinner for two" when millions must hock their self-esteem to get a few measly food stamps. Thank God we have bridged the gap of false pride in esteeming the warrior, and finally realizing that we must love more than our immediate neighbor. Thank God we have increased our awareness, and look back through history, and try to feel as it might have felt to be a slave, and for the black person to not only realize I am his friend, but that I also love him, because he is my brother. And to feel good about ourselves, but not to be prideful, as pride is the breeder of wars. Instead, we, as a mass generation, are feeling the moment, and relinquishing our egocentric selves by wanting nothing from Charlie of 18 or Harry at 52, but only happiness for them both.

We spent too many precious moments already, worrying about "who's doing it with whom, and how" — as I, at one time, bestowed the medal of valor on myself for making it to my marriage bed.

Let us rejoice in our freedom of expression. Don't worry about the one word on the bathroom wall, think of what it did for the donor. Fan the flame of kindred spirit, and rock the world with life. To hell with where we'll plant our "dearly beloved." When you walk down the street, whistle. The stock market may drop, but the sky won't.

To Big Difference, Ask — Then Listen

The no-longer-youngsters should be able to dig the Revolution Scene a little better, having had somewhat similar inclinations (though much less courage to carry them out) way back in the dark ages, when to be told was to do. Parents used to ask, "What do these young people know? They haven't been around long enough for anything to penetrate." But now it's, "They know too much! And about all the wrong things." True. They know the old set of values is as dead as yesterday's other beautiful memories. And that life moves on, and no matter what the direction, you've got to move with it. Listen to the sound of the times. For example, does any father know what motivates his son? He'd be in for a surprise and might even learn something if he d ask. And listen to the answer!

The under-30s are also under-informed. The world didn't begin the day they were born. If anybody's to blame for the mess we're in why not Eve, standing there with applesauce on her face? Ever since she was thrown by the first snake eyes, there's been one kind of trouble or another. Having nothing to look forward to but the Bomb is a cop-out! That mushroom cloud first blossomed during World War II, but no one asked to buy back his introduction to the human race because of it. A step in the right direction would be to stop tuning out when adults go into the "old traditions" bit. It could be really informative. Why not ask? And listen to the answer!

So, in a nutshell — which is where most of us seem to be living these days — the key words to inter-generational understanding are: ASK, and LISTEN!

Mrs. JEANE VESPER

We Cannot Meet, But We Can Understand

Understanding is best described as being tolerant and sympathetic and being tolerant and sympathetic is most difficult in a growing number of relationships between youth and the over-30.

In many now defeated cases, this may be obtained by the youth and the over-30 recognizing, whether the individual wants to or not, the reasons why aims, needs, drives, habits and hopes differ. Naturally, each individual relationship between youth and over-30 differs, varies considerably and no such recognitions come easy.

Almost desperately, I observe youth turning to religion and I wonder if this is not actually or also, a search for tolerance and sympathy. And I observe over-30 trying to escape attempts to communicate by showing youth anger, contempt, and other negatives.

When my son returned from Vietnam, he asked, "Understand me." I answered, "I do; I do not, however, agree." In this way, our relationship has tottered plenty as we both have wondered how youth-son and over-30-parent could be reaching for such completely different ways of life. We had some shouting, emotional debates but every now and then, each would listen briefly to the other, thereby not destroying for all time the deep affection we once had and, with patience — yes, and tolerance and sympathy one for the other, hoped to have, somehow, again. It became a matter of each of us really trying and then, finally, succeeding in each being tolerant and sympathetic.

As the growing expression states, "there is no way" to date by which our totally different frames of references and purposes can meet — but we can meet and talk and listen sometimes, anyway — and when we do, he understands, and I understand, for we have become tolerant and sympathetic, one for the other.

Demos May Seek Passage Of Reagan's State Budget

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Assembly Democratic leaders indicated yesterday they may seek passage of Gov. Ronald Reagan's $6.7 billion state budget but strike major unresolved programs such as welfare and education from the spending program.

Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti and Ways and Means Chairman Willie Brown Jr. told newsmen they might seek to finance those programs separately with appropriation bills tied to tax increase legislation.

Moretti said those programs could continue to function at their current budgeted levels in the next fiscal year starting July 1 without the legislature "appropriating one nickel for them."

Moretti said existing law assures continued financing of welfare and education programs at their current levels and that those two areas need not be included in the budget document itself.

He stressed, however, that "when we come to July 1, I want the entire fiscal situation resolved."

The two Democrats refused to be pinned down during an informal news conference on the Assembly floor but outlined what they called a "hypothetical" plan for construction of the budget.

Under questioning about passing a budget containing no funds for welfare and education but financing them separately with legislation tied to increased taxes, Moretti replied:

"We may well do that. That's the only way we can get attention to those needs."

Brown announced his Ways and Means Committee plans a special hearing Wednesday night on the budget and said it probably would reach the floor May 17 or May 20, at the latest. The deadline for legislative passage is June 30.

Brown told the Assembly the spending plan would contain a "rather unusual" balancing procedure in which Republicans could "easily" support.

But Assembly Republican leader Robert Monagan argued during a brief partisan floor scrap that such major unresolved policy issues as welfare, school finance and taxation should be dealt with in advance of the budget.

Profile Of A New College President

Sonoma State Is 'Alive And Doing Things,' Says Its Chief Administrator

By BONNIE BARD

Psychologist Thomas H. McGrath never pictured himself as a college president, but since his appointment to the top spot at Sonoma State College he has grown accustomed to the role.

"It's hard adjusting to a new job and a new home too," McGrath said.

He and his wife, Margaret, live in an apartment in Santa Rosa, but because of a lack of space for mementoes they've collected over the years, they haven't been able to consider it as "home." He said they hope eventually to buy a house in the college vicinity.

"I NEVER REALLY thought I'd become a college president," McGrath admitted. "My whole approach to my career hasn't been planned. I've simply thrown myself completely into whatever I am doing."

McGrath's career started with teaching at Mount San Antonio College at Walnut, Los Angeles County, in 1947: seven years on the psychology faculty at the Southern California campus of California State Polytechnic College, and research with the human factors group at the Navy electronics laboratory in San Diego.

He has been dean of students at California State Polytechnic College, Kellogg-Voorhis, from 1957 until 1964, when he joined the staff of State College Chancellor Glenn S. Dumke. McGrath had advanced to assistant executive vice chancellor at the time of his appointment to the Sonoma State presidency on Jan. 27.

McGRATH, 53, said he moved around often early in his career to gather as much experience as possible, but not necessarily to climb the ladder of success.

"I don't find it necessary to be top dog — to have influence," he said. "Titles never meant much to me."

McGrath added that he has never really missed being in the classroom as an instructor although he did long for the campus atmosphere while doing Navy research.

"When I went back as dean of students I found myself tied to a desk with office hours, but I really didn't miss the classroom,'' he said. "After all, deans are really teachers without a classroom."

"I WOULDN'T be a good dean now," McGrath said. "I've grown too rigid and too conservative."

He said he believes that deans must be young enough to relate to student and to keep up with the heavy workload, but mature enough for decision-making.

Although McGrath has been at the Rohnert Park campus only three months, he qualifies as one of the college's biggest boosters and speaks of it with pride.

"SONOMA STATE has a reputation with young people as being an 'in campus,' " he said, noting Santa Cruz enjoys the same honor in the University of California system. "We're alive and doing things here."

"The young age of the college might have something to do with it, but a lot is due to Amby's approach to its organization as a real community," he said, referring to former President Ambrose R. Nichols Jr., who resigned a year ago and now teaches in the chemistry department.

"A great many people were involved in early decisions and felt a real sense of participation," McGrath observed, adding that the rural atmosphere surrounding the campus is especially attractive to young people.

IN HIS FORMER position in the chancellor's office and in his new capacity, McGrath has felt some of the antagonism from the outside community where the college is sometimes considered a hotbed of radical activities and a home to youngsters who have a prejudice against washing.

NEW MAN ON CAMPUS at Rohnert Park is Thomas H. McGrath, appointed president of Sonoma State College only in late January, but already a familiar figure at the school and one of its most

While McGrath heard some of these comments made during an investigation he headed last summer, each derisive charge now has a personal meaning for him.

In a meeting with a Sonoma County civic leader, McGrath was discussing the man's son, a student at a private Bay Area university who was spending his junior year studying abroad. The concerned father told McGrath that his son was no longer happy with his private school and wanted to complete his education somehwere else upon his return.

"HE'S EVEN considering Sonoma State," McGrath was told.

Budgetary problems have also become one of McGrath's personal concerns as the college attempts to fit the expanding curriculum within the current fiscal limitations.

He said smaller colleges like Sonoma State will be hardest pressed because, unlike larger universities, they cannot simply set up additional classes of 300 students to accommodate higher enrollment.

"The style of the institution is personal, so we have no large classrooms," McGrath said. "Our largest room is intended for 125 students, so we can't average out the necessary small classes intended with some very large lecture courses."

IN HIS YEARS on various campuses, McGrath has seen the college system change along with the student life-style.

"Students are different — they have no rigid goals. They want to contribute and are not impressed by degrees, licenses and such," he said.

McGrath noted that many students no longer set a goal of attending college four years, earning a degree And then getting a job. Some remain at the college until they feel their personal needs are met, which could be one to six years, he said.

"The academic atmosphere is very supportive of their lives," he said. "Young people living together in a college or commune atmosphere is fine for a while, but problems develop for the student. It's all very self-reinforcing and there's no balance that causes him to look at himself from another point of view," he said.

McGrath believes that student political action has run its course on most campuses. "It was self-destructive," he said.

While in Sacramento, McGrath heard reports both from the chancellor's office and from Gov. Ronald Reagan's office that Sonoma State had the potential of being a violent campus.

"That was based on second and third-hand information they had very much over-rated," McGrath claimed.

He considers himself a student-oriented president and meets frenquently and casually with students, either in his office lounge or the student center.

"SOME HAVE suggested that I close the college down in protest of the governor's budget recommendations," McGrath said. "I told them that if the college is ever closed, it will be because 4,000 students want it closed. If there's one student who wants to attend class, then the college will stay open — no matter what."

McGrath believes the college has far fewer radical students than residents of outside communities imagine.

"We really have a good atmosphere here," he said.

Embroidery: Next-Best-Thing To Fishing

88-Year-Old Frank Bauman Keeps Busy With Needle And Thread

By DON KEOWN

Many a widower or bachelor has been forced, out of sheer necessity, to master the skill of sewing buttons onto his shirts and even darning the holes in his socks.

But even before Frank G. Bauman's wife passed away in 1951, he did all the sewing in his family.

And at 88, nearly 89, he continues to sew as a hobby second in his affections only to fishing and hunting.

Sewing is hardly an apt description for the fine stitchery that he produces in his spare time when not sitting on a lake shore or creek bank with fishing pole in hand.

MUCH OF IT is difficult and elaborate embroidery work with complicated and exacting patterns that betray the engineering background of Bauman before his retirement.

Born in Pittsburgh, Pa., on July 17, 1882, he worked mainly as a machinist, tool and die-maker and as a fitter. He was employed by the Thomas Spacing Machine Co. from 1937 until six months prior to his 80th birthday.

One of his most memorable assignments was his participation in the designing of the valves for the huge turbines of Boulder Dam.

FOR THOMAS Spacing he designed and fashioned the lubricating system for a mammoth shearing machine, working without blueprints except those in his keen mind.

He played a similar role in the development of other contributions by that company to America's technological arsenal.

Off the job, his nimble fingers and sharp brain were as active as they were at work.

As a youth and as a young man, he particularly enjoyed boat-building as well as hunting and fishing as his hobbies. As he grew older, he gave up boat-building to concentrate upon the hunting and fishing.

WHEN HIS years caused him to forego hunting, he turned to small bore target shooting, loading his own shells for greater accuracy, and he became an expert shot.

Now the fishing is his principal outdoor interest, and he talks about it with great enthusiasm.

"Given a nice day," he says, "I'm happiest with a fishing rod in my hands."

But given a rainy or cold day, Bauman still has his fancy needlework to fall back upon to keep himself occupied.

"I GUESS I have always

FRANK G. BAUMAN approaches his embroidery projects in much the same way as he tackled his engineering assignments before his retirement — by first making a careful and detailed study of the pattern. At left is pictured a design worked into the center of a tablecloth. At right is a floral picture done in stitchery and in pretty pastel colors, to be framed and hung on the wall. And below, the fancy embroidery that embellishes some Bauman-created guest towels.

been interested in making fancy things with my hands," he says.

He remembers the chains he wove from horsehair as a schoolboy.

He became seriously interested in fancy stitchery "around 1937" when his sister-in-law showed him a pair of embroidered towels that she had completed and the beauty of the stitching aroused his artistic instincts.

"SHE TOLD ME how to go about embroidering," he says, "and pretty soon I was doing my own."

While still employed, Bauman's spare time was limited, and so was his embroidery. But in 1948 he started his most ambitious project to date, a tablecloth and napkin set in Italian cutwork, and a year and seven months later it was finished.

Since coming to Marin County three years ago, Bauman has found a great deal more time for his needlework.

IN THOSE three years, he has completed six large tablecloths, two luncheon cloths, two twin-size quilts, four stitchery pictures "and an unknown number of guest towels done in Swedish Modern."

His daughters, Mary Ritzman and Elner Miller, also of Corte Madera, say their father "approaches the complex embroidery work the same way he used to do his engineering — by first studying the pattern extensively to determine in which direction the stitches should be made."

"This advance planning," they add, "results in a design appearing on both sides of the material, with the stitches on the underside all going in the same direction. And because he determines thread lengths in advance, there are no visible knots."

THUS BAUMAN'S work is distinguished by a reverse side upon which the design is as interesting and as attractive as that on the primary side. Making his skill all the more noteworthy, he works left-handed.

And throughout his work, Bauman maintains a close approximate count of the number of stitches as well as the length of thread used in each piece.

For example, one tablecloth, 59 inches by 90 inches, involved 31,270 stitches, another required 28,380 stitches, and each of his quilts involved more than 37,000 stitches.

WHEN HE decides to devote a day to his embroidering — "when it isn't fishing weather" — Bauman is likely to put in as much as six and a half hours on the work, three hours in the morning, another two in the afternoon and an hour and a half in the evening.

"I find that when I am working with a needle and thread, figuring out a design, or actually putting it in, I feel better," the octogenarian says.

And that is his advice for other senior citizens: "Keep yourself occupied. Then you forget all those little aches and pains. You don't have time to feel miserable."

BAUMAN SAYS he has given some of his work to friends and relatives, but has never tried to sell them. "When you put so much thinking and effort into them," he explains, "you become attached to them, and you like to keep them."

Adds daughter Mrs. Ritzman of tablecloths, luncheon cloths and napkins that her father has made for her: "They are so pretty, we won't even let company eat on them."

Mrs. Ritzman, who paints, took some of her father's needlework to a Marin Society of Artists gathering to show to some of her fellow artists.

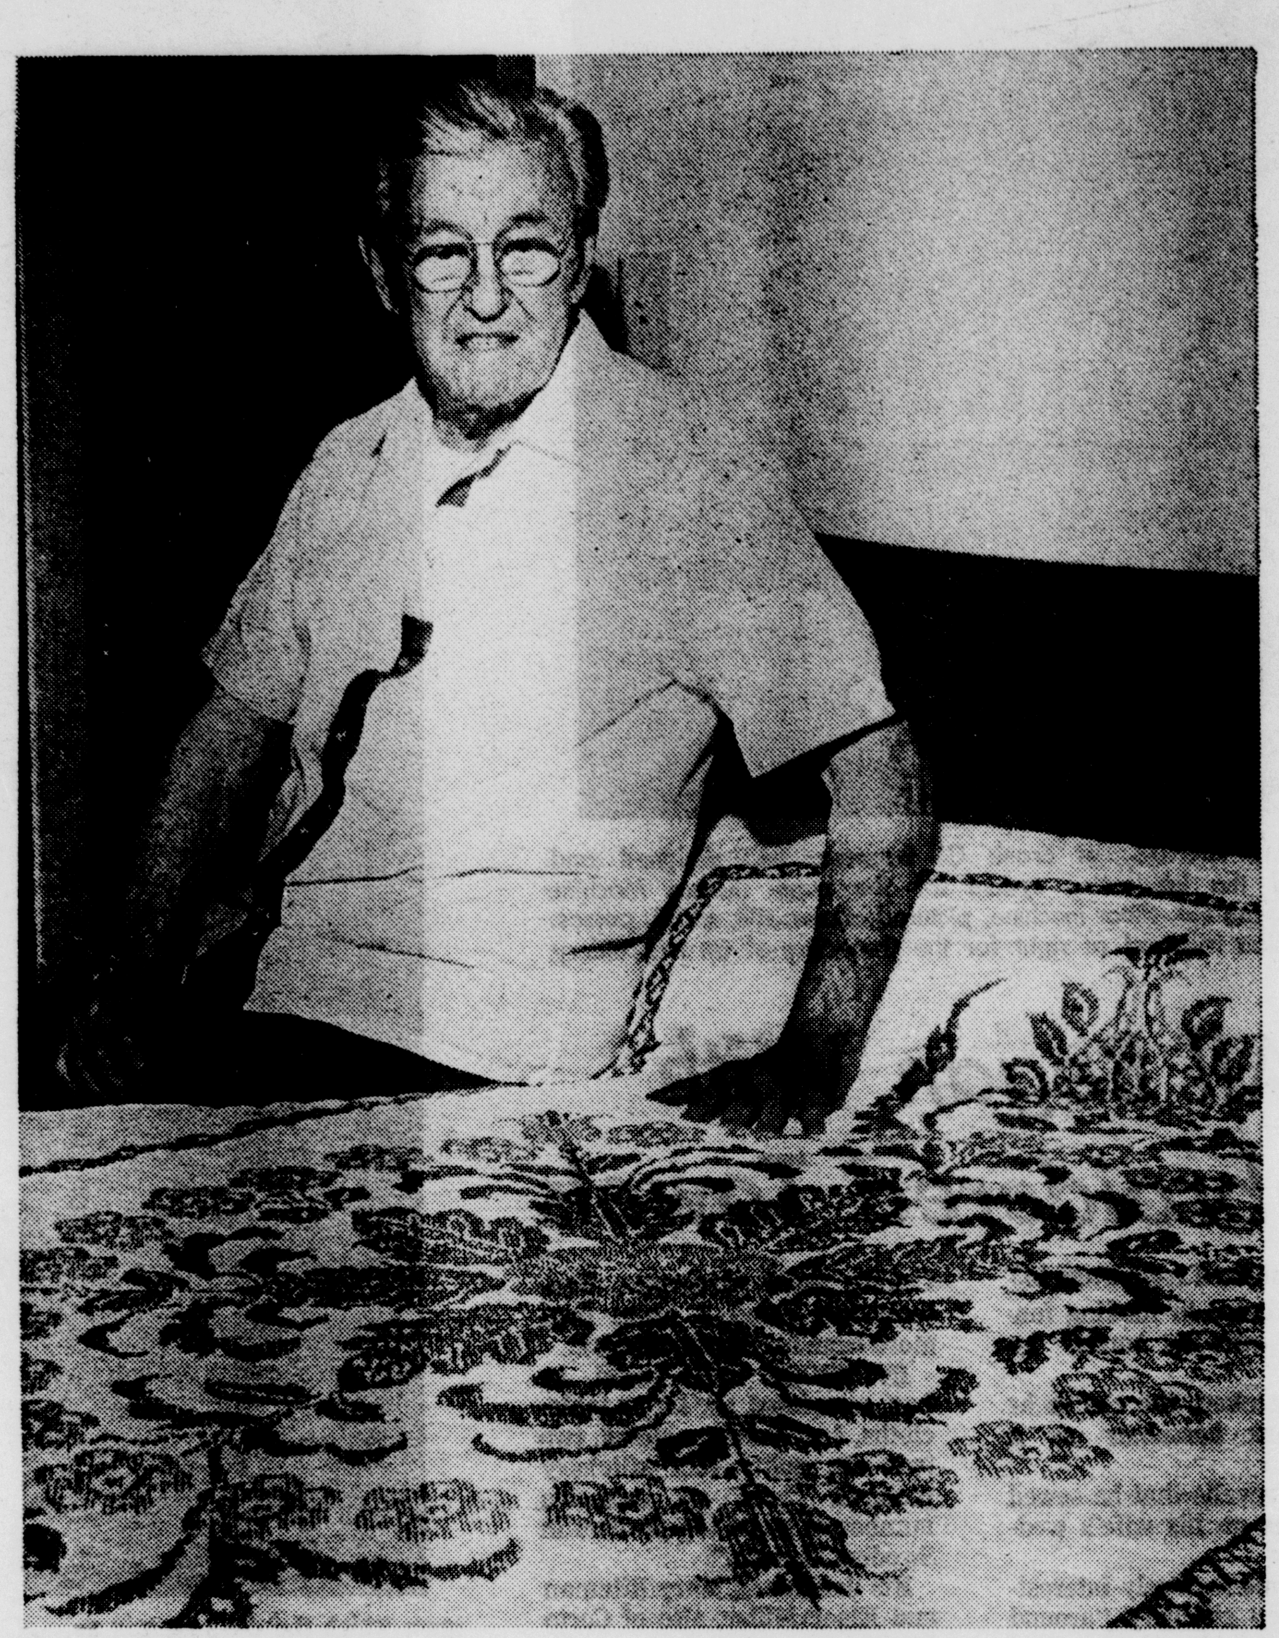
"THEY THOUGHT it was fantastic," she reports. "They were so impressed they insisted that it ought to be shown somewhere."

Consequently some "wall pictures" that the creative 88-year-old did in embroidery are scheduled to be exhibited at the Crocker-Citizens National Bank in Corte Madera in September.

Bauman will be 89 then. But in excellent health, he expects to continue with his embroidery — and his fishing —well into his 90s.

As for the daughters, neither does embroidery work. Mrs. Ritzman sticks to her painting, and Mrs. Miller crochets some.

"But father has preempted the embroidery field in our family," laughs Mrs. Ritzman. "He's just too good for us."



WITH PARDONABLE PRIDE, Frank G. Bauman poses in his Corte Madera home with one of the bedspreads for which he did the fancy needle work. Bauman has finished two of the quilted spreads, along with tablecloths, luncheon cloths, towels, embroidered pictures, etc., in the past three years since coming to Marin.

WORKING LEFT-HANDED, Frank Bauman does some fancy stitchery upon a tablecloth which, when completed, will be, his daughters say, "too pretty even to use for company." His work is distinguished by an underside in which the design is every bit as neat and attractive as it is on the primary side.

One School Where No Child Fails —

St. Stephen's Parish School Features More Teachers For Fewer Pupils

By BECKY MATSON

In one small school in Marin County today, there is no sense of crisis in the classroom.

Public schools may be struggling with Gargantuan problems, but St. Stephen's Parish Day School in Belvedere quietly goes about the task of educating 36 youngsters.

Begun eight years ago in the lower level of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Parish Day School was designed as a "church-related school, unique in character, to provide an education that could not be obtained in public schools."

WITH THE flexibility of a private school, Parish Day feels free to inject its academic program with "the loving concern of a Christian community."

Each day begins with a chapel period in the church sanctuary.

"We try to teach children to trust and care for each other," said Rev. John Thornton, rector of St. Stephen's Parish who also acts as headmaster for the school. "We do this various ways; first, by helping them become aware of themselves as a person, and then aware of their feelings for other people."

TO THE casual observer, Parish Day resembles the one-room schoolhouse of a century ago. Ages range from 4½ to 11 and, academically, courses are equivalent to public school instruction kindergarten through third grade. In this ungraded school, however, calendar ages are almost meaningless.

"We're in the business of detecting readiness," said Reverend Thornton. "And we provide educational opportunities on the basis of that readiness."

Educators long ago determined that chronological age and individual development do not necessarily match. The mental-age range in a group of 6-year-olds entering the first grade is often more than three years.

PHYSICALLY, it's the same story — the eye-to-hand muscle coordination necessary to learn to read and write, do not develop at the same time in all children.

Unlike the current "free school" movement, Parish Day has a certain number of rules and an academic program based on the same subjects as public schools: Language arts, mathematics, science, art, French, music and physical education.

"Teaching is more difficult in a non-graded school," said Principal-Teacher Margaret Jackson, "because each child is working at his own level in each subject. This is the real value of our school.

"WE ADJUST oursleves to suit a child — we don't make the child adjust to fit into a system. We can accommodate children who are gifted and we can help those who have difficulty learning."

All of the students are loosely grouped into three divisions — Lower and Upper Primaries, and a Transition Group.

"We used to call the third one, the 'Bridge Group'," said Nance Wrisley, a teacher at Parish Day for the last six years, "but we had to change the name. People thought we were teaching the children to play cards.

"ACTUALLY, WE have very little structure. Each child progresses at his own rate. And there is always success. This is the whole idea behind St. Stephen's — the children never fail.

"A child may go ahead in one area and take longer in another. Very rarely do children keep pace with each other for any length of time. Each child is accepted for himself, for his own uniqueness."

Even though it is housed in an Episcopal church, the school is non-sectarian. Half of the students come from families of the church's members; the rest are from Protestant denominations, Jewish, and other religious backgrounds.

BUT PARENTS don't object to the chapel period.

"We're only concerned with communicating love to these children," said Reverend Thornton, "and there is nothing doctrinaire about what we're doing.

"Everyone goes right along with this. We're very sensitive to the children who come from Jewish homes or from homes where there is no form of religious expression. We try to take an approach which develops a relationship of caring and support for one another.

"As I tell the parents, we don't teach dogmatic religion; we teach existential theology.

"ONE OF THE exercises in chapel period is that teams are formed and one child is blindfolded. Then the other child is required to lead him all over the church building — in and out the pews, up over the pews, over the altar rail, everywhere, but being very careful and helping him, in and out and over and under so that he doesn't injure himself in any way — developing his trust in another person.

"Are you willing to put your life in somebody else's hands?

"For a moment it's kind of terrifying and you have to get over the terror and follow along. This exercise develops both trust and trustworthiness."

ABOVE, the school day at St. Stephen's Parish Day School begins with a chapel period. In front of the church altar, Rev. John Thornton, rector and headmaster, reads a chapter from "The Velveteen Rabbit" to youngsters who register reactions that range from fascination to total disinterest. At right, Lower Primary children at the school, by painting together, learn to accept one another and cease to be strangers. Their teacher, Anita Sumariwalla, calls this "classroom politics." Her pupils call it "fun."

A DIFFERENT kind of trust is expected of the parents. When they enroll their children, they agree to let the staff decide when a child is ready for any academic discipline. They are also asked not to compare their child's progress with that of any other child.

"Providing continuous progress for each child requires discernment on the part of the teachers," one parent said. "You have to trust the staff."

Progress reports in essay form come to parents twice a year. Formal testing is done once a year, using the same standardized tests as in public schools.

"TEST SCORES only tell us where a child is in relation to public schools," Reverend Thornton said.

"We have a teacher-student ratio of one to 12; in public schools, it's one to 30. We don't have to traumatize the children by constant testing. We live with these kids, you see, and tests can't tell us much more about them than we already know."

Anita Sumariwalla, the Lower Primary teacher, uses every opportunity for a learning experience. When a new playhouse (in the form of a castle) arrived, the children examined its construction in minute detail.

THEN MRS. Sumariwalla said, "I've found a little hole in the wall of our room. Let's peek in and see how our school was built, too." They did, and learned not only how walls were built but also the new words of "hollow," "solid," and "construction."

The children will paint the walls of the castle, "after we put on some cover-up clothing," Mrs. Sumariwalla said. "My children are mostly talented in painting themselves."

Parents differ in their opinions of the value of St. Stephen's School philosophies.

TO ONE mother, "the biggest plus factor is the proven fact of far greater academic gain." But according to another, it's the religious ingredient: "Chapel period gives the children another dimension about human beings, life in general, and the Creator of those beings and that life."

Academic success comes eventually to each child. One, a 6-year-old, reads at second grade level and is doing third grade math. Another child is the age of a public school fifth grader, but is comfortable working at third grade level. His best friend is two years younger, reads at sixth grade level and is working in third grade math.

"It doesn't matter," Mrs. Jackson said. "In Upper Primary, I'm using five different math books among thirteen children. Each child is working in a different section. And the children help each other."

COOPERATION, rather than competition, is part of the curriculum.

"We promote the feeling of a family," said Mrs. Wrisley. "Of course there's some competition, but it isn't rewarded. With a small group, of different ages, teachers can easily see who is ready to advance and who is not. Also, with small numbers, the teacher can allow for individual differences. We can spot difficulties before they develop into problems."

Parents express qualms about the eventual move their children must make into the grade layering and sometimes impersonal climate of a larger school.

"IT IS something in the minds of the parents," said Reverend Thornton. "But once a child leaves here, I'm not sure it becomes a problem to him. He has self-confidence and feels secure. We believe the longer you can keep a child in a successful atmosphere, the better he will be able to cope with any other situation.

"We're preparing these children for their next environment — for the rest of their elementary school, junior high school, high school, college, and graduate school educations.

"We think we prepare them for all of it."

"We try to teach children to trust and care for each other," says Rev. John Thornton, St. Stephen's headmaster.

"With more than 80 per cent of the population now living in urban areas, less than 40 per cent of the labor force is producing goods while 60 per cent performs services."

The observations come from Marcelett Henry, supervisor of the Food Education and Service Training (FEAST) and Occupational Clothing Training programs at Tamalpais High School in Mill Valley.

FOOD SERVICE, Mrs. Henry continues, has become the country's fourth largest business. And conservative figures estimate that in 1968 California's food service businesses were ringing up more than $5,700 in sales every minute.

With these facts and figures in mind, Tamalpais High School has aimed its specialized vocational studies at the fields where the labor demand exists and flourishes.

One or more semesters in a food service or clothing production class can, Mrs. Henry notes, soften considerably the uphill struggle the youngster without a college degree or training in a specialized school faces when he goes job hunting today.

"SUCCESS IN employment is dependent on the student's ability to make the behavioral changes required by employers," Mrs. Henry believes.

At Tamalpais, Project FEAST offers instruction in commercial cooking and waiting tables, coordinated with the mathematics-science-English classes and incorporated into the regular curriculum of the high school.

The Occupational Clothing Training program introduces its students to the manufacturing, merchandising and retailing functions of that industry.

THE OBJECTIVE in both courses is to enable students to acquire in a formal class situation the specialized abilities they need to be effective employees.

Lois McDonnell, mathematics teacher, says: "One of the less glamorous, but absolutely essential aspects of the FEAST program deals with mastering figures oriented toward hotel management and food service.

"These include learning the table of liquid and dry measurements, and accounting procedures. The student gets acquainted with decimals, percentages, bank deposit systems, payrolls, insurance, costs and pricing.

"And he learns the satisfaction that comes when, after running through a whole day's restaurant checks on the cash register, his totals check out to the last penny, with no shortage or overage."

PETER KLAIN of the English department adds, "I am concerned that FEAST participants be able to express themselves clearly, forcefully and colorfully. Both written and oral experiences are important, for both are usually involved in that all-important first contact with an employer.

"Classroom activities are planned to give the student as much experience as possible in speaking properly and writing legibly."

The purpose of the food education and service training basically is to prepare juniors and seniors who select the courses to enter a family of occupations related to food and hospitality services found in hotels, motels, restaurants, clubs and hospitals.

THE COURSES are designed to develop a reasonable proficiency in skills necessary for those who plan to go to work as soon as they graduate from high school, but also to lay the

TV Has Come A Long Way

It was 25 years ago this year that television first appeared in a few of the nation's living rooms.

Now, there are approximately 60 million U.S. homes equipped with sets. About one-third of them have two or more receivers.

Originally a neighborhood wonderment when a family purchased a 10-inch screen that flickered and faded, it now comes in color. About 22.6 million homes enjoy it in all its tints — and there are almost 30 million color sets in use.

A quarter of a century ago, there were about 5,000 sets. Those were black-and-white with relatively tiny viewing screens.

On Aug. 25, 1949, compatible, all-electronic color transmission was announced.

THE BLIND STITCH machine is used in the commercial clothing industry for hemming garments and other products, and is part of the equipment available to students of Tamalpais High School's Occupational Clothing Training program.

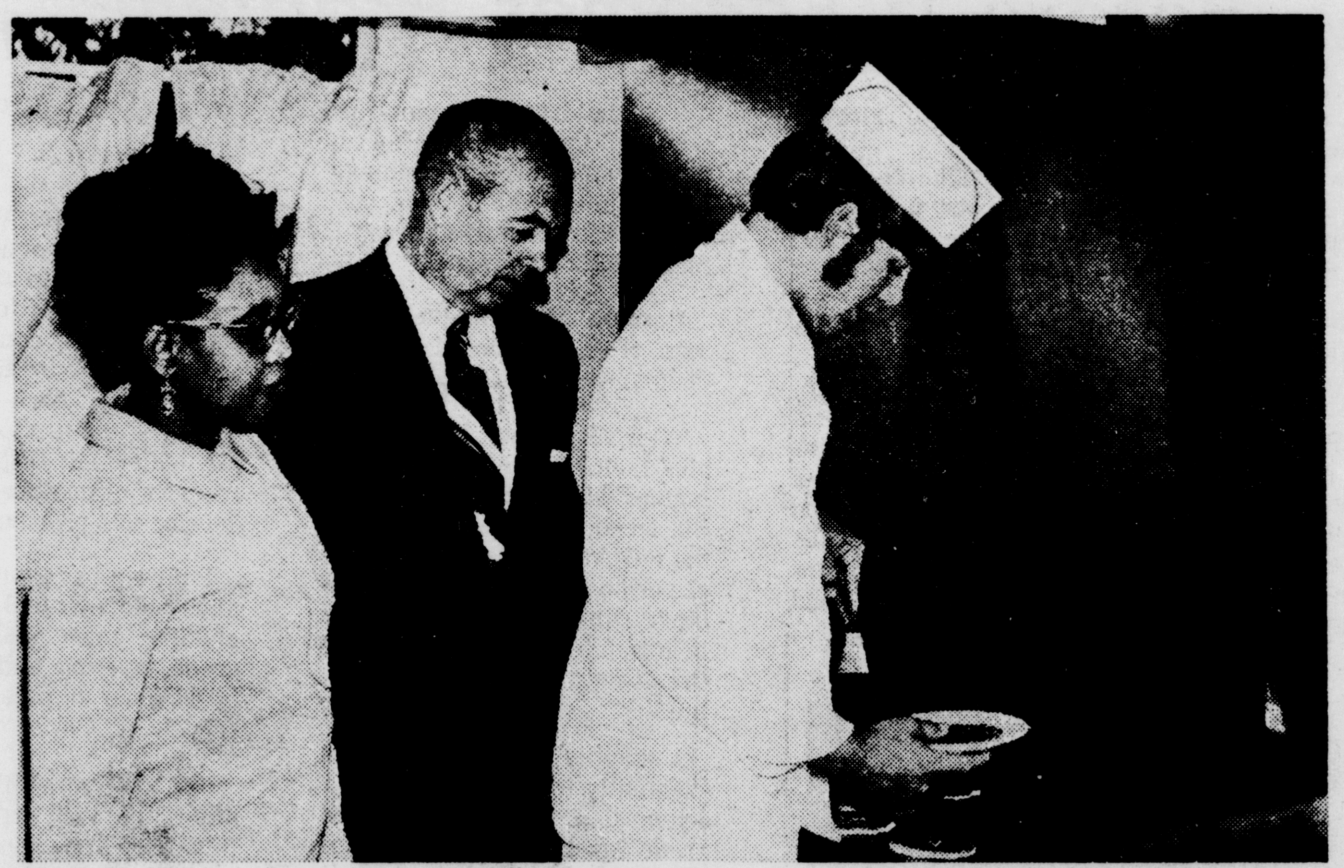
DEBBIE TITUS is the student here who is learning the skills of a single needle power machine operator in her occupational clothing class. There are 18 girls in the clothing program which is under the supervision of Marcelett Henry.



IN FOOD EDUCATION and Service Training, a young short order cook flips flapjacks for Marcelett Henry, who supervises the program, and Ben Farlatti, advisory committee member.

STUDENT WAITRESS Liz Mason shows the procedure she has learned in school as she serves advisory committee member Ben Farlatti and instructors Lois McDonnell, Peter Klein and Marcelett Henry.

Aiming At Where The Jobs Are

By GIL PEARSON

"With more than 80 per cent of the population now living in urban areas, less than 40 per cent of the labor force is producing goods while 60 per cent performs services."

The observations come from Marcelett Henry, supervisor of the Food Education and Service Training (FEAST) and Occupational Clothing Training programs at Tamalpais High School in Mill Valley.

FOOD SERVICE, Mrs. Henry continues, has become the country's fourth largest business. And conservative figures estimate that in 1968 California's food service businesses were ringing up more than $5,700 in sales every minute.

With these facts and figures in mind, Tamalpais High School has aimed its specialized vocational studies at the fields where the labor demand exists and flourishes.

One or more semesters in a food service or clothing production class can, Mrs. Henry notes, soften considerably the uphill struggle the youngster without a college degree or training in a specialized school faces when he goes job hunting today.

"SUCCESS IN employment is dependent on the student's ability to make the behavioral changes required by employers," Mrs. Henry believes.

At Tamalpais, Project FEAST offers instruction in commercial cooking and waiting tables, coordinated with the mathematics-science-English classes and incorporated into the regular curriculum of the high school.

The Occupational Clothing Training program introduces its students to the manufacturing, merchandising and retailing functions of that industry.

THE OBJECTIVE in both courses is to enable students to acquire in a formal class situation the specialized abilities they need to be effective employees.

Lois McDonnell, mathematics teacher, says: "One of the less glamorous, but absolutely essential aspects of the FEAST program deals with mastering figures oriented toward hotel management and food service.

"These include learning the table of liquid and dry measurements, and accounting procedures. The student gets acquainted with decimals, percentages, bank deposit systems, payrolls, insurance, costs and pricing.

"And he learns the satisfaction that comes when, after running through a whole day's restaurant checks on the cash register, his totals check out to the last penny, with no shortage or overage."

PETER KLAIN of the English department adds, "I am concerned that FEAST participants be able to express themselves clearly, forcefully and colorfully. Both written and oral experiences are important, for both are usually involved in that all-important first contact with an employer.

"Classroom activities are planned to give the student as much experience as possible in speaking properly and writing legibly."

The purpose of the food education and service training basically is to prepare juniors and seniors who select the courses to enter a family of occupations related to food and hospitality services found in hotels, motels, restaurants, clubs and hospitals.

THE COURSES are designed to develop a reasonable proficiency in skills necessary for those who plan to go to work as soon as they graduate from high school, but also to lay the groundwork for those who plan to continue their education for professional jobs at the community college or university level.

The FEAST approach is to teach students to take pride in work well done; to develop dependability and promptness; to have an understanding of what management expects and requires of employees; to understand unions and their roles in contracts, regulations and responsibilities; to learn how to listen to, understand and follow instructions; to learn how to work with all kinds of people under pressure and varying conditions; to acquire knowledge of the many kinds of kitchen equipment and how to use it, and finally to learn sanitary and safety procedures and precautions.

Courses covered through the eleventh and twelfth grades include nutrition, sanitation, quantity cooking, American government and physical education.

ELECTIVES include accounting, typing, booking, office machines, consumer economics and commercial food preparation.

The FEAST staff, in addition to Mrs. Henry, its director, and its teachers and counselors, includes an active advisory committee composed of representatives of management, labor and education.

The Occupational Clothing Training Program based at Tamalpais High is also under the direction of Mrs. Henry.

This course offers students who are interested in jobs in the clothing industry an opportunity to explore employment possibilities, and to prepare for certain entry-level assignments.

While open to both boys and girls, its present enrollment of 18 is composed entirely of girls, Mrs. Henry said.

Although sewing machines are there, and used, the Occupational Training Program, she added, should not be confused with the old high school sewing class experienced by many of the parents of today's students. "Our program includes merchandising and retailing aspects that were never envisioned in the old courses," she explained.

Employers, according to Mrs. Henry, have indicated a special interest in potential employees with specialized training in the clothing field, making it an unusually fertile employment field.

SUCH TRAINEES increase significantly their chances for eventually rising to executive status in a field in which they might enter on a clerical or skilled labor level, Mrs. Henry believes.

In the special employment opportunities it offers young people in a time in which their job picture is not always bright, the food service industry resembles the clothing business.

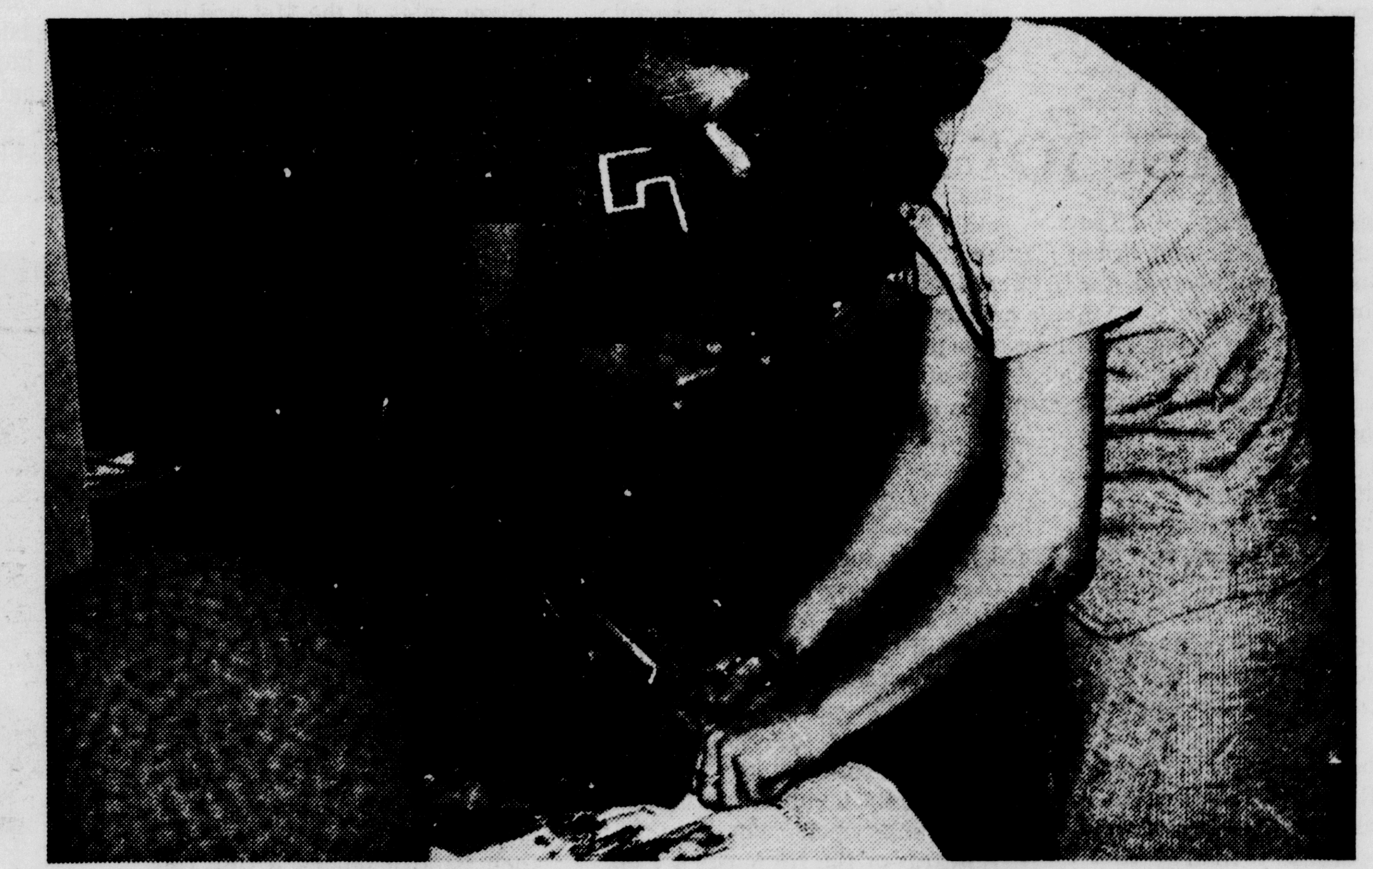
Mrs. Henry noted that records of Culinary Union Local 126 through the late 1960s and into the early 1970s show a continuing gain in the number of restaurants, both franchised and non-franchised, within Marin County.

Some one is going to have to do the cooking, the managing and the serving in those restaurants and food service establishments.

When trained, competent young people are available to handle those responsibilities, it is a boon not only to the restaurateurs, but to their customers as well.

A talented chef and an efficient waitress are gems that gleam like diamonds.

PATTERN LAYOUTS, an all-important facet of the mass production that makes possible economically-priced clothing, are mastered by these Tamalpais High School students.



FINISHED GARMENTS are subjected to a minute inspection for flaws and defects by the occupational clothing trainees at Tamalpais High.

Babies — Blessing Or A Booby Trap?

THE BABY TRAP by Ellen Peck; Bernard Geis, 245 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Mary Lou Jacobson.

"I want to tell you about this trap, not because I see babies as the enemies of the human race, really, but because I see babies as the enemies of you." So says Ellen Peck, 27-year-old Baltimore junior high school teacher and author of the new book "Baby Trap."

"I am going to emphasize what is not shown in other sources: the problems of having children; and the unique values to the childless marriage," she promises.

Mrs. Peck, herself childless by choice, does just that, very entertainingly. This is a book well written . . . fast paced and well documented. Many of the case histories of good childless marriages and terrible child-centered marriages are written vignette-style, to prove her theory that the only good marriage is one without children.

"Baby Trap" is aimed at the young woman either preparing for marriage or who is just married, to show her the alternatives to having children —assuming the role of Geisha, mistress, lover and wife . . . but never mother . . . to her husband. Mrs. Peck assures the young reader that these are jobs for any woman without the time-consuming occupation of mother to a brood of kids.

She explores the "Baby Sell" . . . the push by the media and the multimillion-dollar corporations whose earnings depend on selling baby products. Her tour through the Baby News store at Fisherman's Wharf in San Francisco is filled with pathos and humor as she explores the "manufacturer's trap."

Mrs. Peck cites many examples of wayward husbands, bored by the lack of attention at home, burdened by the financial responsibilities of wife and children, weary of a dull job but afraid to change, and of women wasting time, training and talent buried under a load of diapers, dishes and dirt. She compares these men and women with the carefree couples who have the nerve to say to an unbelieving culture: "We don't want or need children; we have each other."

The author adds weight to her argument by citing the population explosion and the cultural changes that allow people to choose the Pill, live their own lives and enjoy wider personal experiences.

"I'm grown up, and I want my life now, thank you. My adult life. And I want it directly, I don't care to live in a second childhood . . . vicariously," says Mrs. Peck.

If that sounds selfish and self-centered the author will tell you she is capable of making contributions to society other than children.

If you already have children you will find the book will give you some food for thought on your own motivations, challenges and interests as a woman and a mother.

"I don't want you to wake up a dozen years from now and realize that your days are built on routine, that your life consists of living vicariously through your children, that you've lost your zest for new experiences . . . and quite possibly your husband's interest as well. And yet these are a few of the consequences of the baby trap." So warns Ellen Peck.

A Novel Of Lovely Imagery And Marvelous Characters

LION COUNTRY by Frederick Buechner; Atheneum, 247 pages, $5,95. Reviewed by Marjorie Parr.

Here is a beautiful book by an author who sketches his story in a "painterly" rather than linear manner, and who makes of most other writers crass fools.

Frederick Buechner tells the tale of Lion Country with exquisite sensitivity in a delicately wrought yet piercing style, so finely played out you can hear its hum.

The plot concerns a spinsterish bachelor of New York City, with the means to pursue whims; in this case, researching an article on a mail order school for ministers. Its head preacher man, it develops, has a said penchant for expose himself. Named Leo Bebb, he takes comfort in the flamboyant abandon of lions in one of those cageless zoos.

His daughter, Sharon, shocks Antonio Parr, the protagonist, out of his teacups-in-the-parlor stance, and the inevitable is inevitable as it always is, but, driven by the masterful hand of Buechner, it's better.

The storyline is intertwined with marvelous characterizations. Miriam, Antonio's twin, who dies as he comes to life, from a disease for which pain is the only symptom. Brownie, the used-car salesman turned disciple to Bebb. Herman Redpath, the rich little Indian.

And Bebb, himself. The jailbird saint.

Through it all, the imagery: lovely, funny, true. "A summer's day of a girl." "The soft collision of our flesh." "He smiled as though the Lord had promised a major tax cut."

The theme? A search for the facts. But accuracy sometimes distorts the issue. And to add to the confusion, "Lion Country" has a joyful ending.

Everyone lives happily ever after?

Author Of 'Naked Runner' Scores Again With Thriller

Up until now the English novelist Francis Clifford has been best-known as the author of "The Naked Runner." Henceforth, he should be equally well-known as the creator of "The Blind Side," for it is, indeed, as its publisher proclaims it, "a major novel of suspense."

Two brothers, Richard and Howard Lawrence, with little in common except for the sharing of boyhood in a home in which there is no love, choose separate paths in life.

Richard, idealistic, sentimental, a bit self-righteous, becomes a Roman Catholic priest. Howard, cynical and embittered, is a naval officer attached to the Defense Ministry — and a spy for the Communists.

The book begins in Biafra where Richard, assigned as a missionary, undertakes a desperate, perhaps foolhardy mercy mission for his village that ultimately costs him an arm. Clifford's depiction of the obscene horrors and terrors caused by the strife of the futile Nigerian secessionist attempt are among the most powerful and revealing descriptions of mankind's inhumanity to his own kind that can be found anywhere.

The scene then shifts to England to where Richard returns, in ill grace with the Church for his unsanctioned behavior. There his own life becomes enmeshed with that of Howard for whom time and luck in his traitorous career are running out.

In the end, the two brother's weaknesses bring about an ironical and tragic conclusion to their difficulties — and yet one from which both men have learned a lesson; Richard that love and duty are sometimes exclusive and separate things, Howard that life lived without love is not life at all.

Clifford's novel is fraught with meaning for these times that are both blindly cynical and blindly idealistic at times, depending upon whether the Howards or the Richards are on the stage at the moment.

It's Schmaltzy, But So Is Opera

It is extremely difficult to imagine the magnificent voice of James McCracken going unemployed for over two years while in Italy on his first European trip after leaving the Met. Yet this is exactly what he experienced when he and his wife, mezzo Sandra Warfield, decided that Jim was stalemated in minor roles at the Met and had to make the break to Europe on the chance that he would land major roles, even if in smaller opera houses.

This is the story of that struggle and young singers would be well advised to read it if they are serious about becoming professionals. The determination it takes to be successful in this business even assuming a fine voice is incredible.

After a very long period of auditioning — without landing a single job — Jim describes an audition for an important Italian impressario that went very well. They loved everything he did and requested more. Finally the impressario came up to him with tears in his eyes, embraced him and said, "McCracken, you are truly a great tenor. What a shame I can't engage you." It was at this point that they considered going back to Cleveland, but then Sandra landed a title role with a touring La Scala opera company and they stayed in Europe.

This proved to be the right decision as slowly things began to happen for them with occasional roles here and there on the continent and then out of the blue an offer from Washington, D.C., for Jim to sing Otello.

Of course, if you are an opera fan you know that Jim and Sandra have since achieved enormous success.

The one fault with the book is the way it is written — as a daily diary with Jim and Sandra taking turns at the tape recorder. It was supposed to cover a single year — 1969 — but fortunately they varied from this to include events from the years 1957 through 1969, so it comes close to being a biography for that time period.

In spite of the tape recorder approach to writing, this comes off as a very interesting story of two singers in search of success and finding not only success but love. Schmaltzy? Yes, but so is opera.

Yes, Man Can Survive Without The Supermarket

SOME OF OUR most delicious and most nutritious foods can be found growing in the wild, free for the picking, contends Euell Gibbons, author of "Stalking the Wild Asparagus" and now of "Stalking the Good Life."

By DON KEOWN

STALKING THE GOOD LIFE by Euell Gibbons; McKay, 247 pages, $5.95.

AN ULTIMATE RETREAT by Richard B. Erno; Crown, 191 pages, $4.95.

Through books, those of us without the opportunity or the courage to kick the habits and shackles of civilization can share, at least vicariously, the freedom and enjoyment of those who actually have made that big jump.

And publishers have rushed to satisfy that thirst.

"Stalking the Good Life" by Euell Gibbons and "An Ultimate Retreat" by Richard B. Erno are two books that fall within the same field, although quite different from each other.

Euell Gibbons is the naturalist who attracted wide attention and created no little controversy with his "Stalking the Wild Asparagus," a handbook on foraging for and preparing wild foods harvested from nature.

"Stalking the Good Life" is more of the same, a generally fascinating exposition of the wild plant leaves, stalks, herbs, tubers, fruits, berries, nuts, fish and shellfish that can be found in the woods, meadows and shores by the knowledgeable person and converted into not only nutritious but appetizing edibles.

Gibbons' enthusiasm for nature's bounty is infectious, and the reader soon finds himself caught up in the author's adventures as he deliberately places himself in locations where such foodstuffs would seem to be at a bare minimum — and then proves that survival away from the supermarket is a relatively simple matter, providing you have established the required friendly relationship with the outdoors.

Chapters on wild nuts, berries, herbal teas, the dill crock, seaweeds and fruits are particularly enticing. A chapter on wild health foods will intrigue the health food fan. And an exposition about tapping trees for their syrup opens up all kinds of engaging possibilities.

His concluding chapters seem, somehow, a break from the approach if not the mood of his book, constituting an outright — and quite eloquent — plea for conservation.

"I call on the youth of America to get those brilliant young minds to work on creative ideas for solving our pollution problems," he writes. "These problems will finally be solved, not by demonstrations, fights or name-calling. They will be solved by human ingenuity, applied with love, for love is a powerful form of pressure which few are prepared to resist. The solution to our ecological problems starts in your heart."

Fascinating as Gibbons' book is, we regard it with one major misgiving. It is quite plainly a collection of short articles written through the years, and reprinted here without too much editing. Thus the reader finds himself subjected to a great deal of needless repetition. One set of instructions on cooking dandelion would seem to suffice. It has always seemed to us that an author, in publishing such a compilation in book form, owes it to his readers to edit carefully and thoroughly, if not to rewrite totally.

Still, Euell Gibbons' "Love Affair With Nature" is the chronicle of a man who has reduced the man-and-nature relationship to the most basic level, nourishment, and who makes of that rapport a most pleasurable, even exciting experience — for himself and for his readers.

"An Ultimate Retreat" is also a pleasant reading experience, but a less extraordinary one than "Stalking the Good Life."

It is simply the account of one family's escape from urban pressures — periodically. Of how the Ernos acquired a cabin in Arizona's Mogollon Mountains, and of their first summer spent there, renewing a forgotten feeling for the wild things and the relics of earlier dwellers around them. Richard Erno is given to flights of soaring imagination and fancy rhetoric that sometimes come off and sometimes do not.

Erno concludes his amusing chronicle of that summer, thusly: "The world talks much of 'progress.' But progress, as we have been told many and many a time, is a two-edged sword — it cuts both ways. We are now learning how sharp the other edge can be.

"If the only choice left is between life in a state of nature and half-life in a state of pollution and fear, we'll take nature. The living isn't easy, but at least the life one lives is life, not death."

Still, the Ernos can flee city life only part of the year, and even then not escape the accoutrements of urban living completely. And even the Euell Gibbons who can get along almost totally away from civilization for periods of time can enjoy the accompanying and cherished solitude only so long as they remain relatively few in number. If they lure tens of thousands into joining them, they also create a new kind of congestion with many of the old disadvantages.

The real solution remains with those who answer Gibbons challenge, remain at home, and fight filth, noise, contamination and all the other man-created problems on the grounds where the battle must be won — where we live, and where most of us must continue to live.

"THERE'S LOVE All Day" is another of those Hallmark Editions books upon which the publisher has lavished the same care and taste he bestows upon his greeting cardsand the dramas he sponsors on television.

This small gem, priced at $2.50, is a collection of poems by the invalid California poet Kenneth Patchen as selected by Dee Danner Barwick from five of his books published between 1936 and 1968. The theme is love, joy and an exuberance for life that Patchen has always felt and expressed despite his afflictions and pain. "Religion Is That I Love You," one poem is entitled. And that just about summarizes the Patchen philosophy.

THE FAD for do-it-yourself reached something of a zenith with the recent publication of a book whose instructions covered the conducting of a "home-made" cremation.

Further evidence of the trend is the publication of "How to Do Your Own Divorce in California" by Nolo Press of Box 2147, Berkeley, 94702. The author is Charles E. Sherman and he advises at the outset: "Do not try to do your own divorce if your spouse will oppose it, nor where you have unresolved problems with child custody, etc."

Forms contained in the book can be used until July 1, 1971, after which a set of revised forms and instructions will be available from the publisher.

THE LOVELY LADIES by Nicolas Freeling; Harper & Row, 250 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

There is something peculiarly European, and not just in their location, about the novels of Nicolas Freeling.

Freeling's narrative techniques have been compared, with good reason, to those of Georges Simenon — a concern for the subleties of character, an introspective mood and a great deal of social philosophizing on the part of Inspector Van der Valk, his Dutch policeman.

This time a man is stabbed fatally in Amsterdam's marketplace, almost within eyesight of the inspector. He is an elderly gentleman of somewhat vague and erratic financial means, married to a much younger woman, and with three grown-up daughters living in Dublin.

It becomes apparent to Van der Valk that the answers he seeks are to be found in Dublin, and so reluctantly he goes there: But he must tread carefully, for his chief suspect is the young son of a prominent Irish politician. And one of the "lovely lady" daughters is a delicious temptress.

Freeling's newest novel gets off to a rather stumbling start, but soon picks up momentum. Like other Van der Balk yarn, it tends to move with herks and jerks, interrupted by the inspector's bouts of social and personal analysis, and yet curiously enriched by these pauses. The Dublin characters and atmosphere are excellent. And Freeling fans will enjoy themselves wholeheartedly, even if they do not regard "The Lovely Ladies" as quite up to par with his very best.

"What's The Difference between Permanent and Durable Press?"

When a garment is termed "Permanent Press" it is supposed to mean that no ironing is needed for the life of the garment. "Durable Press" means the garment should require a little or no ironing.

Other claims attached to garments may influence your purchases. It is well to keep them in mind. For instance, a garment labeled —

SOIL RELEASE, indicates soil is easier to remove in washing.

STAIN and SOIL RESISTANT, means dirt and liquid stains remain on the surface for a time so they may be blotted off.

WATER or RAINPROOF, water will not come thru fabric.

RAIN RESISTANT, keeps rain out for reasonable time.

SHOWER RESISTANT, keeps rain out for short time.

WATER or STAIN REPELLENT, water, sprinkled on the surface, will bead.

If any of the above claims are made for a garment you select and the fabric fails to meet it, take it up with the store buyer or manager.

The house stands on a quiet residential street in the Mother Lode town of Grass Valley, only a small sign and tourist brochures identify it as the home of the famed Lola Montez, who was once the most glamorous and influential woman of Europe and later the darling of thousands of entertainment-starved California miners.

The tourist literature does not mention, however, that the house is neglected and shamefully dilapidated, and that little provision is made for those who might want to tour it.

The clapboard siding — its paint long gone — weathers more each year. The old structure is settling crookedly on its foundations, and the original plantings in the yard are fighting a losing battle with time, neglect and weeds.

Despite the importance and colorful history of the house and its former occupant, there has been little done in the past decade or two to maintain or enhance it. The owner does not live in Grass Valley and does not answer queries about the house.

ONLY ONE person seems to have really cared about Lola Montez' home. He is Jens Blair, a Danish immigrant who for a number of years has lived nearby.

Blair's fascination with Lola Montez started in his childhood days in Europe. He maintained an interest in her throughout his life, and for the past 30 years has carried on a campaign to take care of her house and collect and preserve information about her life. Now, Jens Blair is not in Grass Valley.

Until last winter, Blair and his German Shepherd dog could be seen at the picturesque old house almost every day. He kept the tangle of vines pruned back from the little stone house where Lola used to keep her pet bear. He worked painstakingly around the rotting foundations of the kitchen wing, working at makeshift repairs and re-using old lumber to keep the walls intact.

AS EACH TREE in the row of poplars — said to have been planted by Lola — died, he cut back the old wood and hauled it away.

He was always there, always available to talk with visitors who were truly interested in Lola Montez.

He was fond of explaining about how he had first heard of Lola Montez when he was still a very young man in Denmark. He recounted the stories he had heard — about how Lola had been the focal point of a revolution in Bavaria, and how a king who loved her was said to have gone insane and died. He knew little then about Lola Montez, whose real name was Maria Dolores Eliza Ronanna Gilbert. He had only scant information about her friendships with George Sand, Alexander Dumas, Victor Hugo and Franz Liszt. However, he was determined to learn more about this fabulous woman.

AT THAT TIME he knew that Lola, finding her career of loves, friendships and intrigues in Europe nearing a disastrous end, had gone to far-off California to start over again. He knew she had charmed the rough mining crowds in San Francisco with her Spider Dance, and had then gone off to live — surrounded by a storm of controversy — in a remote mining village.

Determined to make a life for himself in the same land to Education And Vacation Merge In Mexico

This year, an anticipated record number of tourists and scholars will discover that the fine line between a formal education and a foreign vacation often disappears completely at summer schools in Mexico.

Where, one may ask, does the "tourist" end, and the "scholar" begin?

NOWADAYS, there is no easy answer, in line with the increasingly-accepted educational philosophy that "learning should be fun" and the long-accepted tourism truism that one of the most enjoyable aspects of foreign travel is its educational function.

Since 1921, when the famed National University in Mexico City first opened its summer school to foreign students, the lure of combining education with the glamor and excitement of a foreign vacation has played a growing role in Mexico's tourist industry.

In the interval, more than 50,00 North Americans have attended summer school at the National University alone, and it is estimated that several hundred thousand more have taken summer courses of some sort at the scores of highly-accredited universities, colleges, academies and a variety of other schools south of the border offering academic subjects as well as informal courses in Mexican arts, crafts and folklore.

LAST YEAR'S total exceeded 30,000, according to Mexicana Airlines, which does a brisk business transporting "scholar-tourists" to Mexico from its U.S. gateways in Los Angeles, Chicago, San Antonio and Miami.

Although teachers and college students desiring formal accreditation have traditionally provided the bulk of school-bound passengers, according to the airline, there is an increasing trend towards study in Mexico by vacationers of all ages and backgrounds, from children traveling with their parents to retired golden-agers.

The airline compiles a list of summer schools in Mexico each year based on data received from these schools in answer to queries sent out earlier in the year.

The 1971 summer report lists dates of courses, costs for tuition, room and board; a brief outline of major subjects offered, and the address of contacts for further information or registration applications at 17 schools.

ACCORDING TO information passed along by the airline this year, most summer school programs will combine recreation with study and include field trips to archaeological sites, excursions to nearby cities, and a wide range of social, cultural and sports activites.

For example, highly-accredited "Monterrey Tec," a member of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools, stresses the "learning can be fun" philosophy. Listed on its posters, alongside details about intensive study courses, are enticements such as: "Beautiful modern buildings and excellent facilites: 13 residence halls, air-conditioned library and dining rooms, computing center, TV center, two swimming pools, gymnasium, stadium . . . local touring, complete program of social and cultural activities."

Copies of the 1971 summer school report are available free on request from Mexicana Airlines at 275 Post Street, San Francisco, Calif. 94108.

Home That Lola Montez Loved Still Stands In Grass Valley

But Neglect Has Taken Its Toll Of Place Where Glamorous Figure Lived

The Travel Pages

Blair did not come to California immediately. He had met two sisters in Salt Lake City, and determined almost at once that one of them was the girl who should become his bride.

ANXIOUS TO set aside a goodly amount of money for his marriage, he departed for Nome to try his luck at mining. Returning three years later to claim his bride, he learned that there had been a disastrous mix-up in names. He had been corresponding with one of the sisters, but it was the other with whom he had fallen in love and she was no longer available to him. Also, his draft notice was awaiting him.

Following a stint in the Army, Blair was discharged at the end of World War I. He continued a mixed career in the United States, which included a lengthy stint in the Hollywood film-making colony.

In the 1930s he came to Grass Valley with a film company which was shooting a Lola Montez episode, and he returned the following year to make his home there.

HE TURNED his hand to mining, as he had done in Alaska, but continued his interest in Lola Montez and in her home. He tried several times to purchase the house, but was never able to do so.

Eventually, he settled instead for a home of his own nearby. He moved in there, with an arrangement with the owner of the Lola Montez home to serve as caretaker. He worked faithfully over the years to maintain Lola's house, with limited funds and limited time.

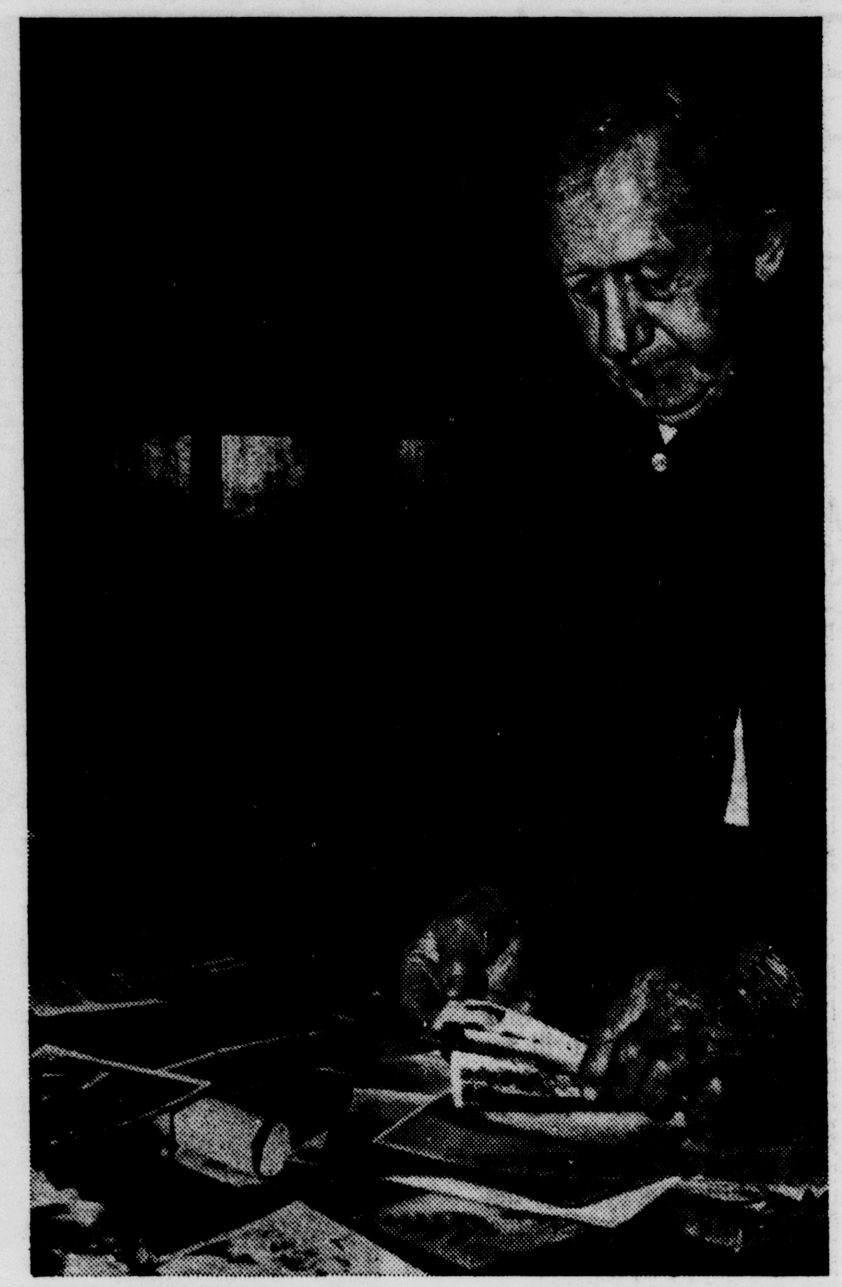
His dog Jack was Jens Blair's faithful companion until last fall, when death overtook the pet. In mid-winter Blair — discouraged over his long-continuing failure to obtain either ownership of Lola's house or adequate repair funds from the owner, and saddened by the death of his dog — became ill.

HE LEFT Grass Valley, to go to a veteran's hospital in Arizona. He has remained there through the winter, but friends have received word that he had hopes of being well enough to return to Grass Valley soon.

As mild spring weather in Grass Valley has brought the leaves back to the trees and the few remaining lilacs and roses in Lola's garden into bloom, there are good prospects that Jens Blair soon will be back at his accustomed place.

The picturesque old home he loves so much should have more care and restoration than Jens Blair is able to provide, but upon his return he will do the best he can.

And visitors to Grass Valley again have some one who is interested and knowledgeable to tell them the details of the adventurous, romantic life of Lola Montez.



JENS BLAIR, self-appointed caretaker of the Lola Montez home in Grass Valley, examines some of the memorabilia concerning the glamorous woman that he has collected. Temporarily confined to a veterans' hospital by ill health, Blair hopes to be back on the "job," caring for the old house, very soon.

Denmark Delights Entire Family

From Tots To Senior Citizens

From tots to teen-agers, from 20 years old to senior citizens, Denmark offers a rich variety of fun for all that can't be beaten anywhere.

It is hard to explain why, but one thing is certain; there is something in the air in Denmark that simply spells happy family vacation.

Let's start in wonderful Copenhagen, the lively gateway to Europe: The City and Harbor Tour will delight all ages, and youngsters will get a thrill by walking through the King's glamorous reception rooms at Christianborg Castle.

THE WOMEN of the family will look with big eyes at the Arts and Crafts Tour to the world famous workshops, where the artists create so many beautiful things for the homes. And there will be hot family discussions after the visits to the fascinating new Danish schools on the World of Tomorrow Tour.

But the best moments may be the afternoon refreshments at a sidewalk cafe, enjoying pulsating traffic of small cars and bicycle girls on their way home from work.

There may not be a dull moment for the vacationing family in Copenhagen but you'll soon realize that it's just as much fun to tour the fairytale country with its rolling green roads, romantic old fairytale inns and surprising mini-museums.

THE FERRY crossings between the islands are a chapter by themselves. First, to see the many small cars pouring into the gap of the big ferryboat, then to enjoy a good walk on the deck, entertained by the seagulls, while moving towards the next island.

For traveling families, it is a good idea to take advantage of the hotel-check system which makes it possible to have dinner, overnight stay, and breakfast at a nice country hotel for $8 per person, including tax and tips.

Speaking about economy, what about spending a week on a Danish farm for $6 a day including full board children half price. These farm vacations have become the big hit in Denmark today. It's reasonable, it's different and most of all, it's lots of fun! There is no hydromatic drive in the bathroom or soft music in the background anywhere on the farms but you'll enjoy the cows, the pigs, the good food, and the hospitable people and all the activities in the refreshing country air.

IT MIGHT BE most practical just to take demi-pension (breakfast and dinner) and then make excursions during the day — either to the beach or to some of Denmark's many historic towns, medieval castles, modern industries, open air museums or thousand-year-old village churches.

Or you may feel like taking a canoe trip down one of Denmark's charming peaceful rivers or rent a sail or motor boat and enjoy some of the 4,600 miles of scenic coastlines among 500 picturesque islands.

Or what about a ride in a 19th Century stagecoach drawn by horses through small villages and lovely forests of North Sealand, a perfect escape to the peaceful rural Denmark? You start the ride from a farm near Fredensborg, north of Copenhagen. Two to 20 passengers can take part in such an excursion.

BY THE WAY, have you heard that Denmark's youth hostels are now also open to motoring tourists? They are ideal for families who travel on a budget. Here the price for a room with running hot and cold water is 75 cents per person per night.

Remember, when you rent cars in Denmark, don't be afraid of renting one of the small cars. They are less expensive and move much easier through the fairytale towns than the big ones to which you are accustomed from home.

Especially for children there are summer camps, riding schools, sailing schools, yes, even a traffic school at Legoland (a true children's paradise of a miniature village in Jutland, packed with fun and entertainment.)

DON'T FORGET that there is a tourist office in practically every town in Denmark ready to help you get the most out of your vacation.

One of the great experiences that family members will have on their trip will be their visit to Tivoli. This fairytale-come-true garden has something for each and every one — symphonies in the beautiful concert hall, modern sounds from the lively discotheque, pantomimes and many other amusements, thousands and thousands of flowers, millions of colored lights, or the world famous Danish specialties served in all the different categories or restaurants — enough to talk about for many years to come.

Shopping may already be a family pastime at home, but whether it is or not, shopping in Copenhagen is certainly a very popular sort of entertainment, mainly because of all the beautiful Danish things famous the world over — especially silver, porcelain, furniture in distinctive modern design.

ONE OF DENMARK'S quaint country inns makes an ideal spot for an outdoor Danish luncheon, featuring the open-face sandwiches or any of the other tasty delicacies for which the Scandinavian land is famous.

Petunias Provide Months Of Color With Little Care

Petunias flower heavily over a long season, usually a minimum of three to four months.

The plants can be set out after danger of heavy frost has passed and they can also be planted much later, even into August, and still make a colorful show.

Petunias can be used in almost any sunny spot in the garden, large or small, where you want a bright splash of color. Medium or large beds or border plantings of one or two colors give the most striking effect.

PETUNIAS are one of the many annuals that can be set out now for spring and summer garden color. The variety here is the Candy Apple, a brilliant scarlet hybrid. And only about two dozen have been required to make an attractive border that compliments nicely the tree roses.

(California Association of Nurserymen photo)

Ten plants will quickly make an eight to 12-foot border of color.

LARGE SINGLE varieties such as Candy Apple (bright red), Happiness (bright rose-pink), Mariner (deep blue) and Astro (red and white) are well suited to beds and borders. For showy effect at night, Glacier and Apollo (pure white) reflect even a small amount of light.

A new group of carnation-flowered doubles called the "Delights" produce a heavy crop of flowers in mass plantings.

Petunias also provide color in front of permanent shrubs. They are especially useful in new landscapes to fill in bare spots between small shrubs. Any spot a foot or more in diameter with at least a half-day of sun is sufficient.

CONTAINER gardening is becoming more popular all the time. Petunias are widely adapted to a large variety of planter boxes, tubs, urns and hanging baskets. The large fringed double varieties such as Bridal Bouquet (white) and Fanfare Mixture are best suited to containers or other areas where the individual flowers can be admired. Many petunias are becoming available in pots, already in good bloom, to achieve more immediate effect in containers and for late planting.

Petunias will grow well with minimum care even in poor soils. Fertilizer should be added to the soil when the plants are set in the garden. Peat moss or compost is also helpful, although not necessary. Soil in containers should be very porous so water flows through it easily.

TWO OR THREE light applications of fertilizer can be made during the summer.

Once the plants are established, they should be watered deeply at one to two-week intervals, depending on the weather. Excessive water and fertilizer, or too much shade, can reduce flowering. Of course, container plants must be watered and fertilized more often.

Petunias have practically no pest or disease problems except snails and slugs which will eat newly set out plants.

Some gardeners prune plants back in mid-season to encourage a heavier flush of bloom. Even without this grooming they perform better than almost all other annuals.

A BARROW FULL OF FLOWERS

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- ✓While spring is a busy time for spraying in your garden, to combat the pests that are springing up there, or to prevent their appearance, choose the least potent and least lasting product that will accomplish the job you have to do, and follow the manufacturer's instructions carefully, particularly as to the amount applied

- ✓Keep the spent blossoms cut or plucked from the rose bushes that are blooming so profusely now.

- ✓Still no gift for mother for her big day tomorrow? Consider a plant or a garden book.

- ✓Do your mulching around your shrubs before warm, dry weather arrives in force.

- ✓Outdoor living season is upon us. Can your patio use a few potted plants or shrubs to make it a more attractive place for entertaining or relaxing? Dwarf citrus is one possibility.

- ✓If you haven't already done so, put in those bedding plants that will give your garden summer color.

JUST ABOUT the ultimate in versatility is exemplified by the handyman-built combination serving cart and table pictured above. You can, as Eileen O'Neill has done, load it in the kitchen with dishes and food, then push it to the place where dinner is to be served. Then lift the leaves, give it a twist, and you have a table that easily seats six for either indoor or outdoor feasts. It can, of course, be finished to harmonize with other furnishings. The table is made of plywood with the help of a full-size pattern. Simply trace the pattern on the wood, saw out the parts and then assemble the pieces. Even screw and bolt holes are located for you. The Hand Grinder Is Useful Tool Around The Home

These grinders, unlike other power drills, have been used for years by hobbyists, and come with a variety of cutting, grinding, drilling and polishing heads. They are available in most hardware and hobby stores.

According to Dremel Manufacturing Co., Racine, Wis., makers of hand grinders, jigsaws and other power tools, the list of household uses for the small hand grinder is almost endless.

FOLLOWING are some examples:

Sharpening blades on tools, lawn equipment, and kitchen utensils.

Removing rust and scale from tools, lawn equipment, gutters, etc.

Sanding warped drawers and cabinet doors so that they work smoothly.

DRILLING small holes to help repair children's toys and engraving identification on toys, tools and other metal equipment to discourage theft.

For the avid do-it-yourselfer, the hand grinder can be used to deburr the ends of saw-cut pipe and metal pieces. With the right attachments, hand grinders can be used for routing and as a small drill press. They can also be used to polish brass fixtures.

The hand grinders come in various sizes. Cost of a small grinder with an adequate set of accessories for the average household averages $34.95.

CARPORT WITH CABINETS

ANY WEEKEND CARPENTER, with the help of a plan, can build this handsome carport that will not only protect the family car, but also provide storage space for garden equipment. A durable and waterproof textured plywood enriches the exterior of the structure that houses storage cabinets six feet high. For the pattern, send 25 cents to American Plywood Association, 1119 A Street, Tacoma, Wash., 98401 and ask for Plan No. 70-641.

Organization Is Workshop Answer —

'A Place For Everything, Everything In Its Place'

Handyman's Pages

The quality of equipment and the care he takes of it.

Not for him the cheap bruss that's thrown away when the job is done.

It's the same for the professional carpenter, mechanic or electrician — he invests in the best tools and keeps them clean and in top condition.

THIS IS A good practice for the home handyman to follow. He doesn't need the most expensive equipment, since he won't be giving tools the same day-in, day-out rough wear, but he sould look for good quality.

As with most things, "cheap tools can be dear," since replacing saws that won't cut, hammers whose heads fly off, or pliers that fall apart means added expense rather than savings.

Once the home owner has good tools, he should protect his investment with tender, loving care, including proper storage. Tools should not be thrown together in a heap or dumped in a drawer. They will get scratched, dulled and often will get lost.

Organization — a place for everything and everything in its place — is the answer.

FOR FREQUENTLY — used tools, paint brushes, chisels, extension cords, saw blades and belts, and appliances such as sanders and drills a wall of perforated hardboard is the perfect solution.

Since there is an infinite variety of sturdy hooks and hangers for everything from staplers to shelves, a workshop wall covered with perforated hardboard becomes a spacesaving storage wall.

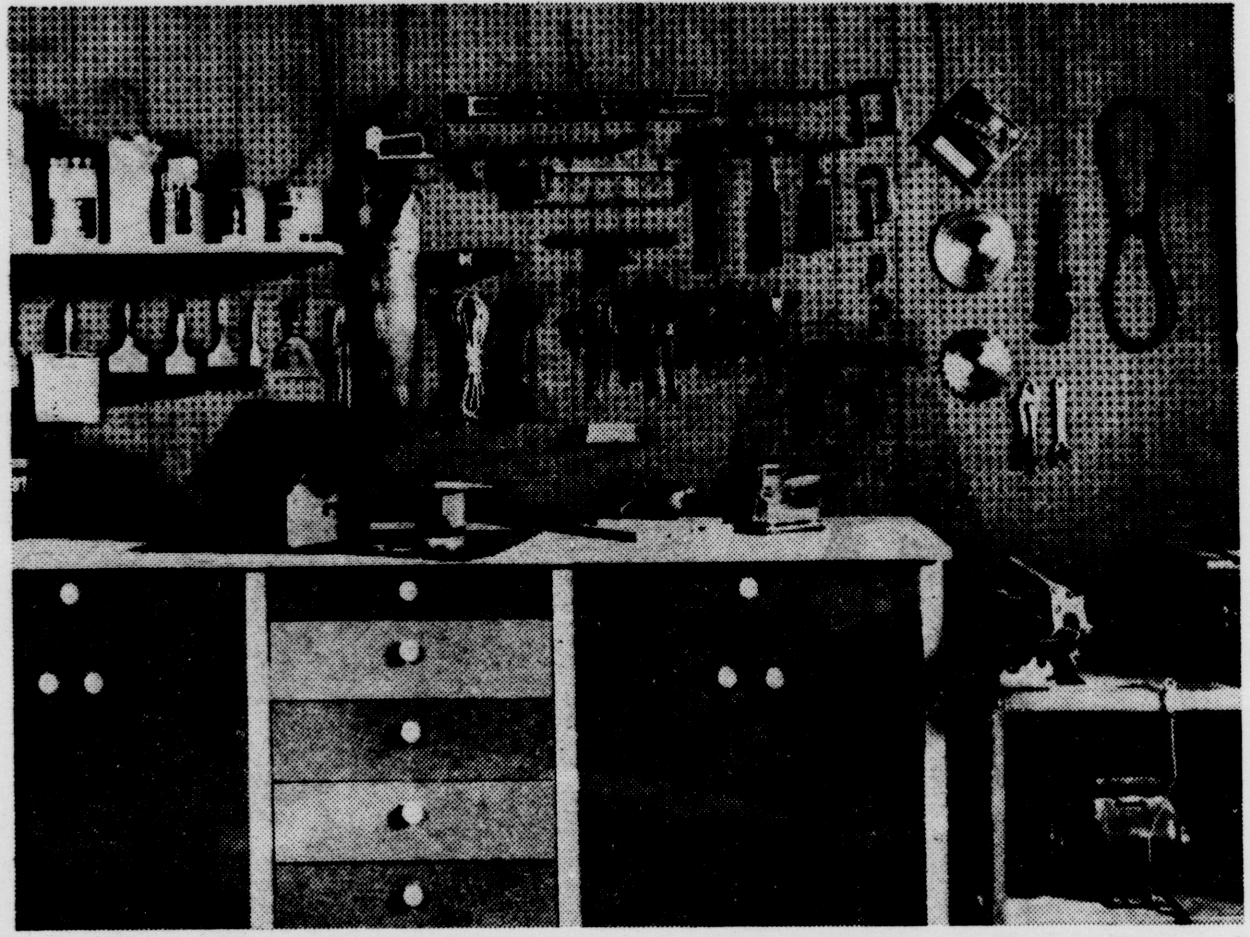
Objects hung there are easy to see and to reach. And they're easy to put back if you outline the object with a thick marker at its proper place on the panel.

PERFORATED hardboard comes in standard size panels. It's available unfinished or prefinished, perforated the full length or just to wainscot level.

Because hardboard panels are easy to cut and work, a storage wall can be installed by any handyman with basic wood-working techniques.

Woodwork First

When using flat latex paint on the walls and gloss or semigloss on the woodwork, paint the woodwork first, since it is easier to remove wet latex splatters and smears from a dried enamel than to remove an enamel from a dried latex.



PANELING OF perforated hardboard can organize your wall storage, safeguard your equipment and keep your workshop neat. Hooks and heavy duty fittings are available for the perforations.

ANTHONY QUINN plays an army deserter in 18th Century Mexico who finds himself committed to protecting the people of a small village from a gang of desperadoes in the motion picture, "Guns for San Sebastian," which will have its second television showing tonight at 8:30 o'clock on Channels 3 and 4. The movie is in color.

TV Has Come A Long Way

It was 25 years ago this year that television first appeared in a few of the nation's living rooms.

Now, there are approximately 60 million U.S. homes equipped with sets. About one-third of them have two or more receivers.

Originally a neighborhood wonderment when a family purchased a 10-inch screen that flickered and faded, it now comes in color. About 22.6 million homes enjoy it in all its tints — and there are almost 30 million color sets in use.

A quarter of a century ago, there were about 5,000 sets. Those were black-and-white with relatively tiny viewing screens.

On Aug. 25, 1949, compatible, all-electronic color transmission was announced.

Reed On 'Mannix'

Robert Reed, star of "The Brady Bunch, will also play a recurring role next season as a police lieutenant in "Mannix."

PRETTY Jacqueline Chidsey of The Golddiggers will perform with the other members of that dancing and singing group on the "23rd Annual Emmy Awards Show" to be colorcast Sunday at 10 p.m. on Channels 3 and 4. She holds one of the awards that will be presented during the evening's festivities.

AUDREY HEPBURN and Peter O'Toole co-star in the movie, "How to Steal a Million," a comedy and suspense picture about art forgery that will be shown in color Sunday at 9 p.m. on Channels 7 and 11.

The Snow Goose Passes Its Test

The snow goose, star of Fame's upcoming production of Paul Gallico's famous story "The Snow Goose" is being put through test flights at Los Angeles before the one-hour film goes on location in England.

On its first trial, the goose flew one quarter of a mile on cue and returned to its handler's shoulder at a whistle blast.

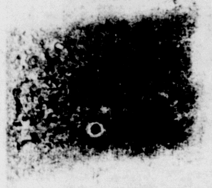
On The Stereo Scene



Recent Records: Dylan To Davis, Rock Opera To Aaron Copland

By JOHN SUNIER

The new rock opera "Jesus Christ Superstar" has already taken its place as one of the more serious efforts to combine many different musical approaches in one synergistic whole that transcends the usual pigeon-holing of musical styles.

The two-disc album is available on Decca DXSA-7206 in a handsome presentation with complete libretto.

Lyricist Tim Rice and composer Andrew Lloyd Webber have done an often stirring job of bringing the Passion story into modern concepts, both theological and musical. The excellent vocalists include Ian Gillan as Jesus, Murray Head as Judas and Yvonne Elliman as Mary Magdalene. The production, which includes a sizeable orchestra and even Moog, was done in Britain and is rich and exciting.

The form of "Jesus Christ Superstar" is much closer to what we define as opera than the last British effort in this direction, The Who's "Tommy."

The lyrics are light years from old King James but few will be shocked if they open themselves to this serious and devoted version.

SPEAKING OF The Who, their latest is "The Who Live at Leeds" (Decca DL 79175). The packaging is ingenious — a kraft paper folder with many different papers inserted which relate to the group's live appearances. These include such items as their contract to appear at Woodstock and an order for a case of smoke generators, the vital ingredient of the group's Grand Finale.

Who favorites such as "Magic Bus" and "My Generation" are heard in turned-on live performances as the Leeds Music Festival, but my favorite was their version of Mose Allison's "Young Man Blues."

Very good sound for "live" recording.

ONE OF THE most unusual LPs of music from India that I have heard is Decca DL 75100 "Jugalbandi Duet for Sitar and Sarangi."

Performers are Ghulamhusain Khan on sitar and Munir Khan on sarangi, which is an Indian stringed instrument played with a bow. The sarangi is usually used as an accompanying instrument to vocal performers, but can also be a solo instrument in its own right.

Jugalbandi is a strict form of duet, in this case featuring the sitar playing in vocal style with the sarangi improvising variations a split second behind the sitar. This is the first recording ever made of this combination and is tremendously exciting — as much as the sitar-violin improvisations of Ravi Shankar and Yehudi Menuhin. Tabla and drone accompaniment round out the performance of the three short ragas on this album, recorded in superb stereo in Indore, India.

BOB DYLAN has either copped out on us and gone soft or has entered an exciting new phase, depending on who one reads or talks of today.

His latest "New Morning" (Columbia KC 30290) is full of beautiful harmonies, smooth vocal treatments, soothing sounds and cheerful lyrics that certainly show a new side of Dylan. Though personally I still prefer the "Highway 66 Revisited" Dylan, I found the relaxed countrified sounds of the title tune, "One More Weekend," "If Not for You" and all the others a thoroughly enjoyable half-hour or so.

The trend away from the having-it-as-bad to the having-it-as-good should be encouraged — we can't be down-in-the-mouth all the time. Dylan shows us the way; let's get into agreement with him.

MILES DAVIS is another superb artist who has entered a new phase musically.

His double-disc album illustrates it in greatest depth with scintillating live performance recordings: "Miles Davis at Fillmore" (Columbia G 30038). The four 20- to 30-minute tracks are titled merely "Wednesday Miles, Thursday Miles, Friday Miles and Saturday Miles." Standout members of the present group are Chick Corea on electric piano, Steve Grossman on soprano sax, Keith Jarrett on organ and Jack DeJohnette on drums.

Each record side is quite different from the rest. Categorization is absolutely impossible — Miles' new music encompasses everything: classical, avant-garde, rock, jazz. And never does it fail to swing. Those of us with catholic tastes have given the avant-est garde styles of both classical and jazz music plenty of chance to move us and all too frequently have remained unmoved. A frequent come-back from the pathbreakers is that one must study and understand the new music forwards and backwards in order to get anything out of it.

Well, Miles needs no analysis or essays — just an open ear. It's far out, but it works. Try it.

A FINE ALBUM of chamber works by Aaron Copland, since Stravinsky's recent death our leading living composer, is to be heard on Columbia M 30376. This was previously released on the CBS label, now defunct.

The "Sextet for Clarinet, Piano and String Quartet" is a chamber arrangement of his rather experimental "Short Symphony" of 1933. It is full of unusual rhythmic complexities.

The "Quartet for Piano and Strings" is the more communicative Copland, with familiar open harmonies and that so-called "American" sound. The third work is "Vitebsk," a trio based on Jewish themes, for violin, cello and piano.

Copland himself is the pianist in all these performances, and the string quartet is the Juilliard (who by the way have an excellent new album of the Opus 18 Beethoven String Quartets on Columbia M3 30084).

9 HOUR SALE

SATURDAY ONLY 9 AM TO 6 PM
at YOUNG BROS. of Novato

SPECIAL PRICES FOR MOTHER'S DAY

(Don't read this ad unless you're crazy for bargains!)

IF YOU'D like to pick money off a tree, you'll have a circus at our storewide "Well, that's funny" Sale. Young Bros. just can't give things away at ridiculous prices for very long, so our Sale is for 9 Hours only - Saturday at Young Bros. of Novato.

YOU'LL SAVE 30% to 50% Saturday on a grand assortment of home furnishings, TVs and Appliances at Young Bros. If you can't make it, well - that's funny - because you'll miss the buys of a lifetime Saturday! Shop 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

A NICE young couple wanted a decorator chair but they wanted it in a black, green and white print. We ordered it for them. When it came they refused to buy it. The boss said "That's Funny", That's what they ordered and wanted.
It's a fine long wearing fabric and a very comfortable chair - so now you can have this chair for only $77.00 It was $179.95

IT REMINDED us of a couple of sofas back in the corner of the store that most people wouldn't want in a living room. One of our salesmen said "Nobody wants them". The buyer said, "That's funny". One is covered in a heavy Vectra plaid with loose pillow backs. Another sofa is covered in an orange and green quilted fabric. An individualist with gumption to be different will like one. One was $379.95 NOW $239.95. The other was $299.95 NOW $179.95. Terrific buys for a couple of individualists.

THAT started us going through Young Bros. Furniture stores and our warehouses. Our buyer looked sheepish when we found a Spanish 7 piece set that has stuck with us like glue. It is an oval table with 3 leaves, 4 side chairs and 2 arm chairs in a rich and warm pecan wood. Was $475.00 NOW A MEASLY - $349.95. Another Spanish set with large trestle table with three 12" leaves, 4 side chairs and 2 arm chairs, carved back chairs with green velvet seats and a beautiful china. Original price $775.00 NOW $599.95.

YOU KNOW your taste. Your neighbor knows hers. What you don't want, she's happy to pay. $89.95 for a glass top cocktail table with a beautiful gold iron base that's worth $119.95 . . . or a beautiful tilt down desk from Drexel in a rich pecan wood for ONLY $250.00. Was $500.00 . . . or beautiful decorator chairs with skirt and reversible seat cushions in three colors. Original price $129.95. NOW $65.00

WE WERE selecting recliners to mark down. A woman said, "Is that recliner on sale? I want two." We said, "You can have three. We can't understand why this big, man-size recliner with deep down comfort hasn't sold." She said, "That's funny. It's just what my husband and I want. Sorry, we only need two." She got hers. There's one in black and white tweed with Vinyl trim that was $109.95. Another carload purchase at $75.00. We found some other Vinyl recliners that adjust to 3 positions. These were very relaxing at $89.95. You can rob us of one for $59.95.

IT'S FUNNY how you get attached to a piece of furniture. We've had a sleep-sofa that's been ours too long. It seats three - will sleep two on a wide mattress. Looks smart in a rich brown tweed. It's been hanging around at $249.95. IT'S YOURS FOR $175.00. More old friends are corner groups - 2 boxes - 2 mattresses - 2 coverletts - 2 bolsters and a corner table with Formica top. Three colors to choose from. Each make twin beds, and were $239.95. HAVE A 9 PC. SET FOR ONLY $179.95.

TASTE is funny. We thought a dinette with walnut tone Formica 35 x 47 x 71 table and 8 chairs with green tone on tone Vinyl was a smart 9 pc. set for $199.95. It can tickle your taste buds for ONLY $119.95. Another oddball is a round Kroehler game table only with Formica top. Worth $149.95 NOW $75.00. If it sounds dull spark it with a red swivel bean bag $119.95. NOW $59.95. We have a wild collection of pictures, plaques and mirrors were $19.95 to $179.95. NOW 30% OFF. Lamps that started out as matched pairs are singles and UP TO 40% OFF the usual $39.95 to $99.95.

SOME WOMEN have funny ideas about appliances. They think they should be WHITE. That's why a Philco 15 cubic foot custom deluxe refrigerator worth $319.95 is a super-buy at $259.95 - if you like green or copper. If you won't settle for anything but GOLD we've got a General Electric No-Frost 16 cu. ft. refrigerator-freezer, with bottom freezer that was $359.95. IT'S A DAZZLING BARGAIN AT $288. We think women are funny; but some of our warehouse men are hilarious. Imagine a 11 cu. ft. refrigerator that regularly sells for $199.95 for only $139.95 in green. The Simmons sleep sets they covered up have quilt top mattress and box spring. Each 2 pc. set should have sold for $129.95. FOR $88, A SET is the best buy since hay was 27¢ a bale.

ALMOST FORGOT to mention an RCA stereo console. A husband said, "We'll buy". His wife vetoed him. The man had 'sound' judgment. This set has 50 watts with 100 peak watts and 6 speakers in a rich Spanish oak wood. Well worth $499.95. HAVE IT FOR $349.95. You can listen to it stretched out on a Kroehler sofa and love seat in a rich gold and beige quilted fabric marked down from $520.00 to $399.95 FOR BOTH PIECES.

THERE ARE TOO MANY bargains at Young Bros. to mention here. Come, see them Saturday. You'll find them wearing big tags with small prices. Come prepared to save money as easy as picking greenbacks off a tree. Grab off some bargains this Saturday at Young Bros. You won't think the savings of 30% to 50% are "funny".

TV NOTES

By JACK GAVER

The first new episodes of "Gunsmoke" on CBS next fall will have Pat Hingle playing the Dodge City doctor, filling in for veteran Milburn Stone, who recently underwent heart surgery. Stone is scheduled to return to the series, but he must have a long period of convalescence, and the program's 1971-72 product will be before the cameras well before he is ready.

Danny Thomas, whose return in a weekly series for ABC lasted only for the 1970-71 season, will do two one-hour variety specials for that network during 1971-72.

ABC's 1971 telecasts of National College Athletic Association football games begin Sept. 11 with the Grambling-Morgan State contest in New York City. There will be a total of 36 games, one more than in 1970. Twelve will be telecast nationally, and 24 will be on a regional basis. The opening game and two others will be aired at night.

Better have two sets in the house Sept. 11 because the night football game mentioned above will conflict part of the evening with the NBC telecast of the finals of the Miss America Pageant at Atlantic City. It goes on the air at 10 p.m. A break for football widows — if a second set is available.

FLIP WILSON proudly displays the George Foster Peabody Award voted his comedy-variety show, seen Thursdays at 7:30 p.m. on Channels 3 and 4.

Real Street Gangs For Movie Rumble

By DOUG ANDERSON

Don Murray faced that problem in making the picture "The Cross and the Switchblade" in the Manhattan and Brooklyn slums where the film's real-life hero, Rev. David Wilkerson, does his work.

Already established as an actor and writer, Murray made his debut as a director on this picture with Pat Boone as the star. Murray had written, produced and starred in "The Hoodlum Priest," a similar story, and did not want to seem to be repeating himself.

Wilkerson, who wrote the book on which the picture is based, founded a center for the rehabilitation of street kids. It is this achievement that the picture records.

"WE DIDN'T use actors for the street gangs," Murray said. "We went to the Youth Authority and got real streetgang kids for the two gangs required by the script. Then the problem became one of getting a realistic fight on film without anyone really getting hurt."

He began by pairing off his teen-age warriors, assigning each one a specific opponent to fight. Then he got them all together.

"There are rules for acting, just as for anything else," Murray told them. "In basketball, you can't just tuck the ball under your arm and run down the court. You have to dribble.

"When you fight for the camera, you have to make it look good without hurting the other guy. So if the fellow you're fighting gets hurt, we'll know you're a lousy actor."

THE SYSTEM worked. Except for a couple of accidental falls, there were no injuries and no trouble — until it was time to shoot a scene in which the two gangs join forces to fight helmeted riot police who had them cornered in an alley.

The "policemen" were actors, but their costumes were realistic. When the gangs saw the "cops" closing in on them, their reactions were very convincing.

"Fortunately, their 'weapons' — clubs and bicycle chains — were plastic and they couldn't really injure anybody, but that doesn't mean they didn't hurt," Murray said.

"It was a terrific fight. When I had what I wanted, I called out, 'Okay, fellow, that's great. Cut! . . . Cut!! . . . Cut!!!'

"Eventually, I had to go in there and pull them apart. We got that fight in one take."

REYNOLD ACEVEDO, left, plays Samuel in the first act and Nathan in the second act, while Joel Blum is cast as David in "Psalms of Two Davids," the College of Marin drama department production that opened last night and is being presented again this evening, tomorrow, and Tuesday through Saturday of next week at 8 p.m. in the Fine Arts Building.

Red Skelton says...
"I bought the
BALDWIN WonderChord
just for fun."

Red gets a kick out of playing the WonderChord with just one finger. "I can do more tricks with WonderChord than a monkey can with a yard of rope," is the way he puts it.
You may not become a television star, but you'll be a big hit in your living room.

TRIBUTE TO A MOTHER

With your beautiful silver hair,
With your pink peaches and cream complexion,
With your sparkling brown eyes—
But yet,
Your sweetness and goodness
Overpower even your beauty;
Your, oh, so thoughtful ways,
Your kind tenderness that
Comes from your heart—
I do believe that no one
Was ever as fortunate as I,
To have such a wonderful
Woman for my mother.
